U. S. JUDGE BARS ALL TALMADGE ARBITERS AND EXTENDS RAILROAD TAX HIKE INJUNCTION

Senate Approves Exchange Control Bill, 62 to 13

MEASURE IS SENT INTO CONFERENCE FOR FINAL ACTION

Upper Chamber Turns Attention to Glass Plan for Federal Reserve Aid to Industry as House Rests From Labors.

MART OPPOSITION IS BATTERED DOWN

Representatives Expected To Accede to Changes in Regulatory Program on Liability Limits.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The stock market regulation bill was given a smashing 62-to-13 approval by the senate early this afternoon.

That protracted controversy out of the way, the senate went quickly to work on the Glass bill for federal reserve loans to industry.

While members of the house rested, the senatorial crew had been in session since 10 a. m.

As for the Glass bill, Senator Thomas, democrat, Oklahoma, withdrew his pending silver-help amendment with an announcement should an agreement be reached with the administration on silver legislation, this agreement would be proposed as a substitute for the Dies bill passed by the house.

Opposition to federal control of securities exchanges was relentlessly battered down, to get the administration measure into conference with the house for adjustment of the few differences between the branches.

Nears Hand of F. D. R.

That done, President Roosevelt's signature alone will be needed to make this departure the law of the land.

All other congressional quarrels faded before this final debate, embracing as it did some modification of the contested securities act.

The house, in recess today, was expected to accede to changes which would limit liabilities upon which major objection to the securities act has been based.

In the background for the first time were problems raised by the costly western drouth. A clear, sunlit day showed yesterday's dust haze, that

F. D. R. Will Reveal Housing Plans Monday

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will forward to congress on Monday or Tuesday his proposal to extend federal aid for private financing of a gigantic housing and modernization program.

The heart of the plan would be a $200,000,000 fund to represent a "cushion" for private capital by insuring reconditioning and building loans.

Letters of Dickens To His Wife

A Tragic Record of Love, Disillusionment and Farewell.

(This is the first of a series of articles presenting, in the first publication of this correspondence anywhere, the intimate letters of Charles Dickens to his wife. They begin with the days of the great novelist's courtship of Catherine Hogarth and lead through their marriage and its early harmony and later unhappiness to the separation which meant the tragic parting of their ways.)

The continued attention bestowed on the life of Charles Dickens is commensurate with the lasting popularity of his novels. More than most great writers he lived in the public eye; and the public eye has been as scrutinizing as kindly. But at one period of his contemporary fame it failed in charity, seeing the wrong reason for his separation from his wife. He himself made a public protest against the slanders upon his household, but could not say in print what he wrote in a private letter: "Poor Catherine and I are not made for each other."

This has long been accepted as the explanation of their agreement to differ. Forster in his biography threw some light upon their incompatibility, and the host of Forster's successors have cast their little rays, not always without distortion. The recent death of Sir Henry F. Dickens, K. C., the last surviving child of Charles and Catherine Dickens, has released for publication a mass of correspondence in the British museum which probably says the last word on the related characters of husband and wife.

It tells no secrets; it touches no scandal; and it consists of the letters of the husband alone. By implication, however, it supplies any reader accustomed to reading between the lines with the material for a As he already knows Charles Dickens as well as pen can draw him, the reader can form his own conclusion how far the two images are humanly complementary.

The correspondence falls naturally into three unequal parts. The first part contains the letters written by the young and unknown journalist to the girl he had chosen for wife; the second, domestic communications and travel descriptions by the eminent author; the third, a few brief notes and scraps extorted by common courtesy from a lost husband. When she deposited the original manuscripts in the British museum, Mrs. Perugini (Kate Dickens) left with them the following explanatory statement:

Shortly before my mother's death in 1879, she placed in my hands the letters written to her by my father, before and after their marriage. She wished me to do with them as I might think best, only stipplating that, at some future date, they should be made public. They would show the world, she said, that

REPORT OF LEAGUE TO SCORE NATIONS FOR SALE OF ARMS

Paraguay-Bolivia Warfare Could Have Been Halted in 2 Years, Document To Declare.

GENEVA, May 12.—(AP)—A report understood to express apprehension of ruthless international aerial warfare and criticism of League of Nations members for selling weapons to belligerents was ready for publication tonight by the league's commission which vainly tried to settle the war between Paraguay and Bolivia.

Reliable quarters this afternoon predicted that the document would declare that the two nations were enabled to continue their sanguinary conflict more than two years only because they could purchase arms abroad.

The impression prevailed that the league council, meeting May 14, will be asked by the commission to make firm recommendations to Paraguay and Bolivia with the understanding that if mediation is again refused the council may revive the arms embargo project of 1933 and appeal to all governments to stop such shipments.

Only yesterday Bolivia threatened to bombard Asuncion, the Paraguayan capital, from the air. Today the jungle warfare, which has been in progress for years with thousands of casualties, became even more intense with widespread aerial raids by Paraguayan forces.

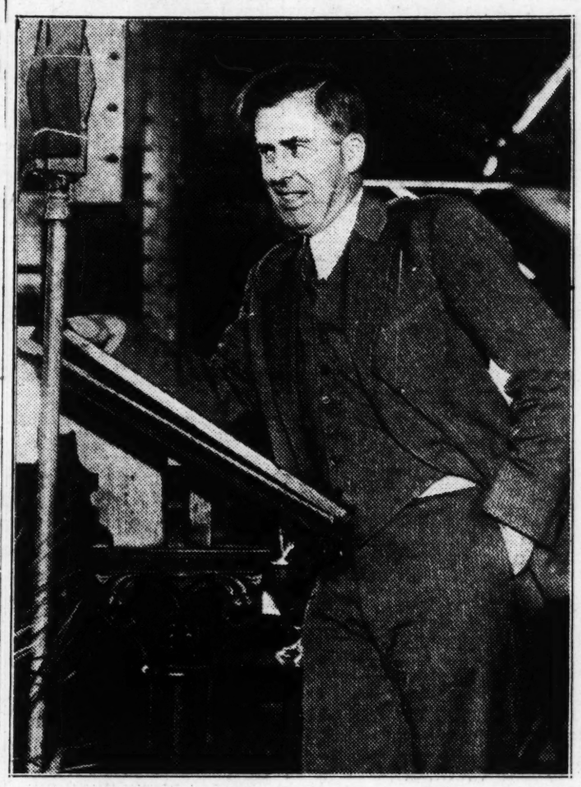

Paraguay earlier had protested against the bombardment of two cities described as non-military and defenseless, and in return Bolivia said Asuncion would be bombed if reports alleging mistreatment of Bolivian prisoners could be confirmed.

League members pointed to a resolution presented by Great Britain and France last year which set forth that an arms ban for Bolivia and Paraguay "might be effective if all states joined in its application."

A reference to the United States was made in the proposal in these words: "We are prepared to give effect to this resolution and to consult with states which are not members of the League, yet whose co-operation is essential.

The commission report follows weeks of effort to effect peace in the Chaco. The group gained an armistice last December but with its termination Paraguay and Bolivia were unable to come to terms and resumed the conflict.

Wallace Tells World To Back Wheat Accord

Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, caught by Turner Hiers, Atlanta photographer, in a characteristic pose, as he spoke at Athens Saturday before the Institute of Public Affairs.

ATHENS, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—The wheat-growing nations of the world today were put on notice by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace that an agreement must be reached unless they wish the United States to go into production on a big scale and battle for the world's markets.

Reviewing the collapse of the London conference which was designed to increase export prices by 10 per cent and aid the farmers of the world, Wallace said he was "exceedingly disappointed" by the failure of the conference and that it was a serious matter for the world, although it was not so serious from the viewpoint of the American farmer.

Unless the conferees can work out an agreement, he said, the United States may give up crop control and compete for outside markets. He gave credit to the agricultural adjustment administration for making it possible for the United States to enforce little acreage reduction in acreage and scatter its wheat throughout the consuming nations.

Hopes for Conference.

"It is to be hoped," he said, "that the world conference can be saved and that other exporting nations will perceive that they have even greater in-

CONTACT IS MADE, GETTLE'S RELEASE REPORTED NEAR

Absolute Secrecy Surrounds Movements Expected To Free California Millionaire.

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP)—A threat that 5,000 law enforcement officers would rake Southern California for the kidnapers of William F. Gettle unless he were returned by midnight was followed tonight by the announcement a contact had been established and negotiations would start "next week."

The two sudden developments left the status of the case somewhat obscure to observers in view of a previous promise by authorities that they would withhold official action until Monday noon pending negotiations by Ernest E. Noon, the family attorney, to purchase the oil millionaire's freedom with a sizeable ransom.

In announcing the contact with the abductors, Noon said they had reported Gettle alive and well; that they wanted $75,000 for him and that instructions for the payment of the ransom money would be delivered to him next week.

Fred C. Kelley, 33, apartment house manager, was held by sheriff's deputies tonight in connection with an asserted attempt to obtain the $75,000 ransom asked for release of Gettle.

Four other persons apprehended with Kelley were released by deputies, who said they had established definitely they were not implicated.

Noon talked with Kelley on the telephone today at the request of the sheriff's homicide squad, and declared he believed Kelley's voice was that of the man who gave him "instructions" on the telephone previously.

Pay-Off Reported.

Whether Noon's report would change the plans of District Attorney Buron Fitts to unleash the army of peace officers was not immediately announced.

Just before the sudden turn in the case became known there had been reports that a pay-off was about to be made to the abductors and that Gettle might be returned forthwith.

Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, Chief of Police James E. Davis and the district attorney conferred. The outcome was the ultimatum to the snatch gang to deliver Gettle or else face the wide manhunt.

It was said orders had gone out for the 5,000 officers, including 1,000 policemen, to mobilize in the morning. A house-to-house search was planned.

The authorities also said there was

ORDER IS WIDENED TO BAR ATTEMPTS AT FIXING LEVIES

Amended Decision, Indicating Little Concern Over State's Defy, Now Restrains Any Arbiter Governor Might Name.

TALMADGE SILENT ON LATEST ACTION

Judge Indicates Order Will Be Renewed From Time to Time Until He Reaches Final Decision.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 12.—Federal Judge William H. Barrett today extended for 10 days his temporary order, issued to prevent further arbitration of the Central of Georgia and Savannah & Atlanta railroad tax arbitrations, which Governor Talmadge has announced he will defy, and widened it to include all the governor may name as arbiters or umpires in the tax cases.

At Athens, where he was spending the day, Governor Talmadge said he had no comment to make. Whether or not the widened scope of the injunction order will prevent the governor from carrying out his threat to proceed with the arbitration of the increased tax assessments of the railroads could not be learned Saturday. It was thought possible, however, that if the governor could obtain arbiters and umpires who were willing to follow him in his contention that the federal court has no jurisdiction in the case, he could make an effort to continue the arbitrations.

Saying there appeared to be "only one question before the court—whether the injunction shall or shall not stand," Judge Barrett indicated little concern over the state's contention that he is without jurisdiction and that the suit was brought prematurely.

Barrett's Decision.

Judge Barrett's decision said:

"It is thereupon ordered and adjudged that the temporary restraining order heretofore issued restraining the defendants, William B. Harrison, comptroller-general; Jud P. Wilhoit and Charles L. Redding is hereby continued in full force and effect until May 22, 1934, and the said temporary restraining order is hereby amplified and amended so that any person or persons who may be appointed by the governor of the state of Georgia arbitrate the tax return and assessment of the petitioner for taxes for the year 1934, and any and all persons in active concert or participating with them or with the defendants, William B. Harrison, comptroller-general; Jud P. Wilhoit and Charles L. Redding, are hereby temporarily restrained and enjoined, until the further order of this court, from arbitrating or assessing said taxes or making any award in reference thereto or from doing any act or thing to change the status quo."

The same language is employed in the order of both railroads except for a change in the names of the arbitrators.

The governor had said new arbiters would be appointed to proceed with the adjustment of the dispute.

State Not Represented.

The state, by the governor's order, took no part in today's hearing. The chief executive, in an official letter to Judge Barrett last week, denied the court had any power to act in the matter, which he said was in effect "a suit against the state of Georgia in its sovereign capacity." The letter said the "governor of Georgia cannot consent that suits may be brought against the state with the disastrous results which would necessarily follow from suits of this kind. The litigation is an outgrowth of Governor Talmadge's campaign for utility rate cuts.

By the governor's order, Comptrol-

LECRAW CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR'S POST

Young Civic Leader First To Formally Announce Entry Against Key.

Roy LeCraw, prominent in Atlanta civic and business circles for the past several years and one of the best-known insurance executives in this section of the country, Saturday formally announced his candidacy for mayor to oppose James L. Key, incumbent.

LeCraw will oppose Key and probably another candidate to be entered by anti-administrationists in the September 26 municipal primary.

The LeCraw entry is the first formal candidacy for the mayoralty seat, although Key will become a candidate to succeed himself. Wiley L. Moore, runner-up four years ago in the contest with Key, and president of the Wofford Oil Company of Georgia, and of the Chamber of Commerce, is being strongly importuned to offer again.

In the event Moore will not consent to run, Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, of the eleventh ward, probably will be the choice of the Key opposition.

Moore has given those seeking to draft him for a coalition of the anti-Key sentiment little encouragement, according to reports, but a definite announcement of Moore's attitude is expected within the next two weeks.

Murphy will not run if Moore will, it was reported Saturday. Murphy has promised a statement within the next few days regarding his candidacy.

Ben T. Huiet, Georgia public service commissioner, announced he would oppose Key several days ago, but later reconsidered and said he would not be a candidate.

Lists Open May 15.

Entry lists for all municipal offices for which nominations will be made in the primary will open formally May 15. Qualifications must be made with Press Winburn, secretary, who has offices on the third floor of the city hall.

Registration and entry lists close July 28.

LeCraw favored another referendum regarding Sunday amusements and also one on repeal of the state bone dry laws in his platform. He also said he favors complete divorce of Atlanta public schools from council in accordance with a move which is already afoot in council and the board of education.

He asserted he is a dry, that he goes to motion picture shows during the week and to church on Sunday, but that if the people vote for liberalization of Sunday amusement laws, he will advocate the changes.

Contending that the people of Atlanta want a change in the mayor, that a younger man and a businessman is demanded for the job, LeCraw promised an "honest, fearless, business administration of city affairs."

LeCraw's Career.

The candidate is 38 years old, the father of five boys and a product of

La Follette Expected To Join 3d Party

MILWAUKEE, May 12.—(AP)—From a source close to the progressive leadership in Wisconsin it was learned today that Senator Robert M. La Follette has about decided to throw off the cloak of republicanism and cast his lot with a third party.

The senator was said to be prepared to seek re-election this fall on a third party platform and to espouse the organization of a new party at a state-wide meeting of progressive leaders at Fond Du Lac next Saturday.

The trend toward organization of a third party was informally approved by Milwaukee progressive leaders who met in executive session last night and elected 21 delegates to the Fond du Lac conference. The delegates include Thomas M. Duncan, former secretary to Governor Philip La Follette, who favors a third party, and Theodore Dammann, secretary of state, who prefers to remain in the republican party.

PAVING DELAYED, 'CADE POSTPONED

Road Board's Letter to Sponsors Says Work To Be Complete Sept. 1.

Unavoidable delay in completion of the Madison-Eatonton highway paving has compelled postponement of the great Four Capitals motorcade, which was to have been held at the end of June, under the sponsorship of The Savannah Morning News and The Constitution.

Notification of the situation was made Friday in a letter from the state highway board, signed by Chairman W. E. Wilburn.

"Due to conditions over which we have no control," the letter stated, "the paving of the Madison-Eatonton link of the Four Capitals highway cannot be completed before September 1 and we must ask you to postpone the great motorcade between Atlanta-Milledgeville-Louisville and Sa-

RUN DOWN BY CAR, ATLANTAN KILLED

J. W. Evers, Seeking Aid After Collision, Is Mistaken for Bandit.

Injuries he received on the Lindale-Cedartown highway when a motorist ran him down with an automobile, apparently thinking he was a holdup man, proved fatal Saturday afternoon to J. W. Evers, Atlanta salesman, who resided at 255 Rawson street.

Mr. Evers, who was connected with a scales company as salesman and repair man, died at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon in a Rome hospital.

He was hurt Friday night when he was run over as he sought to stop a motorist on the highway a few minutes after his own automobile had figured in a collision with a Cedartown negro undertaker's machine.

Witnesses said Mr. Evers saw the approaching car and ran toward it but the driver, evidently thought he was a robber and drove over the Atlanta man. Neither Mr. Evers nor the undertaker was hurt in the collision of their cars.

Mr. Evers is survived by a wife and a son, John Evers, who is eight years of age. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Well-Known Athenian Drops Dead on Street

Seaborn J. Moss, 60 years of age, a widely-known resident of Athens, died Saturday night while being rushed to Grady hospital after he had collapsed on the sidewalk near Pryor and Houston streets.

Witnesses said that Mr. Moss was walking along the street and suddenly dropped to the pavement. An ambulance was summoned, but when the hospital was reached physicians there said the man was dead.

Mr. Moss was a member of the Masonic lodge, the Shrine, and the Kiwanis Club.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by the funeral establishment of Awtry & Lowndes, where an inquest will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Moss is survived by his wife; a son, S. J. Moss Jr., of Athens; three daughters, Miss Tinsley Moss and Miss Nell Moss, of Decatur, and Mrs. Joe E. Brown, of Orlando, Fla.; three brothers, V. J. Moss, Jasper, Ga.; J. H. Moss, LaGrange, Ga., and Phillip Moss, of White Plains, Ga.; two sisters, Miss Evelyn Moss, of White Plains, Ga., and Mrs. Annie Moore, of Sardis, Ga.

Businessman—Traffic Cop Bow to Spirit of Mother's Day

By EDWARD F. FLANNERY.

Two Atlanta men during the monotonous routine of their lives, Saturday, exemplified the true spirit underlying this day—the day for mothers—the living and the dead.

A nation today pays a sincere homage to its mothers. Always untold will be the varied forms of tribute millions of individuals will offer.

The millionaire son in his mansion in an exclusive suburb on Long Island will make his pretentious display, and a lonely, former CWA worker, dependent upon the government for his next meal, will do his very best. From the very highest to the very lowest mothers, today, will be queens—for the day, at least.

But—

Two unpretentious Atlanta sons, in the monotonous routine of their lives, without thought of display, enacted a little drama during the early hours Saturday—a little drama, exemplifying the spirit of a nation, and that spirit is recorded here:

Names of the two men cannot be divulged, because—jobs are involved.

One is employed as a manager of a store, an establishment of importance in a great group of such.

The other is—a very "hard-boiled motorcycle cop."

Neither was aware, at the time, that this might appear.

At a few minutes after 8 o'clock Saturday morning, the young manager of the Atlanta store drove his automobile along a street at a terrific rate of speed.

Racing Past School.

From a side street dashed a motorcycle, ridden by the "hard-boiled cop." He turned an instrument on his vehicle. In a block he checked the speed of the man ahead at 55 miles an hour—in the residential district, and past a schoolhouse.

The officer overtook the speeding driver, forced him to the curb. That ended the spectacular action in this

RED CROSS SEEKS 15,000 MEMBERS

Atlantans Urged to Join Organization During Roll Call Now On.

Memberships for 1934 are sought by the American Red Cross, which extends to every person an invitation to join, during the period of Roll Call, May 12 to 19. Through pulpit and press, on the air and by personal contact, the opportunity to share in the work of organized relief is offered to all men and women in Atlanta.

In making the announcement of plans, Julian V. Boehm, chairman of the Roll Call, called for city-wide cooperation in attaining the goal of 15,000 members.

"The annual canvass, like most Red Cross activities, is a volunteer responsibility," said Mr. Boehm. "Roll Call workers are themselves members who are giving in addition a great deal of time and personal effort to the campaign. When they call, please be ready for them so that a second call will be unnecessary and the canvass may be short and thorough. It is inevitable that some persons will be missed. These we urge to bring or send their membership dues to Roll Call headquarters, Loew's Grand building, of their own accord—to volunteer their support in true Red Cross spirit.

"We are placing in strategic positions various reminders that Roll Call time is at hand—the poster with its sympolic figure pleading for the relief of those in need; the window card with its massing of Red Cross colors, "The American Red Cross Carries On." Every new member receives a Red Cross button. From the windows of our homes will be proudly displayed a sticker to which they are entitled, bearing a large red cross and the words "Every member of this family has joined!"

Mr. Boehm pointed out that all except 50 cents of each membership fee goes for local Red Cross activities. Memberships are designated as follows: Annual, $1; contributing, $5; sustaining, $10, and supporting, $25.

In urging enrollment, Red Cross officials called attention to the immensity of Red Cross operations during the last three years. "The economic emergency has constituted a steady drain upon our resources," stated Mr. Boehm. "Hundreds of thousands of citizens who ordinarily would be found supporting the Red Cross in the annual Roll Call and by special contributions in time of disaster, have themselves been among the beneficiaries of the Red Cross service.

"The Red Cross has cheerfully accepted every duty entrusted it by community and nation. It accepted from the government 85,000,000 bushels of wheat for processing and distribution in the form of flour. It took upon itself a similar assignment in the distribution of 844,000 bales of cotton. Thousands of women gathered in chapter production groups, as during the world war, for the making of clothing for the needy. During the year 2,834 chapters representing thousands of communities in every state co-operated in unemployment relief.

More than 6,600,000 members of the Junior Red Cross in the schools added to the relief achievements. The Red Cross public health nurses and teachers of home hygiene took advantage of their opportunity to help in the emergency situation. Hundreds of thousands of men volunteers, many of them civic leaders, served in executive assignments, in relief activities and in 96 disasters in continental United States. The first aid and life-saving service continued its humanitarian program of safety education on land and in water.

"Never in more than 52 years of service by the American Red Cross have human needs been more acute, the Red Cross job heavier or the call for memberships more urgent. I know that the people of Atlanta will respond generously.

Mayor's Proclamation.

The Red Cross roll call became official for Atlanta when Mayor James L. Key issued the following proclamation:

"Every citizen has a place in the American Red Cross. Anyone blessed with an income naturally will wish to respond instantly to the invitation to join during the annual roll call, May 12-19.

"As mayor of Atlanta, I have seen from a special point of vantage the service performed this past year by the Red Cross on behalf of needy individuals and families of this community. The local chapter has demonstrated fine efficiency in distributing food, clothing, and other forms of relief—an efficiency characteristic of the Red Cross everywhere. The unemployed, the ex-service men, the ill, the victims of disaster, as well as all of us to whom fortune has been comparatively kind, have manifold reasons to be grateful to a Red Cross that can be at once so business-like and so sympathetic.

"Vast surpluses of government wheat and cotton have been released through Red Cross channels for the feeding and clothing of our people. Great armies of women volunteers have made needles fly and sewing machines hum in chapter workrooms throughout the land. In tornado, flood and earthquake the Red Cross, as always, has been the agency of rescue and rehabilitation. In the fields of public health, nursing, home care of the sick, life-saving, first aid and Junior Red Cross, this national relief agency has continued its fine traditions of service to humanity.

"Today's needs are acute. Tomorrow's needs may be as great, or greater. We must keep our Red Cross prepared. We need the Red Cross all the time—and the Red Cross certainly needs us now.

"As mayor of Atlanta, I take this occasion to remind our citizens that the enlistment period is at hand. I designate the period from May 12-19, inclusive, as a period for testifying to our faith and confidence in the Red Cross. Join me—join your neighbor—in membership! Let's make this year's roll call the most successful we have ever held."

SPECIAL RAIL FARES FOR U. C. V. REUNION

Confederate veterans attending the forty-fourth annual reunion of the U. C. V., to be held in Chattanooga on June 6, 7 and 8, will be able to travel for one cent a mile, to and from the Tennessee city, under special rates made for the event by the railroads. This will make the round-trip rate from Atlanta to Chattanooga $2.75.

Other organizations attending the reunion have been granted a special rate of the round trip for a regular one-way fare, which is $4.12. The tickets are good for 30 days, with stop-over privileges.

BATES TO DESCRIBE OFFER TO STUDENT

F. E. Bates, of Atlanta lodge No. 78, B. P. O. Elks, will speak over radio station WSB at 12:15 o'clock today in behalf of a $1,000 award to be made by the Elk National Foundation to the most valuable student in the graduating class of a high school, preparatory school or college in the United States.

"We feel that there is some student in Atlanta who is entitled to this prize," Bates said Saturday, "and the local lodge will gladly sponsor the application of any student who desires to enter the national competition."

HERRERA HUNT CENTERS IN SEABOARD DISTRICTS

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The search for General Alberto Herrera, against whom a federal warrant for murder was issued last night, turned today to neighboring districts of the Atlantic seaboard.

The iron-fisted secretary of war in the cabinet of President Gerardo Machado and provisional president of Cuba for 12 hours after the fall of his chief, was sought on a warrant issued by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter at the request of Pablo Suarez, Cuban consul general.

Highest Cuban circles expressed the belief today that General Herrera had deserted New York city for a nearby refuge. The police five-state teletype alarm, serving the widespread New York metropolitan district, asked Herrera's capture on sight.

ROAD BOARD AUDIT SHOWS DECREASES

Receipts and Expenditures of Department Far Below Previous Years.

The state highway department received a total of $12,240,011 and expended $11,264,376 in 1933, an audit completed and reported to Governor Talmadge Saturday by State Auditor Tom Wisdom revealed.

The receipts and expenditures were far below those of 1932 when $15,862,777 was received and $15,479,094 was spent and in 1932 when $21,344,746 was received and $20,776,450 expended.

The audit revealed how Governor Talmadge is carrying out his pledge to reduce overhead in the department as expenses for administration were only $353,941 last year as compared with $521,867 in 1932 and $627,177 in 1931. It also showed that an even greater saving has been made in the cost of surveys as this item cost only $82,096 last year as compared with $220,659 in 1931.

The audit also showed that $3,252 was expended for attorney fees in the defense of J. J. Mangham, whose ouster was sought by Captain J. W. Barnett, removed chairman of the board. Mangham's resignation was asked for and obtained before the case was finally adjudicated. Of this sum $1,002 went to the firm of Harold Hirsch and Marion Smith, $1,000 to Spalding, MacDougald & Sibley, $500 to Howell, Heyman & Bolding, $500 to Colonel W. S. Mann, of McRae, and $250 to Price Edwards, of Dallas.

The 1933 income was obtained through receipts of $8,023,589 from the fuel oil and gasoline tax, $3,987,965 from federal aid, $204,558 from county aid, $15,647 from city and railroad aid and $8,250 from miscellaneous sources.

Expenditures showed that in addition to the $253,941 spent for administration, $9,831,674 was spent for construction and $1,078,760 for maintenance. The outlay for maintenance was far below that of 1932 when $2,123,587 was expended on this item and that of 1931 when the maintenance cost was $2,522,861. The income for maintenance was greatly decreased because under the law the funds derived from the sale of motor vehicle tags are allocated for this purpose and they have been cut by the governor's reduction of the tag prices.

The following table shows the comparative expenditures for 1933 and 1932:

BETTER SOCIAL ORDER AIM OF F. D. R.--COX

Former Democratic Standard Bearer Lauds Recovery Program.

DAYTON, Ohio, May 12.—(AP)—Addressing some 1,500 persons at a Jefferson banquet here tonight, former Governor James M. Cox asserted that the one purpose of President Roosevelt's new deal "is to restore social order and social order is dependent upon an orderly industry."

"If society is prostrate then what instrument more logically and naturally can be invoked than government itself? It is the instrument of society, the thing created to act for the whole."

Cox, the man who carried the democratic banner in the presidential campaign of 1920, and who more recently was a delegate to the world economic conference in London, likened the cost of recovery to the priming of a pump to get results.

"We hear it said," he declared, "that the cost of recovery is too great, that the accumulating debt will wreck us. We had a large debt to start with and it could only be paid by restoring prosperity. . . . It was necessary to take of our reserves and pour waters of our resources into the pump in order that things might be set going again."

Asserting he did not speak for the president, the nationally known democratic leader said, "I am certain in my own conviction that when business, which was sick, and sick unto death, is ready to leave the hospital and keep itself in health it will find a wide open door. I recur to that figure of speech in which I stated that the president in his every measure was simply driving down stakes for a mooring. They are but the beginning.

"Legislative and executive measures born in critical times of emergency will be refined and changed as social needs suggest."

CUMBERLAND, R. I.—(UP)—Billy, Harry, Ted, Roy and Archie Sherman, brothers, all are distance runners. Harry and Billy ran in the recent Boston A. A. marathon, finishing 18th and 35th, respectively.

SLAMS AND OVERCALLS.

See where Hoke Simpson was third at Mrs. Calhoun's Tuesday evening tournament. Have not seen much of Hoke in competition since over a year ago when he and Sam Maddox were the juvenile star team of the city. They did well together. Hoke seems to have dropped out of bridge and turned his attention to other subjects. Sambo, however, has continued his journey. Since the breaking up of the Simpson-Maddox combination Sambo's favorite partners are Aline Phelan and Walter Hecht.

Speaking of Hecht recalls most pleasantly to mind that delightful supper and tournament he gave at the charming home of his sister, Miss Margaret Hecht, Thursday evening. Walter introduced a novelty in holding a handicap tournament. Each player was graded according to what the host though of his ability. Some played from scratch, others were given points in ratio to their ability. The draw was made and those drawn together were allotted points equal to their combined handicaps.

The winners were Mrs. C. E. Williamson and Dr. Maurice Clark who had a near 65 per cent game. This was a most appropriate score as it market the exact age in years (not in devilment) of Walter. The tournament was given on his birthday.

All present will long remember the occasion with much pleasure and your commentator received fresh information as to candidates for his all-Atlanta feminine eating team-of-four. Some time, probably at an early date, I am going to announce that team. At present two selected players are Pearl Williamson and Aline Phelan. The other two are practically chosen but I want to see them in action on one more occasion. Walter's party gave me a line on who to nominate as captain.

The race was between Pearl and Aline and the result was never in doubt after the third helping. In the parlance of the turf, Aline Phelan took the lead in the back stretch, increased her advantage rounding the far turn and won well in hand. Pearl made a credible showing, however, and is assured a place on the team. Walter announced that he refused to have any further trials for the team at his house.

City Championship Nears.

On Thursday evening of this week the first session of the qualifying round in the 1934 city championship starts at the Cavendish Club. Just to refresh your memory and to settle any questions that might linger in your mind concerning the coming event let me state in tabloid form the situation.

Under the sponsorship of the United States Bridge Association, the Cavendish Club is going to hold both the pair and team-of-four championship of Atlanta.

Any pair which qualifies for the pair championship can invite another pair, whether qualifiers or not, to play as teammates in the team-of-four championship.

The pair championship will be held in the following manner. There will be two sessions for each section in the qualifying round. There will be two sections and the committee will seed the players so that each section will be of as near equal strength as it is humanly possible to make it.

The entry list will close Wednesday afternoon at 6 o'clock and the make-up of the sections will be announced in this column on Thursday morning. Section A will play its two sessions on Thursday evening and Saturday afternoon. Section B will play on Friday evening and Saturday evening. The number of pairs which qualify will probably be either 14 or 16 depending upon the number which enter. The exact number of qualifiers will be announced before play starts Thursday evening.

The final round, consisting of three sessions, will be played Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening of the following week. The team-of-four championship will be held in three sessions, Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening of the week following the final in the pair event.

Handsome trophies will be given to the winners in all events and in addition the United States Bridge Association will give medals recognizing the winners as the city champions.

This tournament is the first step in a series of tournaments sponsored by this association which has as its goal the sending, as the association's guests, to New York of the winning team in the regional team-of-four championship. The regional is composed of the winning teams in the state tournaments of the following states: Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Tennessee and Florida. It is likely that Atlanta will be awarded the state tournament and it is highly probable that the regional will also be held here.

The entrance fee for the city championship is $1 for the qualifying rounds and $1.50 additional to play in the three sessions of the championship. Make your reservations before Wednesday evening to the Cavendish Club, phone Hemlock 2374.

Jacksonville's Challenge Accepted.

About a week ago a foursome of expert contract players from Jacksonville challenged an Atlanta quartet through Charlie May. The latter has accepted the challenge and while not playing himself will act as captain of the Atlanta team. The terms of the match, which will be played this weekend at the Cavendish Club, call for two sessions. Board of match will be the medium of scoring. It is probable that 32 boards will be played at each session.

No regulations have been made as to whether or not kibitzers will be allowed. This, and the make-up of the Atlanta team will be announced in this column in Thursday's paper. It is highly probable that unless objection is made by the Jacksonville players kibitzers will be allowed. It should prove a highly enjoyable and exciting encounter.

Answers to the Lead Problem.

In last Thursday's column I published the bidding on a hand and also four hands which you, as defender hold. You were asked to give the best three opening leads from each hand in order of their rank. Below are given the hands and the answers which I am indebted for to Sam Fry Jr., in his interesting column of the May Bridge World.

North and South are vulnerable. The bidding has proceeded:

North	South
1 N T	2 N T
3 N T	Pass

East is on lead against the three-n trump contract. Four different. East hands are given. Opposite each one of them three different leads are suggested. Next to each lead write either 1, 2 or 3, thereby ranking the three leads in your order of preference. Put 1 opposite the best lead, 2 opposite the next best and 3 opposite the worst.

"Number 1 is self-explanatory.

"In number 2 the three-card honor sequence in hearts is unquestionably the soundest lead. It is a safe lead and has very strong attacking possibilities. It is to be preferred to the fourth-best diamond, which, of course, is a better lead than the diamond queen with nothing under the knave except the six.

"In number 3 the spade suit should unquestionably be opened, particularly with one sure entry and another possible one. Since the suit is five cards in length and the nine is under the king-queen, the king should be preferred. The fourth-best spade is the second-best lead and the queen of clubs is the third best by the process of elimination.

"In number 4 the waiting lead of the diamond 9 should be preferred with a very weak hand containing a maximum of one card of re-entry. The fourth-best heart away from the nine-spot is better than the fourth-best spade because of the tenace holding in the spade suit. It is rather hopeless to lead away from the only possible trick that your hand contains when you hold only four cards of that suit. The heart lead of course is safer than the spade but not as good as the waiting lead of the nine of diamonds."

Medical School FOUR YEARS

The four years of Medical School required for the future Doctor are divided approximately as follows: ¶First Year--He must begin to master the fundamental science of the human body, in all its relations, as it is found in health; such as Embryology, (study of the development of the human being); Physiology, (study of the function of all organs in a state of health); Anatomy, (structure of the human body in all details in a state of health); Histology, (microscopic study of various organs of the body in a state of health). ¶Second Year--A continuation in an intensified form, of the above studies. In addition, the student begins to peep over into the great field of the human body as affected by various diseases--such as Pathology, (study of the effect of diseases on various organs); Diagnosis, (comparison of the diseased organ to the healthy). ¶Third Year--Here the student, always under a trained instructor, begins to apply the knowledge he has acquired in the preceding two years, by meeting the patients. He begins the actual clinical practice of making a diagnosis and studying the treatment of all forms of diseases. This is all he does, but he works from nine to twelve hours a day, six days a week for thirty-six weeks during this third year. ¶Fourth Year--A continuation of the third year in a greatly intensified form. In addition, more training in the fundamentals of rational treatment, based upon a preceding careful examination and diagnosis. During this year the student is required to be responsible for twenty or more expectant mothers and attend each during delivery, under the watchful eye of a specialist. ¶After successfully completing these four years, then he is ready to try to graduate. Medical Schools, the laws of the State, Medical Associations, individual physicians and scientists are all constantly working together to prepare your Doctor to be competent and thorough.

BILL BARS U. S. COURTS IN RATE ORDER CASES

Text of Johnson Bill, Closing Federal Courts to Utilities Given in Full.

Because of the wide interest in the matter in Georgia, accentuated by the controversies between utilities and the public service commission over rate schedules, The Constitution publishes in full herewith the recently approved Johnson bill, which, when finally enacted, will close the federal district courts to utilities seeking to enjoin rate orders of state utility commissions.

The bill is now before President Roosevelt for his signature. It follows:

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that the first paragraph of Section 24 of the judicial code, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: 'Notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, no district court shall have jurisdiction of any suit to enjoin, suspend or restrain the enforcement, operation or execution of any order of an administrative board or commission of a state or rate-making agencies of municipalities and other political subdivisions, or to enjoin, suspend or restrain any action in compliance with any such order where jurisdiction is based solely on the ground of diversity of citizenship, or the repugnance of such order to the constitution of the United States, where such order (1) affects rates chargeable by a public utility, (2) does not interfert with interstate commerce and (3) has been made after reasonable notice and hearing and where a plain, speedy and efficient remedy may be had at law or in equity in the courts of such state.'"

'WAY DOWN HERE IN THE LAND OF COTTON

Way down here in Dixie, Cotton Week comes closer home than a fleeting national gesture. It's a personal, permanent matter to us Southerners whose lives and fortunes are inextricably bound up with this staple. As cotton goes, so goes the South and so also goes the nation. The cotton code was the first of the National Recovery Codes to be signed. Cotton spindles were the first of the recovery machinery to be put in motion. When the code was signed on May 17, 1933, cotton was selling at 8.70 cents; today it hovers around 11.45. So what? So this. The more cotton we wear and the more cotton we buy the swifter and the sounder will be the economic recovery of the South. Wear cotton because it's tubbable; wear Cotton because it's smart; wear Cotton because it's Patriotic!

CITY JUDGES' ELECTION FAVORED BY BENTLEY

Platform Announced by Candidate for Luther Still's Seat in Legislature.

W. R. Bentley, attorney, opposing R. L. Ramsey for the Fulton county legislative post now held by Luther Still, who is not a candidate for re-election, Saturday issued a statement outlining his program and saying he entered the contest at the solicitation of a large number of friends.

Excerpts from the statement follow:

I was born, raised and educated in Fulton county, Georgia. I am an attorney and have been practicing law in Fulton county since my admission to the Georgia bar. I was associated with my brother, Ernest G. Bentley, in the practice of law before his death and as an attorney I feel that I am qualified to represent the people in the law-making department of the state.

I was not placed in this race by any faction whatsoever and if elected will be able to vote conscientiously and constructively on any bill coming before the house.

I am whole-heartily in favor of the election of the judges of the municipal court of Atlanta by the popular vote of the people of Fulton county.

I believe that the general real estate tax in this state should be drastically reduced and will sponsor and lend my effort to this end.

I believe that the small home owner in this state should be protected by a tax exemption on his home in the amount of $1,000 to $2,000, thereby allowing a home owner the privilege of enjoying a home without the burden of excess taxation by the city, state and county.

I believe in a liberalization of the Georgia Workmen's Compensation act and believe that said act should be promptly amended to increase the maximum compensation payable to a person injured while in line of his duty to $30 per week and the minimum compensation to $15 per week and to increase the amount of compensation payable to at lease $6,000. If this act is thus amended the working man can be assured if he is injured while in line of duty, that he will not have to depend on the maximum of $15 per week and the minimum of $4 per week compensation as is now the law in the state of Georgia under the original act passed August 17, 1920, and amended August 16, 1922, and will have a fair living wage while he is recuperating from his injuries, without being forced on public or private charity.

M'LARAN STATEMENT OUTLINES PLATFORM

Candidate for Legislature Lists Issues for Which He Will Stand.

Expressing gratification at the encouragement given his candidacy, Will H. McLaran, running to succeed William H. Hartsfield, as a Fulton representative in the general assembly, Saturday issued the following statement:

The principles upon which I am basing my campaign are: The enactment of a law providing for the election of municipal court and juvenile court judges by the people; the enactment of a law providing for the fixing of the salaries of the superior court judges by statute in lieu of the rule which now obtains of fixing them by the county commissioners.

I favor the whole-hearted support of the public school system with adequate appropriations for maintenance. The education of children is the most important obligation devolving upon us, and every child should have an equal opportunity for an education, and until other full and complete provisions are made, I favor the diversion of such idle funds as will be necessary for the payment of all school teachers and for other necessary school purposes.

There must be a change in our tax laws. Real estate is carrying too heavy a load, and especially should the small home-owner be relieved. Intangible assets should come in for their just share of the tax burden, and I will support and vote for any bill designed to that end.

In connection with the matter of taxation, I believe in efficient government, carefully and economically administered, and will support and vote for every proposed measure seeking relief from high taxation.

The streets and highways having become unsafe through the careless operation of motor vehicles, I favor a law licensing all operators of motor cars, not as a source of revenue, but wholly in the interest of safety.

I favor the prompt payment of the pensions for our Confederate soldiers and their widows, and I will support any measure that will accomplish same.

GIRL, 19, FIGHTING BODILY FORMATION OF SHELL OF STONE

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP)—The spectre of a slow, though painless, death from calcinosis, which, if unchecked, ultimately will encase her limbs and body in a stony shell, like the shards of a beetle, hovers over 19-year-old Gertrude von Ravensberg.

Staff doctors of the Los Angeles county general hospital, who are treating the girl, said today that in the few cases recorded the disease has been fatal in about 10 years.

"Death follows the hardening of the chest wall, which prevents breathing," one explained.

To all appearances, Miss von Ravensberg is the picture of health, except for two large and several smaller shell-like formations on each of her legs.

"They are not painful," she said. "Except when the edges are pushed against the encircling soft tissues, by pressure of the fingers or by bending over.

"I can walk, yes, but I want to climb mountains, take long hikes; I want to dance and run and jump like any other human being."

Ossified spots appeared on her legs about three years ago. They gradually spread and for a year she was bedridden.

For the last year and a half, Miss von Ravensberg has been able to stand and walk. The spots have not diminished in size, but on the other hand the disease has not spread greatly during the last year and physicians have hopes that the young woman ultimately may recover.

Doctors explained that calcinosis does not affect the muscles, but only the surface tissue, underneath the skin.

MAIL PLANE WILL SEEK CROSS-NATION RECORD

LOS ANGELES, May 12.—(AP)—Planning to land their first mail cargo since returning to the mail-flying business in Newark, N. J., within 12 hours, T. W. A., Inc., will send a new speed plane out in the morning from Grand Central airport.

Reports that Colonel and Mrs. Charles Lindbergh were to fly east in the new ship were denied by T. W. A. officials here. They said the plane is for mail-carrying only.

WALLACE WARNS WHEAT COUNTRIES TO SUPPORT PACT

terest in the salvation than we have in the United States."

With the mechanism of the AAA, the secretary added, it would be possible for the United States to meet with its surplus wheat, any kind of competition that might be established by other nations and at the same time aid the co-operating growers to get comparative prices for the portion of the crop domestically consumed.

"I trust that the other exporting wheat nations will see the danger," he said, and help the United States to restore the agreement to a working basis.

Here to address the University of Georgia institute of public affairs, Secretary Wallace said the drouth in the middle west was alarming to the people of that area but in no way threatened a national food shortage.

He said the wheat carry-over this year was double the normal amount and there was no likelihood of producing less than the American people will consume.

Protect Farmer.

It illustrated, he added, the fact that the United States must give more thought to protecting its farmers in time of overproduction and the consumers in times when drouth and other disasters reduce the supply.

Speaking before the institute, Wallace advocated a tariff bargaining policy that would protect the people as a whole against small, inefficiently conducted businesses that maintain powerful lobbies that know how to "tip-toe around Washington."

He said these inefficient industries apparently had more power with congress and the tariff commission than the people, and that while there were some protests of too much government control of business he believed that in the past there had been too much business control of government.

"When inefficient industry is allowed to expand under high tariffs, it is doing so at the cost of the entire people.

"These inefficient industries are equipped with lobbyists, skilled lawyers and representatives. . . . They might be told, 'You can't expand any further at the cost of all of the people.'"

Cotton Control.

Running to control, he said no group of people anywhere in the world had been able to produce cotton as intelligently as the people of the south and that he did not expect any expanded production in other countries unless the south decided to reduce the amount it sends to foreign markets.

"Regimentation," he said, would be the cry of republican candidates for congress this fall in the northern and eastern states, but that the present farm campaign had been true Jeffersonian democracy since township and county meetings had been used as a clearing house where the will of the people could be determined.

He predicted that the Bankhead cotton control bill would be assailed tremendously by the republicans of the north and that it did "partake of the nature of compulsion," but that It had been intended for a life of only two years and was passed after 95 per cent of the southern farmers indicated they wanted it in an emergency.

"I think the farmers are going to hold to the powers of the AAA until they get out of this mess."

winds drove coastward from the interior, had moved on.

Government officials and members of congress studied what could be done to alleviate distress from the crop-destroying dryness. A help from the weather was predicted, in the form of week-end rain for some affected territory.

Drouth Relief.

Members of the house from eight of the drouth states agreed to meet Monday to consider what should be done in the way of helping their constituents. Plans call for a committee to take the matter up with the administration.

Other developments were scarce. For one, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation said 8,393 banks with deposits of $500,000 or less, and representing 60 per cent of all banks in the corporation, have their deposits insured 70 per cent.

The statement was aimed to support its contention that the temporary fund which insures all deposits to the extent of $2,500 is adequate and should be continued for a year, instead of having a permanent fund affecting large deposits as well, take effect on July 1.

RITCHIE WILL SEEK GOVERNORSHIP AGAIN

BALTIMORE, May 12.—(AP)—Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, who has served 15 years as chief executive of his state, today announced his candidacy for the democratic nomination for a fifth term.

"There are three roads ahead," Ritchie declared in announcing his decision to be a candidate in the September primary. "First, I can retire from public life. Frankly, I don't want to do this. Secondly, I can run for the United States senate. Thirdly, I can run for governor again.

"It so happens that I had rather be governor of Maryland than hold any office within the gift of the people of the state."

Governor Ritchie was a candidate for the democratic nomination for president at the 1932 Chicago convention, where President Roosevelt was nominated.

In running for renomination, Ritchie said he did so against the advice of some of his political friends who urged him to seek the senate seat now held by Phillips Lee Goldsborough, republican.

OFFICES FOR PITTMAN OPEN HERE THIS WEEK

Candidate for Governor To Establish Headquarters Here; Others Quiet.

The state political campaign will show its first sign of life this week when Judge Claude C. Pittman, of Cartersville, one of Governor Eugene Talmadge's two opponents, opens his campaign headquarters in the Piedmont hotel here.

The headquarters will be in charge of the candiate's brother, Carter Pittman, of Dalton, and the opening will be the signal for mapping plans for the judge's formal drive which is scheduled to begin with his opening address at Calhoun in Gordon county on May 26.

As Judge Pittman laid plans for his early start, Governor Talmadge and Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, of Atlanta, the third entry, were quiet about their plans. It was learned definitely Saturday that the governor will not "open up" until after July 4 and there has been no indication given as to just how long or how vigorous a campaign Mr. Gilliam plans.

The convention of the Georgia Association of County Commissioners at Macon this week also is expected to be marked with much political activity, although as far as could be learned Saturday none of the gubernatorial candidates will attend. Candidates for other offices, however, are expected to attend in abundance and make an effort to obtain the support of the various commissioners, who all are potent political factors in their respective counties.

Governor Talmadge is planning an active week which doubtless will have some bearing on the campaign, although it is not intended as political activity. He will speak to a group of church people at Macon today and on Thursday will lead a celebration commemorating the opening of the new cross-state highway. These ceremonies are planned at Hinesville. The governor will go to his farm at McRae Wednesday afternoon and proceed to Hinesville the following morning, stopping for a brief speech at Jesup en route. He will return to Atlanta immediately after the Hinesville speech. Judge Max L. McRae, of the highway board, and other high state officials are expected at the Hinesville ceremony.

Practically all candidates for state-house officers are actively campaigning although none have yet announced any speaking dates.

JUDGE PITTMAN TO SPEAK AT WADLEY

WADLEY, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Judge Claude Pittman, of Cartersville, candidate for governor of Georgia, will deliver the baccalaureate address at the Wadley High school graduation exercises Monday evening, June 4.

FIVE SEEK HOUSE POSTS IN BALDWIN COUNTY

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 12. Baldwin county will have the most active political season in years this summer when eight candidates will wage vigorous campaigns for places open in this county. Dr. O. F. Moran, county commissioner, will run for re-election and will be opposed by Ollie Etheridge and J. E. Weaver, Baldwin county farmers.

Captain J. H. Ennis and Marion Allen, legislators, both have offered for re-election, and three others, Rev. J. F. McCluney, and C. B. McCullar and R. L. Carr, attorneys, are also running for the two legislative posts in this county.

Carlyle A. Giles, Milledgeville attorney and solicitor of the county court since 1922, is running for judge of the Ocmulgee circuit against Judge James B. Park, of Greensboro. Giles is a native of Hancock county, but has been living in Milledgeville since 1918, following his graduation from Mercer University.

EPTING ANNOUNCES PLATFORM IN CLARKE

ATHENS, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Eugene A. Epting, attorney, has announced his candidacy for re-election to the house on a platform opposing a flat $3 rate for automobile tags and favoring modification of the state prohibition law, a sales tax, temporary diversion of highway funds, and regulation of public utility rates and taxation.

His announcement said "I align myself with no candidate for governor" and "if you desire to be represented by a mere puppet in the hands of any governor, I cannot serve in such capacity."

Epting was among the leaders of the group which favored a special session to legalize 3.2 beer last summer. He said he opposed the flat rate of $3 for automobile and truck licenses but voted in the last session for a graduated scale of fees with a $3 minimum.

"I shall oppose any attempt to collect the difference which the people might be compelled to pay for the years 1933 and 1934 but I do favor a more equitable graduated scale of fees for the future," his announcement said.

Ted Middlebrooks and Jacob Brandt Joel, attorneys, also have announced they will be candidates for the general assembly.

D. G. BLAND SEEKS RE-ELECTION IN STEWART

LUMPKIN, Ga., May 12.—Hon. D. G. Bland, of Lumpkin, announced himself a candidate for re-election to the Georgia legislature. Mr. Bland has served the county in this capacity since 1928, having been the representative for three consecutive terms, and one extra session of the legislature.

BUELL STARK ENTERS IN WHITFIELD

DALTON, Ga., May 12.—Buell Stark, former representative and senator from Whitfield county and district, and a well known figure in local politics, has qualified and makes announcement of his candidacy for representative in opposition to W. T. Kenner and F. K. McCutchen. Mr. Stark bases his race on his past record and goes on record for a $3 tag tax for passenger cars.

Careless Match Tosser Discovers Tennessee Oil

BIG SANDY, Tenn., May 12.—(AP)—Two youths who dropped a lighted match and saw a blaze shoot from the ground caused a miniature rush of gasoline prospectors here.

Investigating the blaze, the two, Ralph Graham and Quinton Wilson, discovered that holes dug from 12 to 18 inches deep would yield good return.

So for the past few days boys and men have been busy dipping up pure gasoline from the bank of Sugar creek. Some of them have been using the fuel to run their automobiles; others have cashed in on their dippings at about 10 cents a gallon.

Workmen at near-by filling stations, meanwhile, are examining underground storage tanks in the belief that a leak is the source of the gasoline.

the Atlanta school system and of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn. He was president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in 1924 and president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in 1931-32. He headed the Community Chest campaign and served as vice president of the Chest in 1929. He has been a member of his company's "big ten," composed of leading producers of the company, for the past six or eight years. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1931 and has served as president of the community employment service. He is a director of a half dozen other civic and charitable organizations. He was vice president of the Georgia Century of Progress commission and aided in placing the Georgia exhibit in the Chicago world's fair last year.

In addition, he is high in the council of the Alpha Tau Omega Greek letter social fraternity and a captain in the Georgia national guard.

Following is the text of LeCraw's announcement:

Formal Announcement.

"I believe the time has come when the people of Atlanta desire a change in the mayorship of this city. I believe Atlanta wants a younger man, a businessman, who has no axes to grind nor any political affiliations. Atlanta is ready for a new deal in its city administration and I pledge that if I am elected mayor I will give this city an honest, fearless, business administration. The day has passed when minorities can rule our city government, and every act that I shall make shall be measured, not by political expediency, but by the interests of the majority of the people. I represent no special interests and am an independent candidate. I am a plain ordinary working man and my heart and interests lie with the plain, everyday working people of this city and their interests will be my prime consideration.

"Personally I am dry and go to moving picture shows during the week and to church on Sunday, but I believe that the will of the majority should govern absolutely on all controversial question and it is my intention, should I be elected mayor, to immediately take the necessary steps along with city council to hold a genuine, bona fide referendum on the three issues of beer, Sunday amusements and repeal, and thereafter I shall be governed in my actions by the verdict of the people in this referendum.

"The public schools of Atlanta will have a friend in the mayor's chair if I am elected. I am a product of Atlanta's public schools and have three sons in the public schools at present. I am in favor of completely divorcing the public school system of Atlanta from politics. I am also in favor of seeking a charter change which will allocate the public schools' 30 per cent directly to them, constituting the city of Atlanta merely as a collection agency for them. This will enable the schools to borrow against their 30 per cent independently of the city and finance their expenses throughout the year.

"The distribution of Atlanta's city taxes is undoubtedly inequable and an unfair portion of the tax burden is being borne at present by real estate, due to the fact that it is tangible and can be reached for taxation purposes. I strongly favor the seeking of methods of securing information relative to intangibles through the state and federal income tax returns in order that intangibles shall be made to carry their just portion of the burden and our taxes be spread more evenly. I favor a reduction in the assessments on Atlanta homes and real estate.

"The majority of the members of our police department are honest and fearless, but something must be wrong with our police department because our automobile liability and burglary insurance rates are very high and Atlanta ranks near the bottom, comparatively with other cities, in crime detection. I pledge myself and my administration to a thorough study of our police department, looking towards the one end of correcting these evils and making the city a safer place in which to live."

Machine-Gunners Kill Negro Kidnap Figure

ST. LOUIS, May 12.—(AP)—John C. Johnson, 47-year-old negro, indicted with five others as a kidnaper of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, abducted three years ago, was slain by machine gunners late today as he sat on the garage steps at the home of a deputy sheriff.

Three other persons were fired upon by the two machine gunners as they fled, but were unharmed. Johnson was killed instantly.

The negro had been staying with the deputy sheriff, Harry D. Newbold, of St. Louis county, since his release on bond a month ago. It was understood he had been making his home with the officer for safe keeping because of a confession he supposedly made involving others in the kidnaping.

Officers said two machine gunners parked their car about 50 yards from the Newbold home, crept behind a low fence until they were within close range of the negro, then stood up and fired 12 shots from a submachine gun, eight of them striking Johnson. The killers ran across a field to their automobile and fled.

'Green Sedan' Bandit Held for Grand Jury

M. L. Craddock, 24, was held to the grand jury Saturday on a charge of attempted robbery, following a preliminary hearing before Recorder John L. Cone, in which W. M. Gilleland, pay roll messenger, identified the prisoner as the driver of a green sedan used by bandits in the incident.

During the holdup Gilleland succeeded in saving the $400 in currency which he had in his possession.

Testifying before Recorder John L. Cone, Gilleland said he recognized Craddock as the man who sat at the wheel of the automobile as another man accosted him with a revolver.

Gilleland said he struck the bandit a blow in the face, then grasped the revolver. The youth leaped to the green sedan, and with the driver escaped.

A green sedan was used, also, by two bandits who relieved two Fulton county relief fund messengers of $450, two days before the courthouse incident.

Letter on Henry Grady's Oratory By Governor Fitzhugh Lee Found

Echoes of the years when the oratory of Henry Grady told to the world the story of a south reborn after the devastation of war and "reconstruction," whispered again this week with the discovery of an old newspaper clipping containing a letter, written about 1890, from Governor Fitzhugh Lee, of Virginia, to Governor John B. Gordon, of Georgia.

The clipping, itself some seven or eight years old, was discovered by Colonel Fitzhugh Lee, of the fourth corps area, United States army, son of the former governor of Virginia, in his files. He believes it was sent to him by some friend, but cannot recall from what newspaper it was taken.

The letter tells how Grady's eloquence has inspired the leading men of the north to send a special correspondent of the New York Times to investigate this "New South" of which Grady speaks. It refers to the great orator, then editor of The Atlanta Constitution, as speaking with "such cornucopia of eloquence as this generation has known naught of."

The letter from Governor Lee to Governor Gordon follows:

"Dear General Gordon:

"I am giving myself the pleasure of introducing to your personal favor my friend, ———— who, touring Dixie as special correspondent of the New York Times, has appreciation that possibilities are about to flower into the certainties of what Henry Grady names 'The New South.' He has some acquaintance with Grady—please have them know one another still better.

"You won't like him less finding him sparked with a bit of irreverence; he speaks of you Georgians as 'Yankees grabbing geography for an alibi.' Dear old General Bob Toombs at prime would have shot him for that—but you, I trust, will be less precipitate for, my dear governor, he bears letters of introduction to our southern bankers and railway managers and industrialists from virtually every man of importance in Wall street—men of that type wanting to know what facts are, what proof of progress there is.

"His newspaper is nobly inspired to this survey. Henry Grady's last Christmas week's great speech—such cornucopia of eloquence as this generation has known naught of—is doing its perfect work.

"Today's real south needs only to reveal its reality.

"We a.. at the threshold of opportunity, and as we love Grady, our poet, let us underwrite Grady, historian.

Most cordially always yours,

"(Signed) FITZHUGH LEE."

GIRL SCOUT DIRECTOR ATTENDS SCHOOL CAMP

Miss Lucille Cannon, director of the Atlanta Council of Girl Scouts, left Saturday to join with 100 Scout directors and leaders from all parts of the United States in a two weeks' training school at Camp Edith Macy, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y. The camp will open Monday with the courses in camp management and Girl Scout administration directed by an Atlantan, Miss Ray Mitchell, regional director for five southeastern states.

Upon her return to Atlanta late in May Miss Cannon will complete plans for the opening of Camp Civitania, sponsored by the Atlanta Girl Scout council, which was selected at the recent meeting of the national body here last week as a national training school for the period July 6-13.

DOCTORS BACK KEY ON STEINER ISSUE

Plan Appeal to Courts If Council Overrides Mayor's Veto.

As members of the Fulton County Medical Society Saturday laid plans to gain support for Mayor James L. Key's veto to a council ordinance, setting up a separate corporation to operate the Albert Steiner ward and also prepared to wage a court battle against the proposal in the event council overrides Key, Dr. J. L. Campbell, chairman of the cancer commission of the Medical Association of Georgia, released resolutions opposing the program.

In addition Dr. Campbell related how the Georgia association in the Augusta convention, just adjourned, supported his action in refusing to enter an exhibit in the American Society for the Control of Cancer displays in Cleveland in June.

The council ordinance, which has again made Steiner the object of a heated controversy, would allow Steiner to treat pay patients from any part of the country. It also is designed to obtain a $250,000 PWA loan for enlargement of the institution and to secure an additional $100,000 worth of radium.

There were 27 signatures on the ordinance, enough to insure that two-thirds of the 39 members of council will vote to override Key's veto, if they all stick.

Plan Court Appeal.

Dr. Campbell said Saturday that members of the Fulton County Medical Society would attempt to secure sufficient votes to defeat the attempt to override Key, and failing in that would appeal to the courts, charging that the proposed contract is illegal, against public policy and would be confiscatory in that it would place the city in the practice of medicine in competition to local practioners.

Proponents of the Steiner program Saturday contended they would override the mayor and that the courts would refuse to interfere in the matter.

Key vetoed a similar ordinance previously and his veto was sustained.

The Campbell telegram refusing to enter an exhibit from the Georgia association, was sent to Dr. Olin West, secretary of the American Medical Association. It recited that in its activities the American Society for the Control of Cancer had failed to cooperate in Georgia.

Text of Telegram.

"Instead it has apparently deliberately created discord and thereby hindered our own work," the telegram pointed out. "Specifically, without our knowledge or consent, it placed on billboards throughout the state, educational posters, giving the address of a local cancer clinic (Steiner), which at that time was receiving both charity and pay patients. It set itself up as a referee to tell patients where to obtain treatment for cancer or suspected cancer. So long as it continues these practcies, the Medical Association of Georgia strenuously and vigorously opposes any exhibit or demonstration by this society at any of the sessions of the American Medical Association."

The telegram also was approved by the Georgia association, Dr. Campbell said.

Joseph H. Hirsch, the only one of the Steiner trustees who could be reached Saturday, declined to discuss the matter.

Italy Plans Credit For Austria, Hungary

ROME, May 12.—(AP)—Italy will be banker for Austria and Hungary in a supreme effort to build up their foreign trade.

She will furnish most of the credit under arrangements for increased export financing included in the triangular commercial accord to be signed Monday.

Special exchange arrangements will be made to avoid harmful effects of currency fluctuations on the working of the plan, Richard Schuller, Austrian minister and one of the negotiators, said tonight.

He said the pact will assure economic independence to his country. Among other benefits, he expects it to increase the ratio of Austrian exports to Italy from 4 to 10 per cent of Italy's exports to Austria.

Hungary will benefit principally through an increased price for her wheat at both the Italian and Austrian frontiers.

RING LARDNER ESTATE IS VALUED AT $192,927

EAST HAMPTON, N. Y., May 12.—(AP)—Ring Lardner, author and humorist, who died September 25 last, left a net estate of $192,927, a transfer tax appraisal filed today showed.

The gross estate was appraised at $247,083. The bulk of the estate was left to the widow, Mrs. Ellis A. Lardner, who also received insurance amounting to $169,159.

Dozen Negroes Jailed When Tales Disagree

Police held an unofficial "jury" of negroes in cells at police headquarters Saturday pending a verdict.

The verdict police sought was the true story of what happened to George Boone, negro, of 144 Butler street, who was shot through both legs.

Twelve negroes were present at the time of the shooting. When they arrived at police headquarters they gave 12 different stories. Now they occupy 12 different cells.

They will remain, police said, until at least two of them agree upon what happened, and stick to the story.

Pulitzer Winner Speeds to Baxley, Tired of New York Bright Lights

En route home from New York to her husband and her children, Mrs. Caroline Miller, winner of the 1934 Pulitzer prize for her novel of Georgia folk, "Lamb in His Bosom," paused in Atlanta for a few hours Saturday before taking the train for Baxley.

The young author, whose first book received the highest award in the gift of the literati, was glad to be back in "Jawjaw" where, if she does pronounce it that way, no one says anything about it.

She was tired of being feted and dined by the literary lights of New York, where she went to receive the $1,000 prize in recognition of her work, and her main emotion in Atlanta was one of keen anticipation as she neared Baxley, her husband, and her children.

The Georgia woman was singularly unimpressed by the great honor which has come to her and, except for the elation and the awe inspired by the recent flurry she caused in "highbrow" circles, she remained the charming and simple person she was before she became the sensation of the writing and reading world. In other words, success has not gone to her head.

That head, just at present, is filled with ideas for a new book, the nature of which she did not divulge. Now she wants to settle down quietly at her small town home with her husband, who was formerly her English teacher in the Baxley High school.

Mrs. Miller is quite determined that her second book shall be even better than "Lamb in His Bosom," the first. Her preparations for making it so indicate that success will probably be hers again.

COP, BUSINESS MAN JOIN OBSERVANCE OF MOTHER'S DAY

story. Other events intervene.

"So," remarked the motorcycle officer, "you were hitting 55 when you passed the school? Well, it's the station for you and right now. What do you think about that?"

The driver of the car could not think—just then.

The officer looked into the rear of the automobile which but a few minutes before had speeded past his post at the 55-mile-an-hour clip.

Two gunny sacks, filled with some material, lay in the rear seat.

"What's in them sacks?" the man of the law demanded.

"Chips," was the reply.

"What kind of chips?"

No one knows but those two men, but at that moment there must have been one of those dramatic pauses which come only in real life.

Chips for Grave.

"They are chips—chips from Stone Mountain," the voice of the automobile driver lowered.

"Yes, mister, they are chips," he continued. "Just one year ago today I lost a friend.

"My mother died.

"Today is the anniversary of her death.

"Tomorrow I wanted to decorate her grave with chips from Stone Mountain.

"I am due to work in 20 minutes. I left home shortly after 5 o'clock to make this trip and I worked hard to obtain these chips. I realized I was going to be late for work.

"I was speeding, I admit."

Yes—he was a "hard-boiled cop." He considered the man's remarks. Then he spoke:

"Son, I've heard just about all the alibis that automobile drivers ever invented. I know an alibi when I hear one.

Also Had Job.

"My orders are to enforce traffic regulations on this thoroughfare. Our chief wants it done. People living near here want it done. I have a job, also.

"Son—" and the officer's voice faltered a trifle.

"Son—my mother—she died, too—just about a year ago today.

"Well, I'll see you again some time.

"Watch out for the kiddies. I hope you make your job on time."

And that little conversation, some way or other, sort of reflects the entire spirit of today.

A few hours later this so-called "hard-boiled cop" was off duty. He walked into a thirst emporium, and demanded a glass of soda.

"Funny," he reflected, "every time that partner of mine goes out on a party the night before, I sure feel bad all next day."

ATLANTA'S RICH AND POOR TO HONOR MOTHER TODAY

Atlanta's young and old, its rich and poor, will clasp hands today and, with reverence in every heart, pay tribute to motherhood.

Pronouncements ranging from a presidential proclamation to a reminder on prison walls to "write home to mother" set the day aside as the nation's "tenderest holiday."

A special note to the observance was given when the government caused a special postage stamp to be issued. It bore a miniature of Whistler's "Portrait of My Mother," and over 700,000 were sold in Atlanta, postal officials said.

It will be a day of messages, reunions, church services, gifts and flowers, especially carnations. A pink carnation will be worn for the living, and a white one for the dead.

From dawn until dusk radio programs will be dedicated to the occasion.

Prisoners at federal prison will have ample opportunity to observe the day. For the fourteenth Mother's Day, the First Christian church will send a delegation to that institution for special services. Each prisoner will be provided with a rose. Later in the day the Loyal Daughter's class will go to the Home for Incurables and take part in services there.

Every church in the city has arranged a program of some kind, musical or otherwise, as a tribute to mothers, and any mother desiring to attend church may be transported there free of charge by calling the Black & White Taxicab Co. This should be done very early, however.

At Lakewood park a new series of week-end summer programs will be started with a Mother's Day program, under direction of Miss Jessie Reese, Atlanta teacher.

While observance of Mother's Day is an American custom, today's program will extend into foreign lands. In Palestine trees will be planted in honor of Jewish mothers.

The honor of originating Mother's Day belongs to Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia. Miss Jarvis began the observance of the day in 1907, one year after the death of her mother. From her original announcement of the idea she has had support of men and women everywhere, until today the observance is of national importance.

F. D. R.'S MOTHER TO OBSERVE MOTHER'S DAY AT HYDE PARK

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the president and "first mother" of the nation, will observe Mother's Day tomorrow at Hyde Park, the Roosevelt estate, where her son was born.

At night she will return to New York to be guest of honor at the country's largest Mother's Day dinner, under the auspices of World Peaceways.

She does not expect a special Mother's Day greeting from her son, she said, because "we never made much of the occasion." He telephones her often, and now and then she spends a week-end at the White House.

"When he was a boy, I had no idea he would be president," she said, "and yet, now that he is, it seems quite natural that he should be. I think God intended things to be that way."

Her son had "courage and strength of character from the time he was a boy," she asserted. While no particular effort was made to sharpen his interest in politics, he liked listening to discussions of public affairs that went on at home, according to his mother.

Mrs. Roosevelt hesitated to discuss mothers of the present day, saying, "I'm of another generation—why, I have great-grandchildren." But she did mention that parents bundle their children off to boarding school earlier than they used to. Her son, she pointed out, had his schooling at home until he was 14.

Next Tuesday Mrs. Roosevelt will take part in ceremonies at the Museum of Modern Art, where Whistler's portrait of his mother is on public view for the last few days before being sent back to the louvre.

An official touch has been added to Mother's Day this year by a special issue of postage stamps bearing a miniature of the Whistler portrait. The stamps have been on sale for more than a week in preparation for the observance.

President Roosevelt, in a Mother's Day proclamation, asked that the day be marked by display of the flag, by "the usual tokens and messages of affection to our mothers," and by aiding in relief work for mothers and children.

WILEY POST WILL SEEK BRITISH RACE HONORS

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Wiley Post announced today that he is getting the Winnie Mae, the monoplane in which he circled the globe, into shape for a two-day flight from London to Melbourne, Australia.

The present record over that course is approximately one week. He will enter, he said, the MacRobertson international air race to be held next fall between the British and Australian cities.

MacRobertson has offered $61,800 to the winner.

DROUTH FARMERS ASK FEDERAL AID

Another Dust Storm Incubating in Midwest's Dry Territory.

CHICAGO, May 12.—(AP)—Grain farmers of the northwest, famine haunted despite vague promises of "possible showers," today petitioned aid from the federal government and received promises of prompt attention.

As they did so, another dust storm was incubating in the dry territory, lifted by winds that freshened hourly and were believed by meteorologists to be capable of surpassing the cross-country storm that by Friday settled over the Atlantic.

Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Ohio and Indiana all remained dry, and Wisconsin was counting the damage done by frosts last night.

Oklahoma and Iowa, not so seriously threatened by the drouth, improved their position with rains.

All weather forecasts mentioned "possible showers" except those dealing with the vast northwestern spring wheat belt which will have unseasonable heat.

In Minnesota, Nebraska and the Dakotas, showers fell last night, but they were scarcely more than a gesture.

Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the federal AAA corn-hog section, returned dust covered from a tour of parched Nebraska and announced to his farmer hosts that he would explain their problem to Secretary Wallace at Washington.

He was told by P. H. Stewart, University of Nebraska agronomist, that even if drenching rains come tomorrow, some of the fields he saw would produce as little as five bushels of wheat to the acre.

The special plea he bears from the farmers is that farmers be allowed to plant in corn and other feed crops those acres they promised Wallace they would retire from wheat production this year in return for money grants.

Roosevelt on Potomac For Overnight Cruise

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt sailed from the Washington navy yard aboard the yacht Sequoia tonight on an overnight cruise down the Potomac.

Accompanying the chief executive was Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Lorena Hickok and Miss Marguerite Lehand, secretary to Mr. Roosevelt.

The president planned to return tomorrow evening.

Prosecutions by NRA Will Be Curtailed

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—NRA's prosecutions for code violation henceforth will be limited almost altogether to those cases in which adverse influence on interstate commerce can be demonstrated.

The widest possible interpretation of what is interstate commerce will be used by the prosecuting officials—an interpretation reaching far beyond the standpat ideas of many veteran federal judges—but nevertheless the new policy dismisses any possibility of prosecuting strictly localized little businesses.

The program was stated today in a declaration of enforcement policy made by A. G. McNight, director of litigation, before a group of NRA legal men.

OVATION GIVEN H. H. CABANISS BY ALUMNI BODY

ATHENS, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—University of Georgia alumni turned their annual luncheon here today into an ovation for one of the oldest "old grads"—Henry H. Cabaniss, of Atlanta, who was graduated 65 years ago in the class of 1869. There is only one other member of his class living—Samuel Barnett, attorney, of Atlanta. He is two years younger than Mr. Cabaniss.

Mr. Cabaniss has been a member of the staff of the Atlanta Journal for many years. At one time in his younger days he was business manager.

Seated between Governor Talmadge and President S. V. Sanford at the luncheon table, he was cheered to the echo when his identity was made known.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, a guest at the luncheon, told the alumni American colleges must give more thought to training boys in a manner to make it less difficult for them to find jobs after graduation.

Other speakers were Governor Talmadge, Dr. Sanford, Philip Weltner, chancellor of the university system; Colonel Sandy Beaver, vice chairman of the university regents, and Harrison Jones, of Atlanta, who presided over the luncheon.

COTTON GARMENT ZONES WILL BE OUTLINED

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The recovery administration said today a hearing would be held May 22 to determine the boundaries of the southern wage zone under the cotton garment industry code.

Kentucky and the counties of Indiana and Illinois along the Ohio river were placed in the southern zone by the executive order approving the code, although that territory was in the northern classification in the original code.

An administrator's order on March 13 set the boundary between the two zones as the 38th parallel from the Atlantic to Kansas, and the northern lines of Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Both orders provided that public hearings be held for final settlement of the question.

Wilmington To Become Mother's Day Capital

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 12.—(AP)—Wilmington will be the nation's "Mother's Day" capital tomorrow. From its postoffice today to all parts of the nation went tiny reminders of the little southern woman who became the adopted mother of the western world more than half a century ago.

Sent from all sections of the land in recent days, letters stamped with her likeness have come here from collectors and others to receive a special "Mother's Day" cachet from the town where she was born in 1804.

Tomorrow they go back—as greetings to other mothers, for preservation in schoolboy albums or to become parts of famous collections.

STATE HIGHWAY BOARD OF GEORGIA
General Offices
ATLANTA

May 11, 1934.

Hon. Clark Howell Sr.,
President and Editor,
The Atlanta Constitution,
Atlanta, Ga.
Hon. Herschel V. Jenkins,
The Savannah Morning News,
Savannah, Ga.
Gentlemen:

Due to conditions over which we have no control, the paving of the Madison-Eatonton link of the Four Capitals highway cannot be completed before September 1, and we must ask you to postpone the great motorcade between Atlanta, Milledgeville, Louisville and Savannah until after completion of this paving.

We are now hard at work on this road and will complete it at the earliest possible date.

We are highly enthusiastic about the motorcade and are looking forward to it as one of the most memorable events in the history of our great state.

Hoping that this delay will only serve to make the motorcade a still greater event and assuring you of the completest co-operation of the state highway board and the entire personnel of the highway department, I am,

Yours very truly,
STATE HIGHWAY BOARD OF GEORGIA,
By W. E. Wilburn, Chairman.

Delay in Completion of Road Causes 'Cade Postponement

vannah until after completion of this paving.

"We are now hard at work on this road and will complete it at the earliest possible date."

The letter was addressed to Clark Howell Sr., president of The Constitution, and Herschel V. Jenkins, publisher of The Savannah Morning News.

Enthusiasm at High Pitch.

Enthusiasm in the motorcade has reached a height never before achieved for an event of this nature. Registration of participants assures a great string of between 600 and 800 cars traversing the historic and picturesque route. Motorists not only from the cities along the route, but from practically every point of importance in Georgia as well as many groups representing out-of-state cities, are signifying their intention to participate.

In compliance with the request of the highway board, both papers sponsoring the motorcade, as well as officials of the cities involved, agreed Saturday that the postponement was unavoidable. It was agreed also that the Four Capitals motorcade will be held at the earliest possible date after completion of the Madison-Eatonton link, probably about September 1, according to the date mentioned in the letter from Chairman Wilburn of the board.

It was the concensus among those sponsoring the motorcade that the postponement would serve only to make it a greater and more impressive event than ever. The added time will permit perfection of plans and continued dissemination of the program.

Gamble Sees Greater Event.

Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, who was the originator of the Four Capitals motorcade idea, when informed of the postponement, said that he felt when the motorcade is held later in the year it will inevitably be even greater and more successful.

"Savannah is just as attractive and just as beautiful in its natural settings of the late summer as it is at this time," said Mayor Gamble. "In fact, this city is proud of its climate and natural adornments at any season of the year and we know that visitors will find just as much to delight and please them in September as they would in June or July."

The highway board, in its letter, voices similar sentiment.

"We are highly enthusiastic about the motorcade," the letter continues, "and are looking forward to it as one of the most memorable events in the history of our great state.

"Hoping that this delay will only serve to make the motorcade a still greater event and assuring you of the complete co-operation of the state highway board and the entire personnel of the highway department."

CONTACT IS MADE; GETTLE'S RELEASE REPORTED NEAR

no truth in reports that a letter from Gettle, who was seized by two coolworking gunmen at the end of a Wednesday midnight swimming party at his Arcadia estate near here, had been received by a close friend of the family. The letter had been reported to urge early compliance with all demands of the abductors.

Noon declined to say just how communication with the abductors had been effected, but commented:

"I am convinced the contact through which I was advised that instructions soon would be forthcoming, is authentic."

He added he had received several other telephone calls but with the exception of the "contact" referred to had placed little credence in them.

Earlier in the day it had been announced that Noon would have an important statement before midday, but this was not forthcoming.

Mrs. Gettle, wife of the millionaire, was confined to her bed in the pretentious Beverly Hills home of the couple. Only a few close friends were allowed to see her. They said she frequently asked "Has there been any word yet?"

The Gettle children, Billy and Betty, 8-year-old twins, and Bobby, 6, and Jimmy, 5, attended a costume party at El Rodeo school, where they attend classes, today. They were driven to and from the school in a limousine manned by two armed guards. It was said the children had not been informed of the kidnaping and had been told their father was away "on a trip."

In the course of the morning the promise was made that the kidnapers would be given plenty of "getaway time," upon releasing their victim unharmed.

Statement by Noon.

In his formal statement Noon said: "I have received lots of calls, have reported some, have not reported others. Some manifestly were hoaxes, for instance, out of a clear sky.

"I received a call at my office which did not come to me personally, but was given to a man in the office last night.

"It gave definite instructions for delivery of $45,000 at a Los Angeles city address at 9 p. m. last night. I was instructed to come alone otherwise it would be 'just too bad.'

"I received another call at my residence at midnight, instructing me to deliver $500 today at 2 p. m. into the first automobile which passed a certain point in Beverly Hills at that hour.

"From this multitude of calls, I feel that there is only one which is authentic, and I will know the voice when I hear the call again.

"At my earnest solicitation as the representative of the family, heads of law enforcement agencies definitely agreed with me last night that they would cease active operations, at least until Monday noon, to allow me to proceed unhampered, for after all, it is the life of Mr. Gettle in which we are first interested.

The amount of ransom figuring in the case was left to public speculation by the attorney's remark that he was prepared to pay it "if, as and when a definite sum is asked."

$75,000 Original Demand.

Originally a telephone demand was made to Noon yesterday for $75,000. Late yesterday the invalid wife, already seriously shocked by the abduction, received a letter asking her to get $40,000 in bills and await instructions.

Commenting on the promise to give the abductors a generous start ahead of the police, Noon said:

"I realize that in the history of kidnaping cases the intensive search for the abductors by the police has often materially hindered and perhaps prevented the safe return of the victim.

"I had a serious conference, therefore, with heads of the federal, county and city organizations, and they agreed with me that the only thing to do is to call off the manhunt heretofore under way until at least Monday noon.

"I am announcing officially, therefore, for Gettle's kidnapers and all others to read, that not a step will be taken by authorities to apprehend the criminals until Monday noon.

"I have definite assurance from all officials concerned that this agreement will be kept to the letter.

"Meanwhile I am awaiting negotiations for Gettle's return.

"One of the factors that induced this agreement is the condition of Mrs. Gettle, already in poor health as the result of pneumonia. The shock of her husband's abduction has been almost too much for her.

"She is under a terrific strain, unable to sleep or rest, and is certain to continue in this state until her husband is returned safely to her."

FEDERAL OFFICERS SEARCH FOR PEAY'S GRANDSON

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., May 12.—(AP)—Disappearance of Percy Lamar Armstrong was under investigation by the department of justice today, but a spokesman for the family of the 10-year-old grandson of the late Governor Austin Peay said there had been no developments in the search for him.

A federal agent arrived here from Nashville and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation, promised Representative Joseph W. Byrns in Washington that he would assign several men to the case. The boy left his school yesterday in company with a man whom he greeted with a hug, his companions reported.

Police Chief J. E. Robinson expressed the opinion that the boy had gone away with his father, P. L. Armstrong, a resident of Jackson, Miss., and the child's family has been represented as holding the same theory. Armstrong and the boy's mother, Mrs. Amaryllis Armstrong, were divorced several years ago in Memphis and she was awarded custody of the son.

A. H. Horner, a taxi driver, told reporters that shortly before a train went through at 2:30 a. m., yesterday he saw three men, one of whom he identified as Armstrong, drive to the station. No one got on or off the train, and Horner said that after it had passed the three drove away in a sedan bearing a Memphis city license plate.

It was about 8:30 a. m. that a man called at the Howell grammar school for the boy, who greeted him warmly and the two went off hand in hand. Harris Phillips, a student, saw them going in the direction of a parked automobile, but did not see them enter it. Since leaving the school no report of the boy has been received.

LONE SEARCH FOR JUNE BEING MADE BY ROBLES

TUCSON, Ariz., May 12.—(AP)—While the law kept its back turned as a matter of co-operation and sympathy, Fernando Robles today continued his lone-handed effort to purchase the life and freedom of his 6-year-old doughter, June, from the abductors who seized her 17 days ago.

What progress had been made was not known outside the family, but there was no outward indication of any change in the case since authorities declared a second truce against the kidnapers in order to allow the worry-wracked father to deal alone.

On the assumption June is alive, the father has been attempting to make contact with the abductors and persuade them to accept $10,000 instead of the original ransom demand of $15,000. Robles has proclaimed his inability to raise more than $10,000.

The negotiation attempts apparently were being kept up on the basis of a second note from the abductors early this week indicating June was alive.

Three Giant Lizards Reach U. S. Shivering

NEW YORK, May 12.—(UP)—Three giant dragon lizards, living models of the giant beasts that roamed the earth countless ages ago, arrived trembling in New York today at the end of their journey from the Island of Komodo in the Dutch East Indies.

The temperature was 51 degrees and the reptiles, which are carnivorous and rear 10 feet when standing on their hind legs, shivered in their cages in the express company yards while their captors sought to cut the red tape that will permit their transfer to a warmer abode in the Bronx Zoo.

The lizards, in company with an assorted shipment of boa constrictors and other reptiles, arrived from Vancouver, B. C.

Originally four of the lizards started the trip from Komodo, but one died aboard ship. The other three also became ill, but castor oil, administered in the usual manner—forcibly—saved them from the fate of their fellow beast.

GIRL TO GRADUATE AFTER ONE MONTH IN LOCAL SCHOOL

Ellen Ruberta Spear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Spear, will be the youngest graduate, in point of attendance, in the 1934 class of the E. Rivers school. Graduating exercises are to take place on May 25.

MISS ELLEN SPEAR.

Ellen Ruberta entered the school less than a month ago, following the removal of her parents to Atlanta from Toledo. She is 13 years of age and quickly adapted herself to her new school, showing that the course she had taken in the Toledo school was practically the same as that given in Atlanta. She expects to enter North Fulton High school next year.

She is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Brumbelow, of Atlanta.

Rep. Parker Presides During Air Mail Debate

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representative Homer S. Parker, of the first Georgia district, had the honor this week of being called upon by Speaker Henry S. Rainey to preside over the lower house during consideration and passage of one of the major legislative proposals brought up this session.

Although not even a member of the committee in charge, Mr. Parker was requested to sit in the speaker's chair while the important air mail bill was up. He handled himself like an old-timer and succeeded in straightening out a number of parliamentary snarls which threatened the proceedings.

Reed Will Not Run, Rumor Declares

KANSAS CITY, May 12.—(AP)—James A. Reed was reported tonight to have decided at a conference with T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City democratic organization leader, not to seek this year the seat in the United States senate which he vacated voluntarily in 1928.

Such a development, coupled with the decision today of Representative Joseph B. Shannon, of Kansas City not to make the race, would leave the way clear for Harry S. Truman, presiding judge of the Jackson county (Kansas City) court to announce his candidacy for the democratic nomination with the backing of Pendergast's powerful organization.

Pendergast declined to verify the conference was held and Reed was not available for comment. It was learned authoritatively, however, that there was a meeting today between the two men who for a time were somewhat estranged after supporting different men for the senate race in 1932.

STORED SINCE 1869, COLUMBUS STATUE FOUND IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—To the utter amazement of the parks department, a heroic statue of Columbus was discovered today in a remote corner of a storage yard in Central Park.

So far as is known, no one of the present generation of New Yorkers ever even heard of this possession. It was in the box in which it had been crated in 1869.

This statue, carved by Emma Stebbins at Rome in 1867 in white marble, was brought to the attention of the parks department by John Barnell, a Syracuse (N. Y.) collector of Columbus statues, who wanted a photograph of it.

He learned of the existence of this statue through chance delving into old records.

The statue was presented to the city by Marshall Owen Roberts, New York merchant, financier and art patron.

No one knows why it was never placed on a pedestal in some of the city squares, but the parks department is planning to clean it up and place it in Columbus Square behind the new county courthouse.

DEPUTY SHERIFF, AIDED BY MATRON, NABS 4 RUM CARS

After capturing three whisky cars Saturday night while his partner was absent, Deputy Sheriff S. G. Davies pressed into service another assistant, Mrs. Odessa Reeves, matron at Fulton county jail, and captured a fourth whisky-laden auto.

With his regular partner, W. R. (Cap) Joiner, out of the city, Deputy Davies confiscated his first haul at Spring and Alexander streets, and arrested a man who gave the name of B. H. Smith, 33 Alexander street. On the same corner a few minutes later he took another car, which, like the first, contained only a few pints of contraband, and later in the 700 block of Hemphill avenue, he captured a machine which carried 65 gallons of "corn." Drivers of the last two cars fled. A short while before midnight Davies, with Mrs. Reeves in the car with him, nabbed a car with eight cases of supposedly imported rye on Boulevard, in front of the Georgia Baptist hospital.

NEW HEADS SELECTED FOR SUGAR, RICE POSTS

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Chester G. Davis, farm administrator, today named John E. Dalton as chief of the sugar section, and Charles G. Miller as chief of the rice section of the farm administration.

The two men will assume duties formerly performed by A. J. S. Weaver, former head of the rice and sugar section. He was recently promoted to be associate director of the program planning division.

SENATE CONSIDERS INDUSTRIAL LOANS

Move To Provide Needed Working Capital Gets Slow Start.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The Glass-Barkley bill to make available more than half a billion dollars of government and private money for five-year loans to industries unable to obtain needed working capital elsewhere was taken up by the senate today but a vote went over until next week.

The parliamentary blocks had been withdrawn for quick passage without much debate, but Senator Johnson, republican, California, offered an amendment to authorize Reconstruction Corporation 20-year loans to municipally owned power projects and a long argument followed. No vote was taken on the amendment.

Previously Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, author of the bill authorizing the 12 federal reserve banks to make loans to industry out of their $280,000,000 of surplus funds and accepted an amendment by Senator Barkley, democrat, Kentucky, authorizing the corporation to make five-year loans to industries from a $250,000,000 fund, but only where such industries have exhausted every effort to obtain financial assistance under the reserve system provisions.

An amendment by Senators Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, and Copeland, democrat, New York, to permit the corporation to loan to bank receivers 100 per cent of the appraised value of the assets held by the RFC for loans was rejected without a record vote.

Vandenberg argued the appraisals on which existing loans had been made were timed a year ago and if 100 per cent loans were made they would still be conservative because of the "recovery value" of the assets.

Copeland served notice he would seek a vote on another amendment similar to the McLeod closed bank pay-off measure. It would authorize the RFC to make loans on the assets of closed banks where there seemed to be hope that "orderly liquidation within a reasonable time would give them full value."

BARRETT EXTENDS RAIL INJUNCTION

ler General William B. Harrison boosted the tax valuations of utilities which successfully opposed the rate reductions in court. Officials said at the time the increases were announced that concerns which accepted the cuts would be given "consideration."

23 Utilities Involved.

The railroads which brought the suit heard today were among a list of 10 telephone companies and 13 railroads whose valuations were boosted $145,000,000.

All of the companies disagreed with the assessments and under statutory provision for such cases arbiters were named to fix a value.

Jud P. Wilhoit, chairman of the public service commission which ordered the contested rate cuts, was named to represent the comptroller general in the Central of Georgia case, working with Charles L. Redding, named by the railroad. The Savannah and Atlanta arbiters were J. B. Daniel, of the public service commission, and Anton P. Wright, for the railroad.

Redding told the court as today's first witness that Wilhoit "would not budge" from the valuation fixed by Harrison and that the commission chairman finally told him "there is no need to discuss the matter further—assessments of Harrison must stand."

Wright testified he encountered the same difficulty with Daniel. He said the commissioner rejected a list of 12 men whose names he submitted as nominees for an umpire to work with them, and countered with a list of five names of his own.

List of Umpires Similar.

The umpire nominees offered by Daniel, Wright said, were the same with one exception as those offered by Wilhoit to Redding.

Wright said his own list of a dozen names included men who headed large corporations doing a considerable amount of shipping—men he said would be interested in railroad rate reduction.

T. Mayhew Cunningham, general counsel for the Central of Georgia, and A. B. Lovett, attorney for the S. & A., introduced affidavits of several persons who said Governor Talmadge had repeatedly stated he fired the old public service commission and put the present commissioners in office for the purpose of having rates cut, and would continue to fire commissioners and put in new ones until the rates were reduced.

Judge Barrett indicated the temporary restraining order would be extended from time to time until he arrived at a final decision.

WILL OF WOODIN FILED IN N. Y.

Estate of Former Secretary of Treasury Is Left to Family.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The will of William H. Woodin, former secretary of the treasury, was filed today, leaving the entire estate to his family.

The instrument stated that his four children, who already had been substantially provided for, will receive $5,000 each under the will, while his widow, Annie Jessup Woodin, of 2 East Sixty-seventh street, receives the entire remainder of his estate outright.

The estate was formally estimated at "over $20,000."

The will was made last January 3, when Woodin was in Arizona suffering from the throat ailment that caused his death here last week.

The document consisted of a single typewritten sheet which read:

"Having already provided for my dear children, Mary, Anne, William and Elizabeth, years ago, I give, devise and bequeath to each of them the sum of $5,000."

Then it was stated that the remainder of the estate would go to his wife.

Attorneys for the estate declined to give an estimate of its size, saying: "We would not venture a guess."

The children are Mrs. Mary W. Miner, of New York; Mrs. Elizabeth W. Rowe, of Indian Hill, Cincinnati, Ohio; Mrs. Anne W. Harvey, of New York, and William H. Woodin Jr., of the Desert sanitarium, Tucson, Ariz.

The will was witnessed by W. Paul Holbrook, of the Desert sanitarium, and Gertrude Zimmerman, of Tucson.

Bust by Former Atlantan Accepted for Paris Salon

Mrs. Jane D. Heidner, formerly of Atlanta, and her bust of Mrs. James A. Lester, which has been accepted for the Salon de Printemps at Paris.

Many Atlantans have been interested in a picture published in the Paris edition of the Chicago Daily Tribune for April 20 last. The illustration shows Mrs. Jane D. Heidner, sculptress, with a bust she made of Mrs. James A. Lester, which has been accepted for the Salon de Printemps at Paris this year. Mrs. Heidner is the wife of Major Samuel J. Heidner and the couple were popular members of Atlanta society from 1925 to 1928, when Major Heidner was on duty in the military department of Georgia Tech. Major Heidner is now following the course at the French war college in Paris, where Mrs. Heidner is studying art under the celebrated Alexandre Descatoire. Mrs. Lester, subject of the bust, is the wife of Major Lester, junior United States military attache in France. Mrs. Heidner had the distinction of having the first bust she ever made, of her husband, accepted for last year's salon.

Gaddis, of Cleveland, Ohio, was elected president of the group; Nathan Pereles Jr., of Milwaukee, Wis., was re-elected secretary, and Mackey Wells, also of Milwaukee, was re-elected treasurer.

Approximately 240 persons attending the meeting were greeted in an amplified telephone communication by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, speaking from Washington.

Mr. Bush-Brown Saturday was attending the annual convention of the American Society of Architects in Washington, it was said at his home on Ivey road, N. E. He was graduated from Harvard in the class of 1911.

Antler's Mother's Day Contest For School Children Ends Today

Students in Atlanta's 52 public schools today will place unusual emphasis upon Mother's Day, as a result of a city-wide campaign inaugurated weeks ago by the Atlanta Antlers' lodge, junior branch of the Elks.

Today will mark the end of a contest among students during which they sought particularly to express love and appreciation to their mothers.

Under the supervision of Superintendent of Schools Willis A. Sutton and faculty members throughout the district, the students, in connection with normal academic activities, have been given a three-month course in "doing outstanding, helpful, maternal deeds," and competition for the three Antler loving cups is of the keenest. The cups will go to an elementary, a junior and a senior high school, and will be awarded during commencement exercises of the prize-winning institutions.

Judges for the contest, as announced Saturday by F. E. Bates, chairman of the Elks' advisory committee supervising the project, will be: Mrs. Byron Matthews, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A.; Mrs. Charles J. Hayden; Lewis Gordon, of the Citizens & Southern bank; Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor First Christian church; and W. S. Kirkpatrick, managing editor of the Georgian-American.

Sutton To Review Work.

All material and records of the schools participating will be given by Friday to Superintendent Sutton for review by a special school committee before being sent to the judges for final selection of the best entries.

For an insight into the work being done by students taking part in the project, a reporter Friday visited a representative group at the Formwalt Street school, where Miss Margaret Solomon, principal, explained how she and the 23 teachers were making the children "mother conscious."

In a kindergarten room, Miss Charlotte Muldrew, a teacher, and one of the project's most enthusiastic advocates, exhibited an attractive collection of original poems, songs, booklets, and numerous other works, emphasizing the maternal motif, as prepared by children between the ages of 5 and 7 years.

All of the 800 or more students in the Formwalt school, Miss Solomon said, have prepared booklets for their mothers, and a number of entertainments for mothers have been arranged by the various classes.

They Go in Scrap Book.

Exhibits from this school to be submitted to the judges will be compiled in the form of a huge scrap book, Miss Louise Green, chairman of the committee in charge there, said. It will contain pages having to do with appreciation of art, music and drama, and as a special feature will carry a picture of the president. Students of the sixth grade have written Mrs. James Roosevelt for her picture to be used in the book in connection with that of her son, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the page will describe Mrs. Roosevelt as "having made an outstanding contribution to the world."

With the idea of making the project a permanent thing, Miss Solomon said that all students of the school will be asked to keep a chart during the summer, listing their deeds to make mother happy. The children are urged, she said, to keep themselves fit physically as well as mentally as a means of attaining this end.

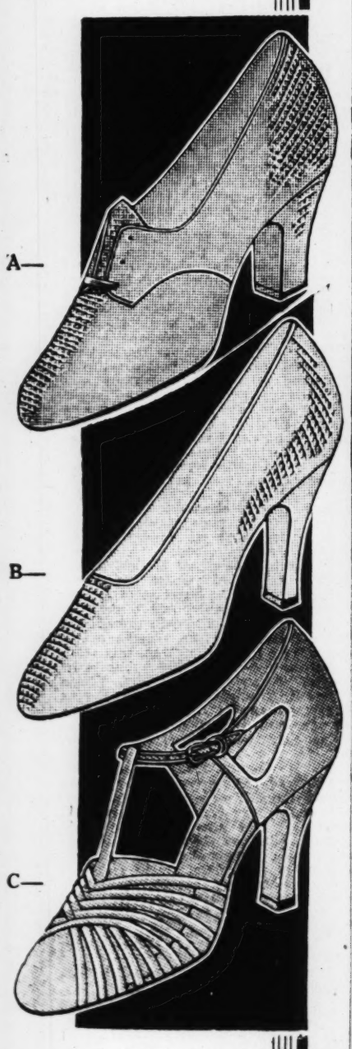

Climaxing the campaign, members of the Antlers lodge will offer a special radio program over station WJTL from 2:15 until 2:45 o'clock this afternoon, during which accomplishments of the "mother project" will be reviewed. A special musical program also will be given.

Southern States Will Map Plans for United Ad Drive

Five-Year Program for $1,000,000 Annual Expenditure Is Proposed for Discussion.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Plans for co-operative community advertising campaign covering five southern states will be launched at a meeting in Charlotte, N. C., on May 17. The proposed campaign will cover a five-year period with a proposed advertising program of a million dollars for each year.

Announcement of the plans for the meeting were made here today by Jackson Matthews, of Wilmington, N. C., secretary of the organization committee who is here on a business trip. Among a group of business leaders sponsoring the movement are: Howard E. Coffin, of Sapelo Island, Ga.; T. G. Woolford, of Atlanta; Mayor John T. Alsop Jr., of Jacksonville; States Lee, of Charlotte; Mayor Coan, of Winston-Salem; R. B. Page, of Wilmington; Colonel H. B. Springs, of Myrtle Beach; M. O. Dunning, of Savannah, and Stuart W. Cramer, of Charlotte.

Other prominent southern business leaders have been invited to attend the meeting at Charlotte, Matthews said, at which time a permanent group will be organized as the southern development board. The states at present included in the program are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Officers will be elected at the forthcoming meeting, plans made for an advertising survey, and steps taken to enlarge the organization with affiliated groups in each of the five states.

Plans for the campaign were indorsed by Coastal States Co-ordinated at a meeting in Augusta, Ga., in February. This organization appointed a committee, with Mr. Coffin as chairman and Mr. Matthews as secretary, to survey the advertising possibilities in the area and develop a program of procedure.

The report of the committee will be presented at next week's meeting by Mayor Alsop, who is president of Coastal States Co-ordinated.

The function of the southern development board will be to increase the effectiveness of present advertising activities through co-ordinating efforts of the separate communities and giving them the advantages of centralized planning, more extensive research and other advertising service not now available in many instances.

WHEAT STREET CHURCH PAYS OFF ALL DEBTS

Wheat Street Baptist church has cleared itself of all indebtedness, according to announcement made Saturday. Until last Sunday the congregation was indebted to the extent of $2,350. A rally to obtain that amount was started and terminated May 6.

Complete reports show that the church congregation obtained gifts amounting to $1,807.65. Rev. J. Raymond Henderson announced that a gift of $2,347 had been made by the estate of Mrs. Mollie Manuel, this making it possible for the church to relieve itself of all indebtedness.

Two Men Are Burned In Truck Explosion

Harry Scarratt, 21, of 514 East avenue, brother of Charles Scarrett, of Scarratt's Garage, Inc., and J. H. Bloodworth, 24, of 534 Luckie street, were severely burned in an explosion of gasoline and oil in a truck Saturday afternoon.

The two were called from the garage where they are employed to start a stalled truck on Linden street. As they raised the hood to look at the motor, there was an explosion. It was apparently caused by a spark from a short circuit coming in contact with gas fumes beneath the hood.

A sheet of flame enveloped the face, hands and upper portions of the bodies of both men. Employes of the garage rushed to their assistance and extinguished flames on their clothing. At Grady hospital physicians said the two men were severely burned. They were later removed to Crawford W. Long hospital.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Captain John J. McGowan, of the police homicide squad, announced tonight that Dr. Julius Phillips admitted to him today when he regained consciousness that he had performed an illegal operation upon Mrs. Virginia Allen Ball.

Mrs. Ball was found dead in Dr. Phillip's office Thursday. Dr. Phillips was unconscious from an overdose of sleeping powders. Captain McGowan said Dr. Phillips admitted he attempted suicide after his patient's death. Mrs. Ball formerly lived in Erie, Pa.

DESPERADO'S MOTHER FREED AFTER QUIZZING

DALLAS, Texas, May 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Henry Barrow, mother of the notorious Clyde Barrow, West Dallas bandit-killer, was back at her home on the Eagle Ford road today after spending a day and two nights in custody of Texas rangers.

"They seemed to think that Clyde had arranged to visit me on Mother's day and that I would tell them all about it," she said.

The aged woman was returned to her home last night. She said that two men who told her they were rangers drove her in an automobile to Tyler. She was taken to the courthouse and questioned at length about her son.

Mrs. Barrow has been accused of meeting and aiding Clyde upon occasion. She said she told the officers nothing which might aid them in trapping the desperado and his companion, Bonnie Parker. She also denied knowing anything about their whereabouts.

CHEROKEES TO ATTEND HOME-COMING HERE

Full Blooded Indians To Present Tribal Songs and Dances in Pageant.

The second annual homecoming celebration for the Cherokee Indians, whose tribe formerly lived in the territory now known as Georgia, will be held in Atlanta on May 25 and 26, it was announced Saturday. The celebration this year will be under the auspices of the 122nd infantry, Georgia National Guard, Colonel T. L. Alexander commanding.

A special program of entertainment for 35 full-blooded Cherokee braves, who will attend the celebration, coming from the reservation in North Carolina, has been arranged. Captain F. E. Hankinson is chairman of the committee on arrangement for the 122nd Infantry.

In addition to that portion of the program in which they will be guests, the visiting Indians will present a pageant written to show the modes of life their ancestors followed when Georgia was their hunting ground. They will present this pageant in Decatur at 2:30 o'clock on the afternoon of May 25, at a place to be announced later. At 8 o'clock the same evening they will appear at Bass Junior High school auditorium and will repeat the pageant, especially for school children, at the city auditorium at 10 o'clock on the morning of May 26.

In the pageant will be songs in the native Cherokee tongue, tribal dances in native costume, etc.

CHURCHES TO OBSERVE "MOREHOUSE SUNDAY"

Morehouse College Sunday will be observed in the Baptist churches of Atlanta on May 20, Dr. Charles D. Hubert, director of the Morehouse School of Religion, announced Saturday. In connection with this special day a mass meeting will be held at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon in the Ebenezer Baptist church, 407 Auburn avenue, N. E., at which reports from all churches on the progress of the drive within the churches for contributions to the college endowment fund will be made by the pastors or their representatives.

In connection with the concerted effort to raise the balance needed to obtain $600,000 for the endowment of Morehouse College, each member of the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' union has been asked to make a personal contribution, and to take a special collection in his church. Approximately 50 churches are uniting in the program under the general leadership of Dr. Hubert.

To complete its endowment fund, the college must raise $68,000 immediately.

Atlanta Music Notes

Joseph Macpherson, bass-baritone of the Metropolitan, and Caroline Dowman, the pianist, who will be heard next Tuesday afternoon in a joint recital at Broadlands, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson.

By MOZELLE HORTON.

The termination of National Music Week officially does not mean that the concert season is over, for there are still many interesting musical events to come.

MacPherson in Concert.

One of the highlights of next week, musically speaking, will be the joint recital to be given by Joseph MacPherson, well-known bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Caroline Dowman, widely known Atlanta pianist, at Broadlands, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson on Pace's Ferry road, on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Admissions will be limited to 200, and tickets will be $1 each. Reservations may be made by phoning Mrs. Murray Hubbard, at Hemlock 8572-W, or calling at 7 Seventeenth street. The entire proceeds will be given for the benefit of Nacoochee Gap school.

Mr. MacPherson is a native of Nashville, Tenn., and he had his first audition in Atlanta seven years ago with officials of the Metropolitan Opera Comany, when he was immediately accepted and given a contract with the Metropolitan. During his seven years with that organization he has had tremendous success, singing a leading role in every opera in which he has appeared.

Mrs. Dowman, who will accompany Mr. MacPherson and also play two solo groups, has appeared in concert in many leading cities in America and in Europe with notable success, and is recognized as an artist of superior worth.

The program includs the aria "O Tu Palermo," from Verdi's "I Vespri Siciliani;" "Star Vicino Al Bell Idolo," Salvatore Rosa; "Carnival," Felix Pourdrain; "Se Vuol Ballare, Signor Contino," from Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro;" "Through the Silent Night," Rachmanioff; "Tally Ho," Franco Leoni, and "Gwine to Hebb'n," Jacques Wolfe. Mrs. Dowman's two groups of solos list three Mendelssohn "Songs Without Words," "Hunting Song," "Spring Song" and "Spinning Song," and an American group, "Polonaise Americaine," John Alden Carpenter; "The Snake Charmer," John Powell, and "Valse Brilliante," Mana-Zucca.

Young Pianists in Concert.

Two other concerts of wide interest occur Monday and Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock both times, when the music department of Bass Junior High school, under the direction of Mabel Stewart Boyter, presents the piano students of the school in two piano concerts, in the Bass auditorium. W. J. Scott is the principal of the school. A thing of vital importance to the future musicians of Atlanta is this custom of affording an outlet for the talent of the students of the school inaugurated at Bass by Mrs. Boyter last year. The interest that it has created and the desire for young boys and girls to study piano is evidenced in the fact that the number performing this year is about three times the number last year. Still a third group, pianists from the ninth grades, will appear on Tuesday evening, May 22, in a joint concert with the orchestra.

Boys and girls playing Monday night are Elizabeth Harralson, Jane Vaughn, Frances Asher, Roberta Andrews, Singleton Waldrop, Anne Smith, Cornelia Sims, Lrmeth Coleman, Mary Sue Heldman, Virginia Forbes, Annie Fitzgerald, Louie Bartlett, Betty Lunsford, Sarah Mathews, Betty Withers, Elise Yarbrough, Gertrude Threlkeld, Imogene Green, Mary Louis Hughes, Sylvia Meyers, Bob Fields and David Johnson.

On the program Tuesday evening are Norma Pries, Helen Blackwood, Martha Emily Postelle, Frances Witcher, Edna McNair, Marion Rosenzweig, Myrtle Seckinger, Mary Walton, Herbert Horne, Emogene Cherry, Virginia Lucas, Laurette West, Tom Babington, Marion Wender, Martha Aiken, Marcia Cornwall, Ann Cochran, Dorothy Bresee, Adelaide Humpreys, Betty Bird, Jane Fant, Doris Yarbrough and Gloria Hoffman.

Two-Piano Program.

The music group of the Studio Club will present for club members a program of two piano numbers in the studio of Hugh Hodgson, in the Erlanger building, on Monday evening, May 14, at 8 o'clock. Irene Leftwich will be heard in the allegro movement of the Greig concerto; Elizabeth Morgan, in the Liszt E flat concerto; Francis Mitchell, in the Cesar Franck Symphonic variations, and Tom Brumby, in the Pierne concerto. The orchestral accompaniments arranged for the second piano will be played by Mr. Hodgson. The performers are all well-known artists of Atlanta. Miss Leftwich is an assistant teacher with Mr. Hodgson; Miss Morgan is one of the most promising of the younger pianists of Atlanta; Mr. Mitchell is in charge of the piano department of the Lovett school, and Mr. Brumby, who is a student at Emory University, has often been heard as soloist with the Emory orchestra.

Girls' Orchestral Concert.

The combined orchestras of Atlanta Girls' High school and Decatur Girls' High school, under the direction of Mrs. Reynolds Clark, will give a concert in Wesley Memorial auditorium on Monday evening, May 21, at 8:30 o'clock. The orchestra consists of 50 girls, with all the sections of a regular symphony orchestra represented. Margaret Milam is the concertmeister. Features of the program will be the "Calif of Bagdad Overture," by Boieldieu, two Brahms numbers, a saxophone octet, and other interesting numbers. Soloists on the program will be Elizabeth Kilpatrick, soprano; Jacqueline Howard, soprano; Marguerite Taylor, harpist; and Elizabeth Jackson, violinist.

Song Concert.

The low seventh grade of Bass Junior High school, the grade that entered in February, presented their first choral concert Wednesday morning at 10:30 at the school, directed by Mabel Stewart Boyter. Their initial appearance as a chorus was most successful and the joy they derived from presenting the program was immeasurable. Taking part were Mary Frances Adams, France Asher, Bobby Axell, Joe Brady, Julian Brock, Mildred Collier, Emily Deal, Betty Dean, Trudell Downs, Louise Favor, Myra Flynn, Nancy Greenleaf, Marjorie Haley, Arleen Hirsch, Sally Sue Howe, Claudia Huckabee, Phyllis Johns, Ruth Lineback, Eloise Lovelace, Myrtis Maffett, Glenn Mathis Jr., Barbara McCanny, Meth McConnell, Mildred McHaffey, Billy Moore, Ruth Mumford, Morris Nisson, Ann Osborne, James Powell, Olin Rambo, Henry Rogers, Frances Screven, Eugene Sims, Raymond Smith, Margaret Stephens, Louella Stone, Billy Strother, Catherine Thompson, Dean Tuck, Virginia Tuggle and Mary Hill Welch.

Studio Musicale-Tea.

Hugh Hodgson presented a group of his piano students in a studio musicale last Tuesday afternoon at his studio in the Erlanger Theatre building before a representative assemblage of musicians and music lovers. The program was one of outstanding artistry, reflecting the sincere and devout work of the students, and crediting their artist teacher with honor. Works of Chopin, Liszt, Bach, Brahms, Grieg, Beethoven, MacDowell, Cesar Franck, Pierne, and others were represented on the program, played by their respective performers in an artistic manner that marked their performance as brilliant and praiseworthy. Playing were Carrie Myrtice Estes, Hermes Jacobs, Louise Hollingsworth, Aida Terry De Bray, Bonita Crowe, Elizabeth Morgan, Julian Barfield, Francis Mitchell, Elizabeth Sheldon, Irene Leftwich and Tom Brumby.

Elizabeth Morgan, one of Mr. Hodgson's artist pupils, is the recent recipient of a scholarship to Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia for next year. She won this highly coveted honor in competition with young artists from all parts of the country in Philadelphia recently. The promise that the talent of this young pianist gives is outstanding, and the honor that she has already received bids fair to lead her to greater things in the future.

Edith West in Recital.

Edith Adair West was presented in a graduate piano recital Tuesday evening at the Studio Arts building by her teacher, Mrs. Armand Carroll. Miss West presented a program of ambitious proportions, and she met the demands admirably. Her playing evidenced the sincere work she has done in her seven years' study with Mrs. Carroll, and her interpretations were well thought out and sympathetically understood. She has a fine technique, and uses it intelligently and musically. She has a particular flair for brilliant work, and plays with clean, clear-cut tone-diction. Her opening number was the Beethoven "Sonata in G, Opus 13, No. 2." Particular praise goes to her performances of Walter Niemann's "Garden Music," Liszt's "Concert Etude in D, Un Sospiro," and to the two movements of the Grieg "Concerto in A Minor, Opus 16." For the latter Mrs. Carroll was at the second piano.

Waldman Pianists' Club.

The Waldman Pianists' Club will have a special May meeting Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the studio of Dorothy J. Waldman, 739 Park drive, N. E., with two co-chairman in charge, Mildred Rand and Mary Louise Bailey. The music of Chopin will be discussed by May Weltner. Several Chopin waltzes will be played by Mildred Rand. The presentation of a "Romantic Travelogue" at the piano by a group of advanced pupils will be a feature. This "story in music" was given before Miss Waldman's teacher's normal training classes last Friday in celebration of national music week. Beginning with "Invitation to the Dance" (Von Weber), "To the Distant Beloved" (Schumann), the story is told in musical titles, culminating in "My Choice." "It Is Ordained by Divine Will" (Mendelssohn), "Wedding March" (Mendelssohn), "The Heavens Are Telling" (Haydn), and "I Love You Truly" (Bond). James D. Smythe, Dorothy Mann, William Storey, and Leslie Calhoun are the pupils who will present this program.

Allie Malone will lead the reading of the Waldman Pianists' club creed and motto.

Miss Waldman will entertain the club at a party following the meeting. Reservations may be made by calling Miss Rand, Cherokee 2215, or Miss Bailey, Hemlock 5537, by members for their friends until the guest lists are full.

"Mikado" Is Presented.

"The Mikado," light opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, received a spirited and pleasing performance in the hands of the Agnes Scott College Glee club last evening at the college, given under the direction of Lewis H. Johnson, with C. W. Dieckmann at the piano. A large audience received the splendid production enthusiastically. Leading roles were admirably and cleverly portrayed by Eugene Traber, Perry Hoey, Richard Smoot, Jack Bagwell, Charles White, Betty Lou Houck, Shirley Christian, Jane Clark, Mary Louise Schumann, Alice Chamlee and Gussie Rose Riddle. The chorus work was particularly fine, there being pleasing verve and dash to the tuneful choruses. The production will be repeated during commencement week, on Monday evening, May 28, at the college.

Cantata at Grace Methodist.

The choir of Grace Methodist church, under the direction of J. Gordon Moore, organist and director of music at the church, will present the sacred cantata, "The Woman of Sychar," by R. S. Stoughton, this afternoon at 5 o'clock. The public is invited. Soloists will be Mrs. Vivian Bryant Thompson, soprano; Bertha Sims, contralto; Refford Landers, tenor, and Ernest Allen, baritone. The chorus consists of 30 voices.

Concert Postponed.

Due to the unavoidable absence from the city of some of the artists concerned, the concert to have been given by the studio of Miss Lulu Clark King on Saturday, has been postponed to next Saturday. At 2:30 p. m. on that date, in the studio in Wesley Memorial church, the following program will be presented:

Song Cycle (Finden), Katherine Burford.

"Si Je Tant Rayon" (Vidal), Mary Belle Cruger.

"Sweet Seventeen," Swedish folk song, Florence Modena.

"Vorrie Mourir" (Tosti), Rance Whitworth.

"The Dove" (Ronald), Lois Lennard.

"My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" (Saint-Saens), Elise Dowling.

"O Thou Sublime Sweet Evening Star," from "Tannhauser" (Wagner), Julienne Lennard.

"Nur Wer Die Sehnsucht Kennt" (Tschaikowsky), Emma Lake.

Wins Guild Prizes.

National recognition has been awarded to Lutie May Hooten, of College Park, by the American Guild of Banjoists, Mandolinists and Guitarists, for two of her musical compositions. The American Guild includes members throughout the United States and Canada.

Miss Hooten entered manuscripts in the four classes in which prizes were offered, winning third place in two of the four, mandolin solo and guitar solo. She has been a member of the guild for some years, and has also taken an active part in building up the musical life of her own community.

Mayor, City Council In 9-Month Fight

TOPEKA, Kan., May 12.—(AP)—Resignation of the mayor and city council of Hugoton, southwestern Kansas town of 1,000, was asked by the state today in view of an 11-month deadlock between the mayor and two councilmen on one side and the remaining three councilmen on the other.

Roland Boynton, attorney-general, said the condition was such that "in fairness to the city," Mayor N. J. Madden and the councilmen should make way for the elevation of a new governing body. The council has refused to confirm the mayor's appointment and the mayor has declined to sign pay warrants for two holdover employes.

Portraits of Bishop Beckwith, Two Others Given University

Two Alumni and a Former Member of Faculty Honored at Athens With Pictures.

ATHENS, Ga., May 12.—The portraits of two alumni and one former faculty member of the University of Georgia were presented to the university by the alumni society, Dr. Phinizy Calhoun, of Atlanta, chairman of the memorial committee, at the annual meeting here today.

The portraits, which will be hung in War Memorial Hall, are of Dr. Charles Minningerode Beckwith, graduate of the Georgia class of 1873, a native of Virginia and former bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Alabama, and a nephew of the late Bishop J. W. Beckwith, second bishop of Georgia; William Rutherford, of the class of 1838; Dr. Henry Patterson, professor of physics here from 1898 to 1908.

Dr. Rutherford was professor of mathematics here from 1859 to 1889. He died in 1896. His daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hutchins Sr., of Athens, gave the portrait.

Dr. Patterson, professor of physics here for a number of years, a graduate of the University of North Carolina and Harvard University, died in 1928. His son, Rufus Patterson, of New York, presented his portrait to the university.

Of especial interest to Georgia and the south is the portrait of Bishop Beckwith, who was so closely allied with this section. He was born in Virginia in 1851, and in addition to being a graduate of Georgia, also graduated from the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., was a noted bishop of the diocese of Alabama; former rector of St. Luke's church in Atlanta, was a musician and an author of note. His portrait was presented by his son, Edmund Ruffin Beckwith, of New York, who was unable to be present at the unveiling exercises.

The Beckwith portrait was painted by Miss Anne Goldthwaite, an artist of note. She is a native of Alabama, and her grandfather, George Goldthwaite, was United States senator from Alabama and chief justice of the supreme court of that state. She studied abroad for eight years, where her works were exhibited in many salons. She now lives in New York.

Bishop Beckwith was ordained a priest in the Episcopal church in 1882, married Lucy Cocke in 1888, was consecrated in 1902 and died in 1928.

Bishop Beckwith, on July 31, 1881, was ordained a deacon in the Episcopal church in Atlanta by his uncle, Bishop John W. Beckwith, and on July 16, 1882, was made a priest. He rose rapidly to become rector of St. Luke's cathedral, in Atlanta, and made a reputation for untiring work in establishing mission churches and as a leader of young people.

In 1884, at Sewanee, he married Miss Rainsford Fairbanks, daughter of George R. Fairbanks, state historian of Florida. She died a year later, and her infant son in 1886.

Leaving the cathedral, he moved to Texas and became rector of Christ church, at Houston, and at once assumed a commanding place in the church life of that state. In 1888, at Houston, he married Miss Lucy Cocke, who bore him one son, Edmund Ruffin, in 1890. She died in Houston in 1892. In 1897 he married Miss Mary Belle Cameron, of Memphis.

While in Texas he wrote "The Trinity Course of Church Instruction" in 1898, and "The Teachers' Companion to the Trinity Course," in 1900. He later wrote "Rightly Instructed in God's Holy Word." All of his works attained wide circulation.

He was elected bishop of Alabama without knowing that his name had been proposed, accepted, and was consecrated in St. John's church, Montgomery, Ala., in December, 1902, becoming the fourth bishop of Alabama and 212th in the American succession.

He was a Mason and in 1924 eminent commander of the Knights Templars, at Troy, Ala. He also was a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity. After a long illness, he died at Montgomery on April 18, 1928. His body lies in Greenwood cemetery.

COUNTY AND PEACE OFFICERS OF STATE MEET THURSDAY

Macon Police Chief Will Present The Constitution's Annual Award at Columbus Conclave.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Sheriffs, police chiefs and county officials of the state will gather here Thursday and Friday for the annual convention of the Georgia County and Peace Officers' Association.

An outstanding event of the meeting will be the presentation Friday, May 18, of the Atlanta Constitution's annual award for meritorious service by an officer of the law.

The presentation will be made by Chief Ben T. Watkins, of the Macon police department, president of the association.

A welcome will be extended to the visiting officials by Edward W. Wohlwender, chairman of the Muscogee county board of commissioners, and by Mayor H. C. Smith.

J. C. Sipple, sheriff of the city court of Savannah, has been assigned to make the response.

The program for the first session includes addresses by Judge C. F. McLaughlin, of the Chattahoochee circuit superior court, and by T. Hicks Fort.

The president's annual address will be made in the afternoon of the opening day. Committees also will report at that time and group meetings will be held until time for adjournment.

Later the visiting officials will see a tank demonstration and parade at Fort Benning, and make a tour of the huge government reservation. They will have dinner at the infantry school mess hall and attend a dance at the Elks' Club at night.

Following the meritorious service award presentation Friday, the delegates will be addressed by J. H. Hanson, special agent in charge, United States bureau of investigation, from the Birmingham, Ala., office.

Election of officers and selection of the 1935 convention city will be the afternoon's last business. A wrestling program has been arranged for the evening.

Servants May Be Made To Prove Good Health

ALBANY, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—A city ordinance will be sought whereby household servants would be subjected to examination for communicable diseases and only those possessing photographic certificates of health would be eligible for employment.

Dr. Frank Neill, city physician, in outlining the proposal before the Albany post of the American Legion, termed it "a vitally important health effort." The aim, he said, is to rid servants of diseases which endanger the health and lives of those with whom they come in contact.

Under the plan, servants would be subjected to periodical examinations. Those found to be infected would be treated, and health certificates, each bearing a photograph of the individual, would be issued when the city physician pronounced them cured.

Farmers Inspect Hart Clover Fields, A Growing Industry in East Georgia

By TURNER HIERS.

HARTWELL, Ga., May 12.—Hart, the only Georgia county to be named for a woman, now has another distinction added to its list—that of being the largest clover-growing county in the state, according to L. C. Westbrook, the county agent.

And the center of this activity is in the Nancy Hart community, also named for the famous Revolutionary heroine. This neighborhood's clover history dates back to six years ago, when only three farmers were growing this legume which serves as a cover, cash, or feed crop, or as a combination of these. Today 73 farmers of this community are profitably engaged in the enterprise that diversifies their farming.

The sum total of all this is that this group of progressive rural citizens, disciples of the one-crop system when cotton was king, are now really living at home. Electric lights and running water have replaced the kerosene lamp and drudgery. And there's food for both human and beast.

Such a step in the march of progress is something to be proud of. Even for those who did it. So it was decided that a celebration was in order, and they called it "the clover blossom festival," which is to become an annual event. The jubilee was held Wednesday in conjunction with the closing of the school term of the Nancy Hart consolidated school, which also serves as a community gathering place.

Dean Paul W. Chapman, of the State College of Agriculture, principal speaker for the occasion, described the festival as "the outstanding individual community effort in the state this year." Harry L. Brown, director of agricultural extension in Georgia, said that heretofore there had been too much stress upon the idea of making money instead of living on the farm. L. M. Sheffer, state supervisor of agricultural education, declared that vocational education primarily aids the building of homes.

Farmers from northeast Georgia counties and many representatives who had visited the pasture land exhibit at Athens, held at the same time, whereby grazing lands that produce fat cattle were inspected, were also present, as were agricultural leaders from the State College of Agriculture at Athens.

While the clover growing was started primarily to improve land and for grazing and hay, the demand for seed has become so great that many of the Hart county clover growers are devoting their entire crops to producing seed, while many are using the fields for grazing and for hay.

E. H. Thomas, superintendent of and vocational teacher at Nancy Hart community school, is primarily responsible for the great strides made in the growth of this plant here. However, he had full co-operation of the farmers who joined in the movement.

ANNUAL MEETING OF STATE BODY TO OPEN MONDAY

Macon To Be Host to 3-Day Session of Officers Who Will Seek County Tax Relief.

MACON, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—Questions affecting most of the state's taxpayers will be given attention at the annual meeting of the Association of Countl Commissioners of Georgia which convenes here Monday, May 14.

Proposals for revising the state's taxing system are expected to play an important part in the three-day meeting. The organization held an institute at Athens recently, during which it was emphasized that the state should assume the major role in collecting taxes for support of schools, roads and health services, aand allocate the money to local units.

Spokesmen for the commissioners pointed to the state and federal governments as the "only agencies that can reach and tax concentrated wealth," and said the ad valorem tax on real estate in the localities struggling to perform these functions "amounts to a confiscatory tax and has proven inadequate."

The best methods for relieving counties of some of their present difficulties will be outlined to the commissoners in an address Tuesday by Graham Wright, county attorney of Floyd county. Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the University of Georgia, will speak on "The Place of Publicity and Education in Promoting Efficient and Economical Governmental Services."

H. T. McIntosh, president and editor of the Albany Herald, will address the convention Wednesday morning on "Future Relations Between the Federal Government and the County." Dr. M. E. Winchester, Glynn county commissioner of health, also will speak Wednesday. The subject of his addres will be "Replacing County Health United With District Health Units."

The commissioners will meet in the municipal auditorium. A session devoted to reports on legislative matters and shop talk will be held Monday afternoon, with M. W. Tift, of Dougherty county, presiding. The executive committee of the association will hold its annual meeting Monday evening at the Lanier hotel.

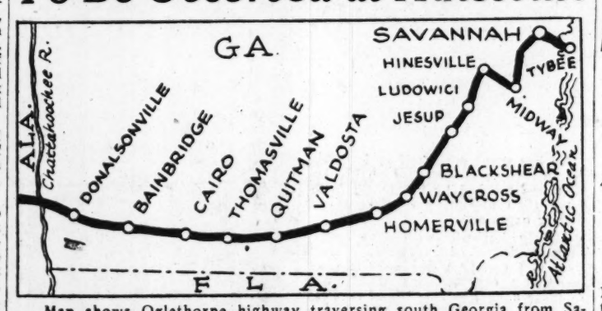

J. H. Griffeth, president of the association, will formally open the meeting Tuesday morning. Reports of officers will be given at this session and committees on resolutions and nominations will be named.

Memorial exercises will be held Tuesday morning for J. Frank Pittman, of Thomasville, former chairman of the executive committee; Fred Houser, Atlanta, formerly secretary-treasurer, and others.

A second session on shop talk will be held Tuesday afternoon, with the following speakers on the program: C. A. Matthews, DeKalb county commissioner; R. J. Kennedy, of Bulloch county; Malcolm B. McKinnon, Glynn county; Ed M. McKenzie, Macon county; T. G. Reeves, Muscogee county, and Percy Youmans, Decatur county.

Committee reports will be given and officers elected at Wednesday afternoon's session.

Oglethorpe Road Completion To Be Observed at Hinesville

Map shows Oglethorpe highway traversing south Georgia from Savannah to the Chattahoochee river on the west, a distance of 310 miles, the completion of the paving of which will be celebrated next Thursday with a monster motorcade and a barbecue at Hinesville, in Liberty county.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 12.—A motorcade of more than 100 automobiles is expected to move from Savannah next Thursday, May 17, to Hinesville, in Liberty county, and join in the monster celebration of the completion of the paving of Oglethorpe highway which will be held there.

Oglethorpe highway, is state highway number 38, and extends across the state from Savannah through Seminole county, where is crosses the Chattahoochee river into Alabama. With the completion of the last stretch of this road in Liberty county, it will now be possible to travel the entire distance from Dothan, Ala., to Savannah and on into Carolina on a paved road, passing through the counties coming from the west, of Seminole, Decatur, Grady, Thomas, Brooks, Lowndes, Lanier, Clinch, Ware, Pierce, Wayne, Long, Liberty, Bryan, Chatham. The entire distance of the road through Georgia is 310 miles and it is the only paved road across the state from east to west in south Georgia.

The exercises are to begin at Hinesville at noon and the motorcade from Savannah will be joined there by one, equally large, that will come from the western part of the state. Governor Talmadge will head a motorcade at McRae that will also arrive at Hinesville for the exercises. The governor will be the guest of honor and one of the speakers.

The three members of the highway board, W. E. Wilburn, chairman; Judge Max L. McRae and J. A. Heck, are expected as are M. E. Cox, G. C. Blount, H. G. Smith, G. B. Scott, D. D. Hankins and J. T. Marshall, engineers in the department, and C. D. Snead, of Montgomery, Ala., of the office of the bureau of public roads.

The east motorcade will leave Savannah at 10:30 o'clock and will be in charge of Edgar L. Wortsman, president of the Savannah Motor Club, as marshal of the day, and Stephen N. Harris, assistant marshal. Cars from the Carolinas and states further north will poin the motorcade here and cars will fall in line between here and Hinesville.

The Oglethorpe Highway Association, of which F. M. Oliver, is president, has been a moving factor in the building of this across-state highway. It was organized in 1926 and since that time has worked steadily toward completing the paving through the various counties which the road traverses. It is named for General James Howard Oglethorpe, founder of Georgia at Savannah.

Others in Savannah who have cooperated fully in the project include the Savannah Motor Club, E. L. Wortsman, president; Kiwanis Club, Jack Rabey, president; Savannah Chamber of Commerce, Harvey Granger, chairman of the good roads committee.

Of particular interest on the highway is the bridge across the Altamaha river, which, with the bridge, trestles, drawbridge and causeways, is seven miles long; the bridge across the river itself being 1,600 feet long. This is said to be the longest bridge of its kind in the southeast.

The exercises at Hinesville will begin at noon with the Liberty county Chamber of Commerce as host. D. S. Owen is president, J. B. Frazier is vice president, F. W. Mingledorff is secretary, and T. H. McDowell is treasurer of the Liberty chamber.

It is believed that 5,000 persons will be present and Hinesville is preparing a mighty feast for the visitors.

The principal speakers will be F. M. Oliver, head of the Oglethorpe Highway Association and Governor Talmadge, the guest of honor. Three-minute talks will be made by George W. Tiedman, chairman of the Chatham county board of commissioners; Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah; Perry Dukes, of Bryan county; Mell Price, Long county; S. F. Memory, Pierce county; Dave M. Parker, Ware county.

This highway will open up an east and west paved road into Savannah, as it being the second for Savannah, as the coastal highway to Florida has been open several years. With the completion of the all-paved road from Savannah to Atlanta, which event will be celebrated by a monster motorcade, sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution and the Savannah Morning News, when the last link is paved between Madison and Eatonton, this city will be the hub of three arterial paved roads.

Portrait of Mrs. Russell Unveiled Today at G. S. C. W.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 12. A mother of 15 children will be honored tomorrow, Mother's Day, with the presentation of a portrait of Ina Dillard Russell to officers in charge of the library building which bears her name at the Georgia State College for Women.

Friends of Mrs. Russell, who is the wife of Georgia's chief justice and mother of United States Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., arranged for the gift to the college from which five of her daughters have been graduated.

The portrait was painted by Vernon Layton, of Sandersville. It will be unveiled by Mrs. Russell's youngest daughter, Miss Carolyn Lewis Russell, a student at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, and Margaret Russell Rowden, of Savannah, youngest granddaughter.

Senator Russell came down from Washington for the ceremony. While the exercises were to be simple, in respect of the wishes of Mrs. Russell, a large gathering of distinguished visitors is expected for the occasion.

Thirteen of Mrs. Russell's children are living. The mother of this remarkable family recently summed up her life in these words: "I have had few sorrows and many joys; have lived quietly, some would say in seclusion and have found especial gratification in the service of my son, governor, and now Senator Russell. I have left my happy home for only a few months, and then it was to keep house for my son when he was governor. Especially am I happy in my children's work—the lawyers, teachers, doctor, preacher, and the married daughters, homemakers, mothers, church life has been of great benefit to me. . . . And for all this I am thankful every day."

Mrs. Russell, the daughter of an Oglethorpe county farmer, went to school at Rose Hill Academy in that county, and later attended Palmer Institute, Oxford, Ga., and Lucy Cobb Institute at Athens. She taught school for two years. In 1891 she married Richard Brevard Russell, then the solicitor-general of the Western circuit.

Mothers, who are members of the Milledgeville Baptist church, will have special seats of honor at the Mother's Day program which will be given Sunday night. Each mother who attends the service will be presented with a tiny bouquet and a basket of flowers will be given to the oldest and youngest mothers in the church, and to the mother who has been a member of the church the longest. Baskets will also be presented to several mothers whose children are members of the church.

Dr. Edwin H. Scott, dean of the Georgia State College for Women, will lead the devotional, and Miss Laurie Shurley, church organist will play a special musical program. A pageant will be put on under the direction of Mrs. C. B. McCullar depicting mothers of the past and present.

RETURNED MISSIONAIRIES TO BE WITH MOTHERS

WASHINGTON, Ga., May 12.—After an absence of seven years, and traveling some 13,000 miles, Rev. Marvin H. Harper will celebrate Mother's Day with his mother, Mrs. H. S. Harper at Albany. At the same time Mrs. M. H. Harper will be with her mother, Mrs. F. H. Ficklen, here. The Harpers landed at Boston the first of the week from Jubbulpore, India, where they were members of the faculty of the Leonard Theological College for seven years.

Over Seas

By CHARLES E. HARNER,
Associated Press Foreign Staff.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The modern conquistadoes, seeking the golden El Dorado which the Spanish found and lost, are moving on South America by air.

The Spaniards with their galleons took months and years on each trip in search of treasure; today's conquistadoes are cutting the time to days and hours.

They are flying in from the United States and Europe in a race where every minute counts.

Spanish galleons and fighting men went after gold and emeralds; airplanes and businessmen are going after billions of dollars in trade.

The European aspect of the South American race developed heatedly last week when General Victor Denain, France aviation minister, declared that he did not approve of a proposed combination of German and French flying interests designed to give Europe predominance in the South American field.

The minister did not mention it in his speech at Le Bourget flying field, but the aviation world has known for months past that Air France, the French international flying organization, and Luft Hansa, the German company, already have signed a working agreement. It has not been put into operation, for both companies are government subsidized affairs and the approval of their respective organization is necessary before such an arrangement is valid.

Apparently the diplomats encharged with obtaining governmental approval of the pact are awaiting developments which may force the issue.

The developments probably will not be long in coming.

One of them lies in a direction which is just starting to give Europe concern. The direction is east-Japan.

Japan has been cutting in on the trade of Great Britain and France with their colonies. That foreign colonial trade has grown so large that Great Britain declared a trade war against Nippon, throwing up import barriers in the colonies against Japanese goods.

The Japanese shrugged their shoulders figuratively and announced, in effect: "Very well. Then all we can do is expand our trade to other points, such as Latin America."

The Japanese do not speak idly. Their Latin American trade already has reached sizeable proportions. A concentrated drive for that trade will be an important world development.

Tut that phase of the problem is secondary in European minds to the threat of the United States.

Europe lost a large part of her contact with South America during the World War. The United States stepped in there. North American businessmen discovered to their surprise what the Spaniards learned 400 years ago: that huge business opportunities are to be found in the southern lands.

After the war when Great Britain, France, Germany, and Italy again took up their interests in South America, the businessmen of the United States discovered the "new" trade territory was almost as close to Europe by sea as it is to the United States.

So the present efficient inter-American air service was developed.

Today it gives American business houses a twice-a-week service from the United States down the west coast of South America and a weekly service down the east coast. Mail, passengers and express are carried.

This powerful development has been one of the leading factors in United States commerce in Latin America. It arose at a time when French and German air lines bid fair to give those nations supremacy there.

And the European nations most concerned have done their best to develop a counter-attack in the air.

German's Luft Hansa already is flying the south Atlantic, carrying the mail from Africa to America in two days.

The French are not far behind. Air France is operating a service of speedy dispatch boats which relay the air mail in three days between Dakar, Africa, and Natal, Brazil.

The close connection between this French enterprise and the French government may be seen from the fact that the dispatch boats are "adviso cruisers," formerly vessels of the French navy. Their use permits French mail to reach Buenos Aires in nine days.

That is about the same time required for mail from New York.

But if Luft Hansa and Air France actually carry out their combine agreement, such a combination of equipment will permit the European business houses to establish mail contact with the southern republics twice each week.

The American line already has foreseen that eventually and taken steps to forestall it by the development of the new S-42 flying boat, intended to put Rio de Janeiro on a four-day schedule with Miami.

That phase of the war will be unfolded this summer. What counter-steps Europe may take will be of intense interest to United States business.

Truck Hi-Jacked.

BALTIMORE, May 12.—(AP)—A heavily laden motor truck, en route from Baltimore to York, Pa., was hijacked of between 60 and 70 large cartons of cigarettes near here early today. Gordon Shive, the 22-year-old driver, of New York, was handcuffed and blindfolded and a $40 wrist watch taken from him.

Giant Storm Lashes Jupiter But Humans Need Not Worry

Dr. J. J. Nassau at his telescope in the Case observatory, and a sketch of the planet Jupiter, made by Dr. Nassau and showing the storm area.

By BONITA WITT.
Central Press Staff Writer.

CLEVELAND, May 12.—Although a tremendous storm on Jupiter, covering an estimated area 20,000 miles in length and 2,000 miles in width, has been observed by Professor J. J. Nassau, of Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, atmospheric disturbances on the earth cannot be blamed on Jupiter, he asserts.

No connection between storms such as the one now raging on Jupiter, 400,000,000 miles distant, and storms on the eath is evident, according to Dr. Nassau, neither does he believe that spots now appearing on the sun are responsible for the unusual activity on Jupiter.

Found Storm by Chance.

Dr. Nassau began observing Jupiter closely, recently, when he learned of the presence of an interesting black spot on its north equatorial belt. While searching for the black spot which indicated condensation, or what looked as if there were a "heavy accumulation of rain clouds," he saw the storm. A storm on Jupiter, just as on the earth, is a movement of great volumes of materials.

Describing his discovery, Dr. Nassau says, "While studying the black spot I noted a large white spot on the south equatorial belt. My assistant, Sidney McCuskey, confirmed what I saw. We calculated it to be 2,000 miles wide and 20,000 miles long, a storm of uncommon size. There is no explanation to be advanced for the disturbance in the upper parts of the atmosphere, although it probably is related to the black spot phenomenon."

Other storms on Jupiter have attained an estimated velocity of 200 miles an hour, but no calculations have been made as yet on the present one. As soon as he made his discovery, Dr. Nassau reported his findings to Harvard University observatory, which is the clearing house for scientific information. Astronomers throughout the world are notified so that they may train their telescopes on phenomena in which they are especially interested.

Rivals "Red Spot."

Astronomers at Harvard have declared that the present storm is the greatest they ever have seen, rivaling in interest the large red spot which was located on Jupiter in 1878.

Nightly, since his discovery, Dr. Nassau has trained his giant telescope upon Jupiter, where seasons as they are known on the earth do not exist and according to the present theory a solid coating of ice covers the planet, with a temperature of approximately 300 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Instead of diminishing in activity the storm area has been increasing with evidence of tremendous activity in the surrounding region.

HUNGARY APPEALS FOR LEAGUE HELP IN BORDER CRISIS

Commission Is Asked To Probe Conditions Along Jugoslav Frontier as Result of Killings.

GENEVA, May 12.—(AP)—A tense situation along the Jugoslavian-Hungarian border, which in three years has allegedly resulted in the deaths of 31 Hungarians, led Hungary today to appeal to the League of Nations for help.

In her unusual and unexpected memorandum, which declared the friction "might become a menace to the two countries" in view of the "present tense atmosphere of Europe," Hungary asked the League council to send an international commission to the district to investigate conditions.

This body would be enjoined to consolidate peaceful relations between the two countries, but, the note said, Hungary would accept some other pacific proposal if the council prefers not to send such a committee. The memorandum consists of 25 pages of complaints.

It emphasized that Hungary does not wish to make a "big political affair" of her differences with her neighbor, and insisted that the Hungarian aim is merely to direct the attention of the council to the matter "because in the presense tense atmosphere of Europe the situation might become a menace to the two countries."

Hungary asserted that 31 Hungarians have been killed at the frontier either by Jugoslavian authorities or through the illicit use of arms by frontier guards.

A parallel was drawn in the communication between relations on the Jugoslavian-Hungarian frontier and the Hungarian-Rumanian border. It was pointed out that on the latter no "murders" occurred.

In addition, Hungary complained against police measures taken by Jugoslavians against inhabitants of the border zone.

Every time Hungary sent Jugoslavia a complaint, the note went on, a "satisfying solution" was never offered.

League of Nations officials explained that while Hungary did not appeal under specific article of the League covenant, the memorandum made references to the second paragraph of Article 11.

This section declares that it is the friendly right of each member of the League ot bring to the League's attention any circumstances affecting international relations.

League officers assumed, therefore, that Hungary seeks action under this article.

An official League communique said Hungary has sent a request to the council to examine the circumstances "of a nature seriously to affect relations between Hungary and Jugoslavia with a view to finding a solution for a dispute."

The appeal was put on the agenda of problems to be considered at a council meeting beginning Monday.

Insignificant Shirt Parade of 12 Years Ago Gives Rise to New Political Faith for Millions

PREMIER BENITO MUSSOLINI.

(This is the first of a series of three articles tracing the history of fascism, nazi-ism, etc.)

By CENTRAL PRESS.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Twelve years ago, in northern Italy, 160 men began a shirt parade which since has swept the world, annihilating democracy, to destroy in a moment individual liberty achieved only through centuries of struggle.

What is this phenomenon—fascism—that has become the new political faith of millions, with its all-powerful dictators, fiery nationalism and destruction of independent labor? What are the seeds of revolt which causes a Mussolini, a Hitler, a Mustapha Kemal, or a Dollfuss to emerge triumphantly leading an army of black, red, blue, green, silver or khaki shirt-clad followers against the citadels of democratic governments?

Given a nation succumbing to the forces of economic depresison with millions of unemployed sympathetic to communism, workers subsisting on starvation wages, a middle class impoverished by inflation and taxation, farmers unable to market crops and trade, paralyzed by sky-high tariffs, fascism offers itself as a universal saviour. And in instances where military defeat has ended with territorial loss and financial reparations, the field is even more fertile for sowing.

State Is Supreme.

From the metal factories of Turin in 1919 to the socialist apartment blocks of Vienna in 1934—from fiery Mussolini to midget Dollfuss—runs a new historical theme; the supremacy of the state to regulate the most minute activity of the citizen, to demand and reecive unquestioned obedience.

When, after hundreds of years of humiliating dismemberment, Italy achieved national unity in 1871, she found herself too weak and inconsequential to amount to much among the leading European powers. Almost barren of national resources that would allow it to grow into a great industrial and exporting nation, feeble Italy sought consolation by futile imperialistic forays into Africa seeking colonies that ended disastrously.

Even the Mediterranean, in which Italy logically should be supreme, was regarded as English and French preesrve. Therefore she went into the camp of the only group which might be of benefit and created with Germany and Austria-Hungary, the triple alliance, though the latter possessed Trieste and territory Italy claimed as her own historically.

But when the great war began, Italy forced by her socialist and liberal parties refused to enter on the grounds that her allies had not been attacked first. Pacifist to the core, the trade unions insisted upon ignoring a "capitalist" war, and called upon workers throughout Europe to refuse to fight.

Il Duce Enters.

Benito Mussolini, fiery editor of Avanti, official paper of the socialist party, published, nevertheless, an editorial demanding Italy's union with the western powers. For this he was expelled from the ranks, and the next day, blossomed out with a new journal, Popolo d'Italia, of which he is still editor, repeating his words. With the signing of the secret London treaty, Italy entered the conflict by the promise of large slices of territory.

When Premier Orlando returned to a tottering homeland from Versailles, with only a portion of the spoils, the

FRANCE LAUNCHES NEW AERIAL, NAVAL BUILDING PROGRAM

Announcement Regarded Significant in View of Germany's Expressed Intention of Rearming.

PARIS, May 12.—(UP)—With the collapse of European disarmament efforts, France opened naval maneuvers on a vast scale today and announced a further naval and aerial building program.

Francois Pietri, minister of the navy, revealed that a second supercruiser of the Dunkerque type, designed to offset Germany's formidable "pocket" battleships, would be built immediately. It may be laid down in a private shipyard because the government arsenals and shipbuilding plants are crowded.

He also said the navy had decided to build heavy seaplanes as "indispensable for the defense of the fleet." Also, he declared, the chamber of deputies will be asked to rush naval building credits through as soon as parliament opens.

The announcement was regarded as significant, in view of Germany's expressed intention of rearming herself in the air, against French protests. Britain, realizing that general disarmament is dead, has made a last effort to salvage something from the wreckage by proposing an agreement on aerial limitation, but France is unwilling to go even that far, in view of Germany's attitude.

Arthur Henderson, British president of the moribund arms conference, returned to London today after a conference here with Louis Barthou, French foreign minister. He was understood to have taken back word to Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal and arms expert, that France is disinclined at present to join a convention for limiting air forces.

Henderson was understood to have proposed to France a convention along the following lines:

1. Bombing from the air would be permissible only for police purposes in certain outlying regions. This would permit Britain and France to cope with native insurrections in remote colonies, but would assure the uneasy cities of Europe against the terrors of bombing and poison gas.

2. Bombing also would be permissible against submarines. Barthou particularly declined to consider the second proposal, construing it as being directed against France, which has a formidable submarine fleet.

The British scheme was said to have stipulated that "disarmament to an equal scale of military and naval aircraft shall take place within five years, and in each state, shall be by 20 per cent annually of the difference in numbers between existing air forces and the air force strength suggested in the equality scale of the plan."

The British propose that military and naval aircraft shall be limited to two tons in weight and a maximum speed of 110 miles per hour. Moreover, naval aircraft carriers would be abolished within five years.

Nearly all of France's naval might was assembled at the western end of the English channel today, off Brest and Cherbourg, for the greatest naval maneuvers in the country's history. Three hundred thousand tons of warships, including the largest submarine and the fastest destroyers in the world, were assembled for the maneuvers.

They will continue for one month along the lines of a mimic defense of the French coast against an invader. Land troops equipped with the most modern weapons of war will join with warships on the seas, submarines under the waters and great planes in the air.

BRAZIL DOUBLES OUTPUT OF COTTON

South American Nation Not as Yet Viewed as Serious Rival for U. S.

SAO PAULO, May 12.—(AP)—Brazil has doubled its cotton production and expects its biggest export year in a long time, but has not yet reached the stage where it threatens serious competition with the United States and other leading exporters.

Percy K. Norris, agronomist of the United States department of agriculture, who is here studying the Brazilian situation, expressed the opinion that internal consumption will leave a relatively small export surplus, even with the increased production.

310,000,000 Pounds.

Brazilian production for 1934 is estimated at 310,000,000 pounds, of which Sao Paulo, where plantings have increased tremendously, will account for 176,000,000.

Inasmuch as Brazilian exports outside of Sao Paulo are not important in the world trade, and the production increase is centered in this state, Sao Paulo will be responsible for most of the exports, which may reach a total of more than 40,000 tons.

Sao Paulo's increase in cotton production is due partially to coffee overproduction and decreased wages for farm laborers, which has lowered cotton production costs and made growing of the fiber more profitable.

To Britain.

Most of the Sao Paulo surplus will go to Great Britain, although a Japanese trade mission has shown interest, and has predicted that "Japan can buy all the cotton Brazil can produce."

Dr. Garibaldi Dantas, chief of the cotton classification service in Sao Paulo, however, said that Brazilian possibilities in the Japanese market are nothing to get excited about.

"I believe that reports attempting to see the Paulista exportation a danger for the United States have no foundations," said Dr. Dantas. "If Sao Paulo sends 100,000 bales to Japan, it will have reached the maximum possibilities at present."

Only experimental shipments have been made to Japan thus far.

'DEATH ROCKETS' ALARM PARISIANS

Alleged Bases Being Built by Germans Give Rise to New Fears.

PARIS, May 12.—(U.P.)—Death rockets may win, or lose, "the next war," according to alarmist articles in the French press.

Following investigation of reports on German rearmament, certain French newspapers, and particularly those near the Rhine frontier, have begun a campaign to awaken the war and air ministry to the actual perils of Germany's warlike preparations.

Seek Information.

Special emphasis is placed on the construction of rocket bases in Germany, placed at an average of 30 kilometers from the frontier. One newspaper asserts that Germany is constructing these bases in reinforced concrete from which a projectile called "fusees" may be shot to a distance of 200 kilometers.

These projectiles can cover all strategic points, such as railroads, roads, stations, forts, and each "fusee" will have a destruction area of several thousand square meters.

Rocket Bases.

It is shown that if Germany should install such rocket bases from Belgium to Switzerland, making about 5,000 rocket guns in all, it would be possible to dump 50,000 tons of projectiles on France in a single night. This would represent for each base an average of ten tons per hour, comprising ten fusees of 100 kilograms each, firing every six minutes.

According to the watchful newspapers nearer the Rhine, Germany is planning an altogether new kind of warfare for the future. It is pointed out that the dangers of the last war lay in the so-called "tactical surprises" that each side invented, such as Germany's liquid gas and Britain's armored tanks. These newspapers assert that the so-called Maginot wall is perhaps invincible, and that the new French fortifications may be unbreakable, but at the same time it is asked of what use will be fortifications if all France lies dead and burned behind them?

'Fool's Gold' Proves To Be Rich Ore After Discoverer Drops From Sight

DURANGO, Col., May 12.—(UP) It was just a dull, somber afternoon in Newton's cafe here. The noon rush was over and the cook and help were marking time until the evening dinner trade began arriving.

In walked a young man. No, he didn't want food. He wanted to see the preprietor.

He wasted no time in preliminaries. "Mr. Newton," he said, "I have been out of work for several months. I want to have a try at prospecting, and am asking you to grubstake me. We'll split 50-50 on what I find if I find anything."

After some consideration, Newton decided to take a chance. He bought the boy camp equipment, tools, and supplies.

Some two weeks later he returned waving a chunk of rock.

"I can get truckloads of this stuff from the top of the ground," he shouted.

Examination showed the white quartz was shot through with veins of yellow metal.

A wise old prospector, lunching in the cafe, hitched up his trousers, walked over and took a squint at the rock.

"Hmmhp," he snorted, "just iron pyrites—absolutely no value. Generally called fool's gold because nobody but a fool would think it's gold."

The disappointed youth left without telling Newton where he had found the quartz. Newton thought no more about the incident.

Several weeks later a mining engineer dropped into the cafe and saw a specimen of the ore.

"Where did you get that specimen of ore?" he asked Newton. "It is one of the richest I have seen in a long time."

Newton sent the specimen to an assayer. It assayed over $5,000 to the ton. Now Newton is looking for the boy.

Louisiana Sheriff Bans 'Share Wealth'

SHREVEPORT, La., May 12.—(AP) Sheriff T. R. Hughes today declared a ban on negro "share the wealth societies" in Shreveport and Caddo parish.

Addressing a warning to white organizers and negro members of such groups, Sheriff Hughes said:

"There is no law in the whole United States which will permit one man taking away the property of another, or dividing it up among any group, and no such propaganda or organizations having this as their purpose can be permitted or will be permitted in Shreveport or Caddo parish."

Hirota, Japanese Spokesman, Knows West But Loves Nippon

TOKYO, May 12.—(AP)—Koki Hirota, Nippon's buffer in the diplomatic clash arising from the "Asia for the Asiatics" manifesto of his foreign ministry, is firstly a Japanese, second an oriental.

He has spent most half of his adult life in foreign lands but probably has been less touched by occidental influences than any of his colleagues of similar experience.

Deeply imbued with the semi-religious brand of Nipponese patriotism, and closely allied with the nationalistic organizations which play so large a part in this island empire's politics, he is steeped in the Chinese and Japanese classics, especially the lore of Confucius.

Nationalistic journals have published complaints in the past that diplomats of Nippon become "tainted" with internationalism after long sojourns broad, or "softened" by the western world's comforts.

Follows Predicted Course.

No such charge has been leveled at Hirota. Although he announced on assuming the foreign ministry that he desired friendly relations with western powers and backed this up by exchanging cordial notes with Secretary of State Hull, he believes devoutly that his country should chart its own diplomatic course and hold it.

When he became foreign minister last September, Tokyo newspapers predicted he would strive for recognition of a "Monroe Doctrine for Asia," the principal point of which seems to be checking spread of American and European influence in lands lapped by the Pacific.

Yet enunciation of this tenet coupled with definition of Japan as protector of peace in eastern Asia, put him in a difficult position as inquiries as to its true meaning came from London and Washington.

Underling Spilled Beans.

The cabinet asked him to tell all about it and one version of the discussion which gained wide credence in newspaper and diplomatic circles had it that publication of the manifesto was made by a subordinate in the foreign office without Hirota's knowledge.

This version related that the manifesto which raised a worldwide storm was intended in the first place only as a set of instructions to the Japanese minister of China.

That these instructions became instead a means of "telling the world" where Japan stands, was, his intimates say, a blow to Hirota's pride. Extreme caution against such errors of commission has been one of his outstanding marks.

Master Lauds Pupil.

Hirota was born in 1878 in Fukuoka prefecture, a breeding ground of stalwart patriots. His father was a stone dealer and the future diplomat gained his university education with the help of Mitsuru Toyama, guiding genius of the Genyosha, a semi-secret nationalist society.

Hirota joined that society in his youth and the close association with the venerable Toyama has persisted. Not long ago Hirota referred to the patron of his youth as "the master" and Toyama remarked that the only present-day Japanese diplomat worth his salt was Hirota.

ACTION BY LEAGUE URGED FOR CHACO

Committee Called On by Peace Forces To Forestall 'Catastrophe.'

By JOSEPH E. SHARKEY.

GENEVA, May 12.—(AP)—The world's forces of peace were called on tonight by the League of Nations Chaco committee to "arrest the development of a catastrophe" in the border warfare between Paraguay and Bolivia.

The commission, which had sought in vain to end the years-long struggle between the South American nations, urged arbitration to settle the war and recommended that other countries refuse henceforth to send war materials to the combatants.

"To arrest the development of this catastrophe, the commission considers that the combined action by all forces of peace working together in harmony is needed," the report declared.

"It is essential that the system of intervention should come to an end. If the parties can feel even after the failure of the various efforts that have been made, that the League of Nations is not the final authority, but that they can still contemplate the possibility of intervention from other quarters, the cause of peace will be gravely jeopardized."

The commission suggested arbitration of the frontier dispute between the two countries before the permanent court of international justice.

The report says that the war in the Chaco is "a singularly pitiless and horrible war, with soldiers fighting in the bush with inadequate medical treatment. Both countries are growing poorer and their future seems darker and darker."

The plan of peace submitted to Paraguay and Bolivia by the commission, calling for arbitration, is entirely fair, the report said, but there are several obstacles to peace.

The recent charges and counter-charges made by the two nations have embittered the conflict, the report said, and another obstacle is that each country seems convinced that the military situation will become more favorable to her within a short time.

Paraguay was represented as believing that it is only a question of time before Bolivia will be completely defeated, while Bolivia hopes for a wider scope of arbitration if Paraguay's military forces are unable to continue their present vigorous campaign.

On the subject of oil the report said: "Oil, which according to certain unverified reports exists everywhere in the Chaco actually has been discovered in the western region which the Paraguayan army recently approached."

BOLIVIAN POSITIONS BOMBARDED FROM AIR

ASUNCION, Paraguay, May 12.—(AP)—Bolivian positions in the Gran Chaco were peppered with bombs today, when Paraguay loosed her fleet of bombardment planes against the enemy that has threatened to hurl death upon Asuncion from the air.

Rather than wait for the Bolivians to make good their threat, the Paraguayans attacked with a vengeance. For hours their birdmen swooped back and forth over the enemy outposts, dropping high explosives.

The Vanguardia front where the Bolivians have dug in, bore the brunt of the attack. Machine-gunners subjected the assailants to a hot counter-fire, but reports available here mention no casualties among the airmen.

Meanwhile, the Paraguayans claim to have neatly turned an enemy offensive on the Bolivian front to their own gain. Official accounts of the battle say the Bolivian troops were permitted to penetrate the Paraguayan lines, then were surrounded and captured.

TRIPLE PACT SEEN ON STABILIZATION

Duce and Child Discuss Hopes for Accord With Great Britain.

ROME, May 12.—(AP)—A tri-power currency stabilization agreement among the United States, Great Britain and Italy—which would force France to join them—was understood tonight to be one of the topics discussed during a meeting between Premier Mussolini and Richard Washburn Child.

The discussion lasted 45 minutes. At its conclusion Mr. Child, investigator of European economic conditions for the American administration, declined to comment except to say that he found Il Duce "extremely cordial and interesting."

It was reliably learned, however, that the question of stabilization occupied the major portion of the conference.

The proposition was said to have been advanced that Italy join with the United States and England in a stabilization agreement. Such an accord, it was thought, might also force France to join whether she wanted to or not.

The argument was advanced, it was said, that price levels on the European continent are out of proportion in relation to those of the United States and Britain and can be smoothed out only through a stabilization understanding.

This would mean a currency pegging on a lower scale for France and Italy. The levelling of world prices would have the effect of lowering tariffs and produce a greater commercial interchange.

Reliable circles declared that Premier Mussolini was interested in the reported project.

In consequence, Mr. Child is expected to give Il Duce further details. The unofficial American envoy has talked over economic and financial questions with government leaders in several European capitals.

The question of Italy's war debts to the United States was not discussed, it was learned, and the Italian premier did not inquire regarding the nature of recent declarations in Washington about the matter.

A bilateral commercial treaty between Italy and the United States was reported to have been discussed in general term, and also the question of barter as a means of breaking down trade barriers.

Mr. Child has several visits still to make with Italian officials, including Alberto Beneduce, head of the Institute for Industrial Reconstruction, before he leaves for Vienna and Budapest early next week.

LION OIL PROPERTIES PURCHASED BY SHELL

HOUSTON, Texas, May 12.—(AP)—The Shell Petroleum Corporation today confirmed reports that it had purchased the Lion Oil Corporatoin properties in Rusk county, east Texas, for $1,500,000.

The properties consist of 250 acres of oil land and 33 wells with a total daily production of 1,000 barrels. A substantial cash payment was involved.

'PAY OR DEFAULT,' BRITAIN IS WARNED

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—Great Britain was told by the United States today to pay her war debts or be declared a defaulter.

As a result, two alternatives face the cabinet, which early next week will tussle once more with the persistent debts problem:

First, to make a token payment anyway as evidence of good faith and willingness to negotiate for a solution, and, second, outright default, in the hope of forcing a quicker solution.

The matter was put squarely before the London government by Cordell Hull, American secretary of state, through the British ambassador in Washington, Sir Ronald Lindsay. The Johnson bill, said Mr. Hull, makes necessary a new American policy by which token payments in lieu of full installments June 15 could only be regarded as evidence of default.

Uncertainty at End.

The notification ended several days of uncertainty regarding the American position, and was the climax of a week of important developments in the general government program, including the start of a trade war with Japan and the enunciation of stiffened British arms policies.

The attitude of both the Washington and London governments was interpreted as showing a mutual willingness to arrive at a new basis of payments and a final solution. Each, however, insists the other must make the first definite proposal.

High governmental authorities here expressed the view that President Roosevelt is at the mercy of congress, especially because of coming elections, that that he necessarily had to enunciate a "pay up" policy in order to eliminate the issue from domestic politics.

The British, therefore, believe the American administration's actual attitude is more conciliatory than appears on the surface and that "deadlock" is not a true description of the situation.

Some official circles, here, however, seemed inclined to believe that moves toward a solution on the part of Washington may be impossible until after congressional elections.

British Statement Seen.

The British government, it was officially learned tonight, is considering making a statement on debt policies before the house of commons next week.

In this connection remarks on debts made by the foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, in an address at Manchester were pointed to as a possible indication—although Sir John declared he was speaking "for myself" only. He asserted that arguments for payment based on a British budget surplus were "fallacious" in that the problem involved the transfer of huge sums in money, rather than in goods.

Secretary Hull notified Sir Ronald that token payments must be regarded as defaults under the Johnson bill providing that United States money markets be closed to all nations defaulting on debts.

COMMISSION RULE FOR CITY SOUGHT

Move for New Referendum Seen as Opposition to Council Slash.

Opposition to reduction of the Atlanta city council Saturday was crystalizing when Council Joseph E. Berman of the fourth ward, announced he would offer a proposal at the Monday night meeting of the special charter revision committee seeking a referendum for a commission form of government as opposed to the present 39-member council.

Berman, a consistent recent opponent of reduction in council personnel, announced he would fight any reduction program, and would seek a referendum on the commission issue. Already there has been an overwhelmingly favorable city-wide referendum for reduction of council to 18 members, and Millican's committee is on record favoring such a cut.

Proponents of the reduction plan dubbed Berman's move an attempt to becloud the issue and to muddle the committee in its deliberations. The reduction measure is slated to be the major matter under consideration at Monday night's meeting of the committee at the Ansley hotel.

"I feel that if we are to reduce council to any marked degree the people should have a right to vote on whether they favor a commission," Berman said. "Any large reduction would be virtually a commission form of government. If the people vote for a commission form of government, I will support it."

It is Berman's plan to put his proposal on the ballot in the September 26 primary. Alderman I. Gloer Hailey, of the ninth ward, reiterated Saturday he will ask the city democratic committee to place a referendum for daylight-saving time on the ballot in the primary.

Despite the Berman suggestion, Alderman G. Everett Millican, chairman of the special committee and champion of the reduction program, asserted he will insist that the committee approve a council membership cut in line with the referendum already held.

Clear and Warmer Weather for Today

Clear weather, only a shade warmer than Saturday, was promised for Atlanta today, Mother's day, by the weather bureau Saturday. Temperature extremes of 60 to 80 degrees were expected, followed by light showers late tonight and Monday—too late to interfere with the day's observance.

Saturday's temperature ranged between 60 and 78 degrees, with clear skies and sunshine.

Cheshire Cat, for All He Grins, Is No Optimist, Expert Says

BY

By RUTH FOWLER BROWN.

Practical-Analytical Type. Here is a pessimistic person; overly sensitive. Strong in opinions and not averse to expressing them. Yet a sincere person.

The Cheshire Cat in "alice in Wonderland" wore a perpetual grin. But he was not an optimist. He was merely silly. To be an optimist a person need not imitate a laughing hyena, nor need the corners of his lips be always turned skyward as though a plastic surgeon had made a mistake.

Optimism is simply self-confidence in events. The optimist may not believe that there is a pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, but he does believe that the search will reveal something worth while and so is worth the trouble.

Are you an optimist?

Optimism and pessimism are two of the easiest of all traits to determine from handwriting. Anyone can do it. All you need is a sample of the handwriting of your friend or neighbor and you can tell instantly whether he has an optimistic, sunny disposition or is a confirmed pessimist who always sees the dark side of things.

Sincerely
Anita Page

Script of Anita Page, film star. Practical-Cultural Type. Reveals unfailing optimism, plus dramatic ability, much artistic talent, a liking for outdoor sports and exercise, and the ability to handle details.

wasn't very funny

I'll tell you the secret. Here are two specimens of handwriting that will show you how to do it. The first is the script of Anita Page, film star, whose sunny disposition is known and liked wherever Hollywood actors and actresses gather. She writes UP hill. Nothing can daunt her. The harder it rains the more certain she is of seeing a rainbow.

The second script is the writing of a pessimist. To her the world is all wrong. Humanity is going to the bow-wows. She writes DOWN hill.

Why a Pessimist?

We all know that the optimist is the fellow who brings us hope when things go wrong, the one who is not only light-hearted himself but who lends encouragement to others.

But what of the pessimist? What is he good for?

It takes all sorts of people to make a world, and the pessimists are here to make the optimists think. Without someone to advance unfavorable opinions and theories we might overlook the dark side of things, the hidden dangers, and so ride on to disaster. There are two sides to every question, and the pessimist is useful in helping us to see both sides. Often he is right.

So, if you are a pessimist, you need not be particularly worried or ashamed of it. Without you the optimists might have a very hard time of it.

But very few pessimists have much charm of personality. Their gloomy appearance, their dire forebodings, their dismal outlook—these do not make for popularity. If you have been wondering why you don't make friends easily and why you have so much trouble in keeping those you do make, perhaps it is your unoptimistic spirit that is causing the trouble.

Look over your personality. Perhaps a little change may work wonders for you.

Just as your handwriting reveals whether you are an optimist or pessimist, so will it tell many other things about your personality—things you ought to know. Perhaps you don't believe that handwriting reveals personality—many people don't. The coupon printed on this page will enable you to test out Mrs. Brown's ability for yourself.

She will make an individual, and confidential, check of your character traits—good and bad—and, in addition, without extra charge will send you a copy of her fascinating little pamphlet, "The Greatest Sin," and also her famous vocational chart which shows the basic character requirements of 110 different trades, occupations and professions. Many have found their best niche in life with the help of this chart and it may aid you in finding yourself or it may give you renewed self-confidence to follow your present line of work.

But please read the coupon carefully and follow the three simple rules exactly.

40,000 Georgians Gave $100,000 For Georgia Hall, Report Shows

A final report of the Georgia hall campaign, showing the use made of the $100,000 building fund contributed by more than 40,000 Georgians, was made public Saturday by Cason J. Callaway and Cator Woolford, chairman and vice chairman of the committee, following their return from Washington, where they attended a meeting of the board of trustees of the Warm Springs Foundation at the White House. The receipts and expenditures statement made public by the committee was prepared by Richardson, Jackson and company certified public accountants, and showed that the original goal of $100,000 was reached and that the entire amount contributed went into the building of Georgia hall with no part of the funds used for any outside expense.

The disbursements consisted of $88,640.48 to Batson-Cook Co., contractors; $3,667.90 to Gugler and Tombes, architects; $800 to James F. Pent, resident engineer; $1,892.15 to Meriwether county for grading and the remaining $4,999.47 for hardware, light fixtures, contractor's bond, insurance and electric wiring.

The campaign was different in that not one cent of the money contributed was used to defray any part of the campaign expenses. The entire amount used for this purpose, totaling $5,734.03, was borne jointly by Mr. Woolford and Mr. Callaway in addition to substantial gifts which they made to the building funds.

At the outset of the campaign the committee endeavored to get as many as possible interested in the project, that the building might be representative from Georgians in all parts of the state. The number of donors totaled 41,140 in 118 counties, and 40 former Georgians and others outside the state. The cash gifts amounted to $98,629.25 and donations of materials which were used in lieu of cash, totaled $1,370.75. The names of all donors are listed in the book "Builders of Georgia Hall," which was presented to President Roosevelt at the dedication dinner last November, and which is now in Georgia hall as a permanent record of those who made the building possible.

The building committee that directed the project, composed of Mr. Callaway, Mr. Woolford, James W. Woodruff, Columbus; R. Dewitt King, Atlanta, and Arthur E. Carpenter, resident trustee of the foundation, was praised by the president for the administration of the funds and careful planning that made it possible to build so fine and complete a structure for $100,000. The building, originally designed to cost $250,000, was built when building costs were at their lowest level and represents now a value almost twice the amount spent in its construction.

The campaign for Georgia hall was begun last spring and all funds were raised and the building brought to completion in about nine months' time.

All for about 14¢ a week!

All You Do

Millen Under Guard After Escape Attempt

DEDHAM, Mass., May 12.—(AP)—Subdued and returned to his cell after attacking a state trooper and grabbing for his revolver in a daring attempt to escape, Irving Millen was kept under careful watch at Dedham jail today.

Millen, one of the trio on trial for the killing of Policeman Forbes McLeod in the Needham Trust company robbery, jumped upon the trooper, John T. Brown, while exercising in the pit of the jail last night.

The prisoner almost had Brown's pistol from the holster before Brown and a second trooper, T. T. Fitzgerald, beat him to the floor after a struggle. Millen made his dive for the weapon while Fitzgerald stood some distance away guarding the entrance to the pit.

Counsel for Millen and the other accused killers—his brother, Murton, and Abe Faber—will begin presentation of the defense Monday. The trial was recessed over the week-end after the prosecution rested yesterday.

INSULL RECEIVES KIN IN HOSPITAL

Brother and Grandson Visit Former Magnate on First Day's Freedom.

CHICAGO, May 12.—(AP)—His forced attendance in courtrooms over for a while, Samuel Insull held a court of his own in his hospital room today for his brother and the three-year-old grandson he had not seen in two years.

It was his first day of freedom from custody since Turkish officers took him off the Greek freighter Maiotis, and Martin Insull took the opportunity to come from Morocco, Ind., for the first visit since their paths of flight separated.

The spare, erect junior partner of the Insull brothers walked into St. Luke's hospital and told the attendant he wished to see Samuel Insull.

"Very sorry," the clerk said, "but Mr. Insull is absolutely forbidden to see any visitors."

Even telephone calls to his bedside have been cut off. But Martin Insull identified himself and was admitted to the 40-story bedroom his brother occupies as a hospital guest, a reciprocal gesture in appreciation of past gifts by Insull and the $100,000 that was St. Luke's share of a benefit performance a decade or so back, when Mrs. Insull, the former Gladys Wallis, returned to the stage for a charity revival of "A School for Scandal."

Martin chatted with his brother for an hour and 20 minutes, leaving in a taxicab without offering comment on their reunion.

Despite the fact that Samuel and Martin were indicted jointly by federal and county grand juries on the various charges of fraudulent use of the mails, violation of the national bankruptcy act, larceny and embezzlement from their companies' treasuries, it was unlikely they would be tried together.

Late in the day the three generations of Samuel Insull got together—Samuel Insull, founder of the name and the fortune now depleted; Samuel II, shorn of the high offices he once held but now operating assistant to the chairman of the Chicago Utilities Companies; and Samuel III, who was a year-old babe and heir apparent to millions when his grandfather last saw him before he sailed for Europe in 1932.

Nation's Leading Railroads Reflect Improved Conditions

First Quarter Figures Indicate Steady Gain in Fight to Conquer Depression's Grip.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—America's $20,000,000,000 railroad system, taken as a whole, failed to make the grade leading to profitable operations for the year 1933, but with a fresh head of steam and sand on the rails, the system may make it this year.

If business and trade maintain or better their current levels during the remainder of the year, students of the carriers' situation say the statistics indicate the roads in the aggregate can earn their fixed charges for 1934, and show a small net income. The roads have a chance, therefore, of defeating the depression, financially speaking, for the first time since 1931.

The railroads have spent the last three years trying to escape the sheriff's hands and to prove they can operate efficiently on the basis of private ownership. Only by leaning heavily on the federal government, however, have they been able to meet fixed charges for the past two years, for operations resulted in substantial losses in 1932 and 1933. Loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have been responsible in many instances for staving off insolvency.

In 1931, the Class 1 railroads ended the year with income after all charges of $116,362,000. But in 1932, the roads met insurmountable obstacles in the way of declining traffic and lost $150,634,000 after payment of bond interest, fixed rental charges, etc. The recovery of business in the spring of 1933, although causing a rapid improvement in the carrier's position, was not quite sufficient to offset the heavy losses incurred in the first three months, and the roads were forced to lose $13,801,000 for the year as a whole.

This year, the relative improvement registered over the first quarter of 1933 has been striking largely because the carriers' operations hit rock bottom in this period a year ago, the quarter which embraced the national banking holiday and the virtual cessation of business activity in many lines.

Carloading and operating income figures for the remainder of the year may show less impressive gains over a year ago, and may even lag behind, since they must stand comparison with the vastly improved figures which accompanied the sweeping pick-up in trade after the banking holiday of 1933.

The Class 1 railroads' income account for the first two months of this year compares with the like period of the preceding two years, as follows:

Net operating income, 1934, $60,291,000; 1933, $23,719,000; 1932, $33,035,000.

Other income, 1934, $25,762,000; 1933, $26,842,000; 1932, $30,839,000.

Total income, 1934, $85,972,000; 1933, $50,561,000; 1932, $63,875,000.

Interest, rents, etc., 1934, $112,356,000; 1933, $113,763,000; 1932, $112,195,000.

Net loss, 1934, $26,385,000; 1933, $63,202,000; 1932, $48,321,000.

Net operating income in March is estimated at $51,986,000 by the bureau of railway economics, bringing the total for the first quarter to $112,277,000. In 1933, net operating income in the first quarter was $34,569,000 and totaled only $10,850,000 in March. In 1931, when fixed obligations last were earned for the year as a whole, net operating income amounted to $46,478,000 in March and $108,675,000 in the first quarter.

In other words, the roads show a gain of almost 400 per cent over March, a year ago, and of more than 15 per cent over the 1931 month, as well as a slight gain over the first quarter of 1931. While the decline in other income from 1931 will offset this gain, total iucome in March, nevertheless, appears to have been large enough to cover fixed charges for the month by a substantial margin.

The first quarter ordinarily is the poorest of the year, with the possible exception of the last. The second quarter usually registers a sharp improvement over the first, and the third quarter produces the best results of all, with October bringing the seasonal traffic rise to a peak.

Thus, the roads have made a quick get-away toward their goal of meeting fixed obligations for the calendar year, even though coming months may not stand favorable comparison with the boom period of 1933.

On the other side of the picture are several factors which will work against a very rapid expansion in earnings. One is the new wage agreement which becomes effective on July 1, and will cost the roads an additional $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 in wages in the second semester.

On July 1, the wage reduction of 10 per cent made in accordance with the agreement of January 31, 1932, will be mitigated to a deduction from pay rolls of only 7 1-2 per cent. After January 1, 1935, the reduction will be only 5 per cent, and after April 1, 1935, former wage sales will be restored in full, at an estimated annual cost to the roads of around $120,000,000.

DR. TYLER DENNETT WILL HEAD WILLIAMS

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 12. (UP)—Dr. Tyler Dennett, 50, Princeton professor, 1934 Pulitzer prize winner historian, and former Congregational minister, today was elected president of Williams College, where he played on the varsity football team some 30 years ago.

Selection of Dr. Dennett by a committee of trustees climaxed a nation-wide search for a successor to Dr. Harry A. Garfield, son of a former president of the United States, who in June retires after 26 years as head of one of the nation's oldest colleges.

Only a few days ago Dr. Dennett's biography of John Hay, a former secretary of state, was awarded the Pulitzer prize as the year's best work in American biography. Author of several important works on diplomatic history, mostly regarding relations with the near and far east, he himself was connected with the state department as editor and historical adviser from 1924 through 1931.

He is a native of Spencer, Wis.

Beam Will 'Capture' Speeders of Future

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 12. (UP)—The day when an occasional speeder can stand before the judge and successfully match his word against that of the motorcycle officer is almost at an end.

Scientists at Massachusetts Institute of Technology have placed the gauging of highway speed on a foolproof basis, so that before long the arresting officer will merely submit evidence recorded by one of several types of instruments.

The calculating winks of two electrical eyes feature one of the new mechanical speed cops. Placed beside a highway, its photoelectric eyes shoot parallel beams of light across the road. As each beam in turn is intercepted by a passed car, the eyes blink successively. From the brief intervals between the blinks, delicate electrical instruments measure the time required to cover the distance between the eyes.

CLEARING TO BEGIN SAN DOMINGO PARK

Actual work of constructing San Domingo state park on the site of the mission established by the Spaniards in the 16th century near the mouth of the Altamaha river, will be started Monday when a civilian conservation corps company will begin clearing the 300-acre area.

State Forester B. M. Lufburrow said Saturday that the first work to be done on the park will be the clearing of grounds, construction of roads and bridges.

After that has been finished, the work of restoring the old Spanish structures, preserving others, and beautification of the entire group will be started.

The remains of the old San Domingo mission and the early Spanish settlements along the coast, some of which antedate the Spanish missions of California, will be featured in the park development.

The lands and ruins of the old mission were given to the state by Cator Woolford, of Atlanta, and plans for its development call for one of the most beautiful parks in the eastern United States.

On the park area are the remains of an old plantation manor, slave quarters, stables and other structures. Some of these buildings will be restored and markers will be placed on others, the idea being to give visitors some idea of a typical coast plantation where landed aristocracy flourished in pre-Civil War days.

The first Spanish settlement in the state was established by General Mendes at St. Catherine island in 1566. Other settlements and missions were established in rapid succession on islands and the mainland. The region was named Guale and designated a province of Florida. Just how much territory was embraced in the Guale province is not well defined, but the coastal islands off the Georgia coast are known to this day as "The Golden Isles of Guale."

Three Jesuit priests were brought to Guale by General Mendes but they were so harassed by the Indians that they migrated to Virginia, and were succeeded by the Franciscans in 1595, establishing missions at St. Catherine, St. Simons, Jekyl island, Sapelo island and at several spots on the mainland.

The uprising of 1597 wiped out the missions and the Spanish governor of Florida retaliated by destroying the crops of the Talaxe Indians, who in 1601 asked for peace and shortly the Friars came again to Guale. Among them was Fray Diego Delgado, who established what was later known as San Domingo mission.

San Domingo was the last mission in Georgia to be given up by the Spaniards.

The civilian conservation corps company has established headquarters on Blythe island, near the mainland, where the members may indulge in bathing and have the benefit of the sea breezes while they go about their work.

Last Staff Member For Lee Is 96

MATTHEWS, Va., May 12.—(AP) Major Giles B. Cook, last surviving member of the staff of General Robert E. Lee, Confederate leader, will celebrate his ninety-sixth birthday at his home near here tomorrow.

Major Cook, a retired Episcopal minister, was chaplain to General Lee and his staff during the War Between the States. He is a member of a well-known Virginia family and a descendant of the half legendary Mordecai Cook, who once owned "Mordecai's Mountain" on the Ware river in Gloucester county. A tradition of the Cook family says that when the shipload of maidens arrived at Jamestown from England to provide wives for the settlers, word reached Mordecai in the middle of a fox hunt.

Facing three messengers who came to tell him of the arrival of the ship Mordecai is supposed to have said: "Tell them to batten down the hatches until I get there."

U. S. Woman Finds Ibn Saud's City Weird Blend of Ancient, Modern

(The capital of the mysterious Ibn Saud, king of Hedjaz and conqueror of Yemen, has been visited by few foreigners. Mrs. L. P. Dame, missionary of the Reformed Church in America, is believed to have been the first American woman to visit Riadh, seat of the monarch's court.)

By MRS. L. P. DAME.

NEW YORK, May 12.—In July, 1933, a very urgent message came from King Ibn Saud for Dr. Dame to come to Riadh speedily and to bring a "hakima" (lady doctor) or nurse. The journey was made in three laps—by launch from Bahrain to Ojeir, by motor from Ojeir to El Hofhuf, where we rested until a motor convoy was ready to convey us across the desert to Riadh.

Riadh has a medieval appearance, with its walls, turrets and crenelated roofs. But it presents many contrasts. In appearance and in many ways in reality it is a medieval town, yet there is a wireless station there, three times as powerful as the one in Bahrain, over which the king receives the very latest world news. There are telephones and electric light all over the palace, but sanitation is almost wholly lacking and flies are legion. One may see a procession of 20 or more of the latest and most up-to-date motor cars riding alongside the plodding camels.

We were guided to a house belonging to one of the king's brothers. It had been divided into two parts; the western section, shut off by a door that had been boarded up, was the residence of the chief of police. Our section was commodious, but there was no bathroom.

The wazir (vizier) who called to see how we were getting settled, when informed of this lack, at once telephoned to the king. His reply was both characteristic and to the point. Batter down the connecting door immediately, move out the chief of police and, presto! we would have access to the bathroom over there and, incidentally, have more rooms. Before we knew what was happening, we were alarmed by blows on the door from the other side of the wall and, in a few minutes, it was open. To our strenuous objections to having the chief of police and his family turned out without warning, the bland answer was, "It is the king's orders. What else to do?"

The king, chief of the Wahabis, is unusually tall and well built. Erect and regal looking in his flowing Arab robes, with his pleasing manner and charming smile he would command attention in any company. He is simple, direct, unaffected and undoubtedly sincere and at the same time shrewd, diplomatic and yet opinionated. He seems to have a firm hold on the affections of his people.

When I first met him I had been invited to the castle to meet some of the royal ladies. We were sitting on the floor, Arab style, in our Arab clothes, when there seemed a slight commotion outside in the hallway. The royal lady next to me hissed in my ear, "The king!" and, quickly throwing my veil over my face, I scrambled to my feet with the others, and then there entered his majesty, all smiles and graciousness. He is very easy to meet and to speak with and has a quality of democracy hard to reconcile with one's idea of an absolute monarch, of which perhaps he is the leading example left in the world.

For instance, the road along which he passed from the town castle to the country castle was often picketed by groups of Bedouins. They were waiting for the king's arrival to stop him for some complaint or request, and the king would always stop, listen graciously and give a word of advice, or perhaps some money or an order on the commissariat.

No matter what happens, the king must be obeyed, and all the palace servants make it plain that when one is summoned by the king one must jump and run. It so happened that an American engineer, who had been doing work for the king in the Hedjaz for some time, came to Riadh at the time he were there. The morning after his arrival, a palace servant summoned him to appear before the king.

The fact that it was not very convenient for him to appear at that moment made no difference; the summons was importunate and therefore importunately obeyed, and Mr. T. emerged clad only in a large bath towel. Imagine his consternation when he realized the object of the summons, which was to meet an American lady! She, too, had been summarily called away from an urgent bit of nursing, but the king's desire was accomplished. He introduced the two and, of the three, was probably the most serene and the least surprised.

His excellency's diplomacy is well known and is well illustrated by the following incident. When modern improvements, including telephones, were being installed in Riadh, the ikhwan (zealous religionists) leaders grew suspicious and angry and went to the king to voice their objections to such innovations and works of the devil from the lands of the infidel. His majesty received the deputation with all deference and respect and listened to all they had to say.

Then he made pronouncement in words to this effect: "If the telephone is really a work of the devil, e shall most certainly have none of it. Tear it out and cast it away. But, on the other hand, if it is a worthy instrument, we must put it to the test. Of a certainty, if it is the work of the devil, the holy words of the Koran will not pass over it, and, just as certainly, if the holy words do pass over it, it assuredly cannot be the work of the devil. So we will appoint two Mullahs, one to sit in the palace and one in the telephone excha ge, and they are to take turns reading a passage from the holy book and see what transpires."

Needless to say, each mullah heard the passage read to him from the other end of the wire and all were satisfactorily convinced.

To see the king with his women folk makes one conclude that much of his diplomatic education was acquired in just that connection, and, certainly, to keep several wives and concubines, as well as a dozen or more of sisters and daughters of various ages and dispositions, all on good terms with himself and with each other presents no mean problem in the diplomatic line.

I believe it is his boast that he had had 153 wives and, of the 130 who have been divorced, not one went away angry at him. He has an attractive personality and a nice way with his women and I am sure the present contingent would lay down their lives for him, as he seems to have the happy faculty of making each one feel that she is superior to all the others and dearer to him by far.

Of course, he has had plenty of experience, but one wonders sometimes how much their loyalty and love and tolerance are influenced by the appeal of his personality or by that of his title. Certainly, I have never seen these qualities manifested to such a degree in other Arab women whose husbands had no connection with a throne.

SHIRT PARADE STARTED TROUBLE

mood of the weary people changed to bitterness and disillusionment. Rising prices, and the post war depression fired the working classes with resentment against the war profiteers and big industrialists. Thousands of workers, influenced by the success of the Russian revolution, took over for a short while, manufacturing plants and attempted to run them. In Sicily, the exploited peasants, toiling on the great estates of absentee landlords, appropriated and divided the land. D'Annunzio, the poet-warrior, with his band of legionnaires, seized Fiume and defied the national government. Strikes and lockouts occurred daily and the authorities seemed powerless.

In such chaos, the first "fascio di combatimento" was formed by Mussolini, from returning jobless war veterans and middle class partisans, on March 23, 1919. Its purpose was to restore a stable government, to annihilate communism, and to foster a vigorous nationalism. With a philosophy of action based on extreme violence as a justifiable means, they proceeded to terrorize the labor and liberal elements. Workers were beaten up and shot down. Trade union buildings and co-operative stores were sacked or destroyed. Strikes were fought by the fascisti, Mussolini terming them "acts of war." Castor oil was fed to recalcitrant oppositionists.

Their uniform was based on the famous red shirts of Garibaldi, who had unified Italy 50 years before and championed individual freedom. Fascism adopted as its name and symbol, to indicate its power to punish, the traditional "fasces," a bundle of rods and an ax borne by the lictors, ancient Roman officials, portraying the authority of the state. From D'Annunzio and his legion; Mussolini borrowed the vocal cheer and an intense mysticism; the right arm salute from imperial Rome's cohorts.

Actually, the fascist movement finds its first historical counterpart in the Cromwellian coup d'etat, when the English Puritan merchants in the seventeenth century wrested control of the state from the landed aristocracy and executed King Charles I, by means of their illegal private army, the famous iron sides cavalry. For in the main, according to communists, fascism likewise represents class struggle, but now the conflict is between the possessing group, and the workers.

The industrialists, the returning disillusioned veterans, who came mostly from the petty bourgeoise, and the landed proprietors, combined to push fascism forward while an impotent government temporized or gave mute consent.

The whirlpool congealed. When Mussolini, refusing to accept a cabinet post, thundered, "Either the government must be given peacefully to the fascists or we will take it by force," a new era dawned. On October 28, 1922, the black shirts marched on Rome. The cabinet resigned and Mussolini became premier.

He still had before him a large parliamentary opposition. Thus it first Il Duce consolidated his position, subduing the members of socialist resistance. The fascist guardsmen, 80,000 strong, were nationalized. Taxes to the middle classes were lifted, wages were lowered, and the enormous budget deficit brought nearer control. In 1926, when Mussolini wiped out the last minority opposition, he proposed his "corporate state," wherein all labor and industry was united into national guilds. Strikes and lockouts were forbidden. Fascist officials were to become arbiters in disputes over wages, hours or working conditions.

Unflinching loyalty to the state, personified in Il Duce, was the cornerstone of citizenship. A policy of emotional nationalism was fostered, and a military spirit endeavoring to recall imperial Roman prestige flourished. From childhood on the new Italian martial feeling is ingrained. Various corps, the bahilla for children 8 to 14, graduating into avanguardisti, and at 18, the black shirt clad youth became a proud Giovanni. In a continent, torn by the passions of competitive nationalism, the young fascist marchers with a real rifle before he is 10 years old, and at 12, is taught machine gun technique.

Mussolini Plans.

The 50,000,000 Italian black shirts that Il Duce envisages for the peninsula by 1940 are not so fantastic. By a system of intelligent propaganda, he has lowered the child birth mortality greatly, and preached the virtue of large families. Unemployment insurance, old age pensions and the reclamation of marshes and malaria-infected regions have helped anchor the new regime.

Fascism has satisfied Italian vanity in the councils of the world. To the Palazzo Venezia in Rome moves a steady procession of diplomats. Dictator Mussolini, the great apostle of disarmament, has made Rome the "eternal city" again.

To Il Duce the international popularity of his philosophy has been a source of pride.

"Raise your banners and arms in salute to the fascist march which continues from Italy along the roads of the world."

VIOLENCE MARKS COASTAL STRIKES

One Slain, One Wounded in Gulf, Pacific Longshoremen's Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Strike disorders swept Pacific coast waterfronts from Seattle, Wash., to San Diego, Cal., yesterday, climaxing at San Francisco in a clash which brought injuries to six policemen and eight striking longshoremen.

Twelve thousand dock workers were ordered back to work in Texas and Louisiana ports, but in outbreaks at Galveston, where several lines were unaffected by the truce, one striker was killed and another wounded.

Three guards of the Clyde-Mallory line were charged with murder and assault to murder in connection with the Galveston shooting.

The San Francisco injuries were suffered when a mob of several hundred men stormed a labor recruiting office on the waterfront.

No Troops Called.

Governor Julius Meier, of Oregon, tentatively decided not to order the national guard to Portland, where one policeman was thrown overboard and several others beaten when strikers stormed a steamship.

A group of pickets at Seattle threw Philip Gruger, a dock superintendent, into Elliott bay, but he was not seriously hurt. Mayor John F. Dore, of Seattle, declared that an emergency existed and directed that 100 special policemen be added to the force for the duration of the "public disturbance."

A non-union worker suffered a possible skull fracture when he was beaten by four men at San Diego.

Shipbuilders Back at Work.

A strike of 3,000 workers at the New York Shipbuilding Company plant at Camden, N. J., was ended when strikers and company officials reached a wage raise agreement.

Representatives of striking Cleveland gasoline station attendants and of the oil companies conferred for five hours at Washington without reaching an agreement, then adjourned until Monday. If then they are unable to compose their differences within an hour, Secretary of the Interior Ickes will be called into the conference.

Mediation averted a threatened milk strike at Akron, Ohio, but housewives dusted off old cook books as 600 bakers and bakery wagon drivers remained on strike. Akron filling station attendants, meanwhile, threatened to follow the walkout example set at Cleveland.

Progress was reported at a mediation meeting of striking sewer pipe workers and manufacturers at Uhrichsville, Ohio.

A final decision by the national labor board on the dispute between the Remington-Rand Typewriter Company and its employes was expected to bring a speedy end to the strikes at Middletown, Conn., and Syracuse, Ilion and Norwood, N. Y.

Senator Wheeler, of Montana, took the matter of the Montana copper miners' strike to the national labor board in an effort to adjust difficulties which caused 4,000 men to leave the mines.

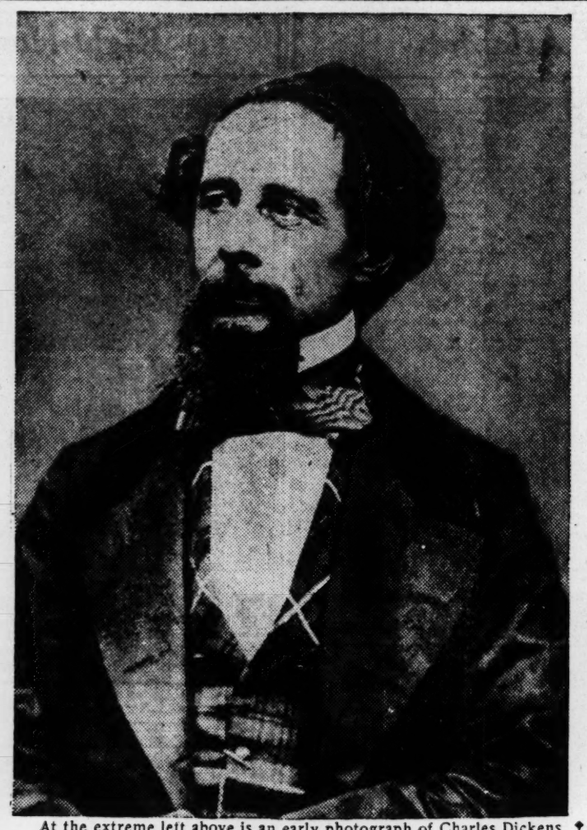

Miners on Jobs.

Miners belonging to company unions were at work in western Kentucky mines at $4 a day, pending a decision on a permanent injunction against enforcement of the $4.60 NRA scale, but 1,650 miners of the Hazard fields of eastern Kentucky, although receiving the $4.60 scale, were on strike against alleged NRA coal price violations.

Eighteen persons remained in jail in Wichita, Kan., facing charges of criminal syndicalism in connection with Wednesday's unem

Dickens' Letters to Wife Record of Love, Disillusionment and Farewell

At the extreme left above is an early photograph of Charles Dickens as he looked when he was wooing Catherine Hogarth. Next is the author in middle age after he had achieved fame as a writer and after he had found unhappiness in his marriage. Next is Charles Dickens' wife as a young matron. At the right above is Mary Scott Hogarth, from a painting by "Phiz" (Hablot Knight Browne). There are Dickens historians who believe that of the Hogarth sisters it was Mary, and not Catherine, whom Dickens really loved. Mary died when she was 17 and Dickens' grief was intense. At the right, below, are the four elder children of Charles Dickens, from left to right, Charley, Mamie, Katey and Wallie, with Grip, the raven perched on the chair. Left, below, is the house in which the final interview between Dickens and his wife took place. It was at this place, No. 1 Devonshire terrace, Marylebone, London, where Dickens wrote a large part of his better known books.

Dickens' Letters to His Wife

my father had once loved her; and would make it apparent that the separation which took place place between them in 1858 was not owing to any fault on her side. As it has been erroneously suggested, I believe, that her sister, Miss Georgina Hogarth, was in some way responsible for that separation, I take the present opportunity of entirely exonerating my aunt from any blame in the matter.

After due consideration, I determined upon offering the care of my mother's gift to the authorities of the British museum. They kindly accepted the trust, and my father's letters remain precisely as they were when I received them from my mother; the erasures in them being her own and made before they came into my possession.

The cause of the parting of my father and mother is not unknown to me, but as I look upon their separation as a strictly private arrangement, arrived at between themselves, I do not enter upon any details respecting it, for I consider it to be a subject with which the public has no concern.

DICKENS' FEELINGS HURT.

It was on April 2, 1836, that Dickens married Catherine Hogarth, the eldest daughter of his fellow journalist, George Hogarth, whom Forster calls "an accomplished and kindly man." Most of the letters in the Perugini collection are undated, but the first we come on has the addition "May, 1835," in a feminine handwriting, apparently that of Mrs. Dickens herself. This is an important clue. The letter, as will be seen in a moment, shows that the lovers had then been engaged three weeks. Presuming it to be correctly placed, it not only sets the key to the whole correspondence of the courtship period, but proves that that correspondence covers rather less than a year.

The fact, like the initial letter, is enough to stagger the imagination of your modern lover, who may be fervent but is certainly curt. Dickens, busy as he was with his newspaper work and the preparation of the "Sketches by Boz," wrote enormously to his lady, sometimes at length, but more often (in the view of 1934) on trivial occasion.

FLUENT PEN.

The May, 1835, letter illustrates the fluency of his pen, containing as it does only two small erasures:

My Dear Catherine: It is with the greatest pain that I sit down before I go to bed tonight to say one word which can bear the appearance of unkindness or reproach; but I owe a duty to myself as well as to you, and as I was wild enough to think that an engagement of even three weeks might pass without any such display as you have favored me with twice already, I am the more strongly induced to discharge it.

The sudden and uncalled-for coldness with which you treated me just before I left last night, both surprised and deeply hurt me—surprised, because I could not have believed that such sullen and inflexible obstinacy could exist in the breast of any girl in whose heart love had found a place; and hurt me, because I feel to you far more than I have ever professed, and I feel a slight from you more than I care to tell. My object in writing to you is this. If a hasty temper produces this strange behavior, acknowledge it when I give you the opportunity—not once or twice, but again and again. If a feeling of you know not what—a capricious restlessness of you can't tell what and a desire to tease, you don't know why, give rise to it—overcome it; it will never make you more amiable, I more fond, or either of us more happy. If thtree weeks or three months of my society has wearied you, do not trifle with me, using me like any other toy as suits your humor for the moment; but make the acknowledgement to me frankly at once—I shall not forget you lightly, but you will need no second warning. Depend upon it, whatever be the cause of your unkindness—whatever gives rise to these wayward fancies—that what you do not take the trouble to conceal from a lover's eyes, will be frequently acted before those of a husband.

I know as well, as if I were by your side at this moment, that your present impulse on reading this note is one of anger—pride, perhaps, or to use a word more current with your sex—"spirit." My dear girl, I have not the most remote intention of awakening any such feeling, and I implore you, not to entertain it for an instant. I am very little your superior in years; in no other respect can I lay claim to the title, but I venture nevertheless to give you this advice, first, because I cannot turn coolly away and forget a slight from you as I might from any other girl to whom I was not warmly and deeply attached; and secondly, because if you really love me, I would have you do justice to yourself, and show me that your love for me, like mine for you, is above the ordinary trickery, and frivolous absurdity which debases the name, and renders it ludicrous.

I have written these few lines in haste, but not in anger. I am not angry, but I am hurt, for the second time. Possibly you may not understand the sense in which I use the word; if so, I hope you never may. If you knew the intensity of the feeling which has led me to forget all my friends and pursuits to spend my days at your side; if you knew but half the anxiety with which I watched your recent illness, the joy with which I hailed your recovery, and the eagerness with which I would promote your happiness, you could more readily understand the extent of the pain so easily inflicted, but so difficult to be forgotten.

Ever yours most affectionely.

CATHEHINE WAS "DIFFICULT."

Should there seem a touch of the heavy father in this remonstrance, it must be remembered that Dickens was only 23. More notable is the extent to which the letter foreshadows the complaints often uttered, though in wiser terms, in the rest of the courtship correspondence. It becomes clearer and clearer as we go on that Catherine was "difficult" and that Charles, being the highly strung man he was, took her too seriously.

With regard to your note, my love (he writes later), I will only say that it displays all that amiable and excellent feeling which I know you possess, and for which, I believe from my heart, you are unrivaled; if you could only determine to show the same affection and kindness to me, when you feel disposed to be ill-tempered, I declare unaffectedly I should have no one solitary fault to find with you. Your asking me to love you "once more" is quite unnecessary—I have never ceased to love you for one moment since I knew you; nor shall I.

The style of address varies, not unnaturally, with the tone of a letter. From "Brompton, 3 o'clock Tuesday," goes to "My ever dearest Kate" an assurance of affection with a hint of marriage preparation:

If our little conversation of last night have presented itself to your mind at all since I left you, I hope it has only been to remind you of my repeated and solemn assurances of entertaining for you a love which nothing can lessen—an affection which no alteration of time or circumstance can ever abate. I have the vanity to believe that these professions must be gratifying to you, knowing the sincerity with which they come from me.

I am happy to say, my dearest girl, that Fred (whom I saw at the office) gives a very favorable report of the porter's sanguine expectations of letting the chambers at no distant period. God send it may be so, and that the dearest hopes I ever entertained may be realized (with your good leave) at an even earlier period than we anticipate.

By 5 o'clock on Saturday morning "ever yours most affectionately, Charles Dickens" (with the familiar flourish already under his signature) has changed his mood. A letter has come for him which he has read and reread "until my headache and the sun's appearance have warned me that it is time even for a poor unfortunate creature like myself to think of rest and forgetfulness for a few hours." What the disturbing letter contained is matter for speculation; it left "three courses" open for immediate adoption, and after speaking about them quietly with Catherine, Dickens says, he would announce his determination to her mamma.

A Breakfast Party.

He makes the following proposal:

I should like to see you here early. You can surely come to breakfast at half-past 10. Give my love to Mary and tell her I rely on her characteristic kind-heartedness and good nature to accompany you. . . .

I hope to be awakened by your tapping at my door in the morning, and I look forward on making my appearance in the sitting room, to find you heading my breakfast table—you might without difficulty head a more splendid one, my dear girl, through life. If this thought should ever occur to you when you take your place at it as a matter of right, the only consolations it will be in my power to offer you will be—first the happiness and contentment that I hope you will feel; and secondly the possession of the interest and affection which I know you will have awakened.

The Mary who was to accompany her sister was then 15 and was to die at 17, "young, beautiful and good." More than one of Dickens' biographers thinks that she and not Catherine was his real love. His grief at her sudden death was intense and lasting; and "he always asked to be buried in her grave."

From other letters it seems that breakfast with Dickens was no unusual event for Catherine and Mary.

The lateness of the hour is, of course, explained by his parliamentary reporting for the Morning Chronicle, which occupied him long after a new day had dawned. There are many allusions to the sittings of the two houses and many apologies for not keeping engagements, so full were his hands with the reports and the "Boz" sketches. One early morning note, written on returning from Westminster, has the postscript: "I have been indulging in a confused reverie of you and the tables, all the way home." A passage in another gives an idea of the frequency with which, notwithstanding obstables, the lovers were able to meet: "I have not seen you, you know dearest, since 7 o'clock yesterday evening. It seems an age."

Presbyterian Merger Committee To Report at Montreat Meeting

Union of the Southern Presbyterian church and the Associated Reformed Presbyterian church will be considered at the annual meeting of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States at Montreat, N. C., May 24-31.

At that time a report of an ad interim committee urging such union will be presented for adoption.

The Southern Presbyterian church with 470,000 members and the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church with 22,000 members have been discussing organic union for several years and have had a joint committee of the two bodies drawing up plans and suggesting a basis of union.

The report has been prepared by a committee of the Southern Presbyterian body represented by Dr. S. L. Morris, of Atlanta; President J. R. McCain, of Agnes Scott College, of Decatur, and R. A. Dunn, of Charlotte, N. C., and a committee of the A. R. P. church, represented by Rev. T. H. McDill, of Gastonia, N. C., and Dr. J. P. Pressley, of Due West, N. C.

This committee will report full accord in the creedal statements of the two denominations and suggest the outline of a plan for a merging of the two bodies including all boards and church agencies.

Definite plans will also be submitted for carrying forward the work of each denomination without any break, the establishment of the ministers of each church "on the same footing." It would also outline the merging of the Associate Reformed Theological Seminary at Due West, S. C., with the Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Ga., and the taking over of the Associate Reformed home and foreign mission work by the Southern Presbyterian home and foreign boards in Atlanta and Nashville.

The recommendation suggesting union of the two bodies will be presented to the Southern Presbyterian general assembly "not for immediate adoption" but for serious consideration and any necessary modification looking towards eventual organic union.

The paper urging union concludes as follows:

"The joint committee in submitting its report would express its profound satisfaction in finding as a result of its investigation that the two denominations are in thorough accord as to their doctrinal statements and practically identical in their methods of administration. The members of the joint committee are deeply gratified at the fraternal spirit and harmonious conclusions prevailing in all its meetings."

BRAND NEW LOVE HINTED FOR ASTOR IN ELLEN FRENCH

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The Daily News says there is a new romance in the life of John Jacob Astor III, who but recently returned from an 80-day voyage around the world after his engagement to Eileen Gillespie was broken.

Ellen Tuck French, daughter of Mrs. Livingston French, the newspaper says, is the girl in the new romance, adding that both Astor and Miss French "practically admitted" their engagement will be announced shortly.

Astor upon his return to New York 10 days ago declared himself still in love with Miss Gillespie. He asserted that if her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Gillespie, would "quit interfering" in their affairs he believed the engagement could be renewed. "It is a closed incident," said Mrs. Gillespie, in reply.

Today in apparent surprise at a question about the engagement rumor, Miss French said:

"Oh, I can't say anything about that."

"Do you deny it?" she was asked.

"Oh, but I can't say a thing," she answered.

Astor admitted frequent visits to the French home, but added:

"I've been other places, too."

He said the reports probably were "exaggerated."

Miss French is the granddaughter of Amos Tuck French, Newport, R. I., and New York social leader and banker. She was introduced to society at a dinner-dance here on December 1, 1933.

ALABAMA GRAY VETS PAY F. D. R. TRIBUTE

MOBILE, Ala., May 12.—(AP)—Alabama's thinning ranks of the gray-clad hosts of the Sixties today paid tribute to President Roosevelt as Taps was sounded on the thirty-fourth annual convention which only 40 of the men who followed Lee and Jackson attended.

"With fervent prayer that he may continue to lead our blessed country and its people into the way of peace and prosperity," read a resolution which the aged voices acclaimed in unison, "we salute him as a great chieftain of a great reunited people."

In another resolution, the veterans who may have answered the annual assembly call for the last time, told the youth of the nation "they must ever strive to keep America true to American ideals and its genuine traditions, and to oppose the sinister forces which would bring into this free land such foreign propaganda as would tend to foment religious or racial hatred."

DOUG JR. "TOO BUSY" FOR NEW MARRIAGE

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—Douglas Fairbanks Jr., who became a wholly free man today, is "entirely too busy" to think of wedding bells again, he said.

Over a telephone in Manchester, a few moments before going on to the opera house stage there where he is co-starring with Gertrude Lawrence in "The Winding Journey," he said:

"There is no truth to the rumors that Miss Lawrence and I are planning to marry. There are no plans in that direction at all. We are entirely too busy trying to get this play into shape even to think of it.

"Business before pleasure, you know."

He pointed out, furthermore, that he actually has been free to marry anywhere except in California ever since his divorce from Joan Crawford.

TWO YOUTHS CONFESS ROBBING 15 HOMES

MIAMI, Fla., May 12.—(AP)—Authorities today said they had obtained confessions from two boys that they had robbed 15 homes here recently.

"It just seemed like fun," detectives quoted the boys as saying. "We didn't even know what to do with the things when we got them. We destroyed most of the birds, fish and articles we took, and even the money seemed too much to spend."

The youths, whose ages are 9 to 13 years, were turned over to juvenile authorities.

Order To Release Captive Foxes Deals Blow to Mountain Industry

An industry maintained by mountaineers of north Georgia since time immemorial received a blow Saturday when Zack D. Cravey, state commissioner of the department of game and fish, issued an edict to the effect that pet foxes cannot be kept in captivity.

Mountaineers entered into the proposition because they have followed an old family custom of trapping fox while young and then selling them to huntsmen for chase purposes.

Commissioner Cravey issued the order because he had received numerous complaints from owners of estates and hunting tracts that fox pups are being taken from their pens and held in captivity without permits.

"All foxes of any species now held in captivity shall be released immediately," the commissioner's order said, "and no permits shall be issued by the department of game and fish for keeping foxes in captivity for any purpose whatever, and it is further ordered that 15 days from the date of this order shall be allowed for the disposition of these foxes. At the expiration of this time all wardens shall take action against those retaining foxes in captivity."

Those acquainted with the industry of pup fox hunting say that mountaineers, among others involved, capture the animals and that the purchasers are persons who keep the pups in captivity until such time as they are large enough to put on a good chase.

Whether fox farms engaged in the business of raising fox for fur-bearing purposes will be subject to the order could not be predicted. As far as Atlanta records are concerned, indications were there were no large farms in the state devoted to the industry.

He further states that with the renewed interest being manifested in all lines of insurance it is his belief that all companies will show one of the largest increases this year they have experienced since 1929.

Feedstuff Shortage.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 12.—Because of the serious shortage of feedstuffs for live stock to be experienced in this county in many years, due to the drouth and corn borer conditions of last year, County Agent Pat H. Ward this week urged the farmers of Thomas county to grow enough corn and hay to supply their farm needs for the year 1935.

At the same time he advised farmers to be on the lookout for the large cornstalk-borer which has been reported in sections of the county. Methods for rotating crops from year to year with a view to ultimate eradication of the pest, are being advanced.

ANTHONY BUICK SHOWING NEW LOW-PRICED 8-CYLINDER CAR

Beautiful New Models Include All of Buick's Famous Features

Atlanta Motorists Very Enthusiastic Over Car at Dealers' Showing Here.

FLINT, Mich., May 12.—A new line of Buick automobiles, engineered and designed as companion cars of the present 50, 60 and 90 series Buicks, but to sell in a lower price bracket is announced by the Buick Motor Company.

The new car, a Buick thoroughbred from every standpoint, has been designated the Series 40 Buick. It includes an initial production range of five body models on a 117-inch wheelbase chassis of characteristic Buick design and construction. The new car is powered by a 93-horsepower, valve-in-head straight eight engine and is capable of smooth, easy speeds up to 85 miles per hour.

Unusual performance and economy are outstanding features, the Buick 40 having been designed to meet these requirements of the lower price field. At the same time, its designers have maintained all the engineering traditions of Buick, built up over a period of more than 30 years.

The valve-in-head principle which Buick has constantly perfected over a period of 30 years has its culmination in the new series 40 straight eight engine. It has a bore of 3 3-32 inches and stroke of 3 7-8 inches, giving a total displacement of 233 cubic inches. The S. A. E. rated horsepower is 30.63 and its developed brake horsepower is 93 at 3,200 revolutions per minute.

The combination of high power and streamline design, with a favorable power weight ratio of 36.4 pounds per horsepower, enables the new Buick 40 to attain an effortless 85 miles an hour and provides unusual power flexibility throughout the driving range. The car has a second speed up to 55 miles an hour and can accelerate from 10 to 60 miles an hour in 21 seconds.

While remarkable performance has been built into the new Series 40 Buick, fuel economy has not been sacrificed. In the great laboratories of the General Motors proving ground Buick engineers conducted exhaustive tests with resulting perfection of design that has given the utmost in fuel economy. At a cruising speed of 55 miles an hour the new Buick will travel 15 miles on a gallon of gasoline, proving ground tests show.

A check of gasoline consumption at various speeds shows thah at 20 miles per hour the car travels 21.2 miles on a gallon of gasoline; at 30 miles an hour, 19 miles per gallon; at 40 miles an hour, 17.7 miles per gallon; at 50 miles an hour, 16 miles per gallon; 60 miles an hour, 14.4 miles per gallon, and at 70 miles an hour, 13 miles per gallon.

In hill performance tests the new cars accelerated up an 11.6 per cent 1,600-foot grade from 10 miles an hour at the bottom to 35 miles an hour at hhe top in 38.5 seconds carrying a passenger load of 450 pounds. With a passenger load of 900 pounds the car accelerated up the same hill from 10 miles an hour at the bottom to 27.5 miles at the crest in 44.5 seconds.

The power plant of the new Buick 40 is insulated from the frame by five soft rubber mountings, which completely cushion the motor and prevent any engine vibration from being transmitted through the frame to the passengers. This, combined with the inherent smoothness of the valve-in-head straight eight engine, makes for silent, smooth power at all speeds.

A most of comfort and convenience features characterize the bodies and interiors of the new Series 40 Buicks. Bodies by Fisher have the outstanding Fisher no-draft ventilation and because of the ample size of the Buick 40 chassis, are roomy and comfortable.

Modern interiors of the new cars include such convenient features as double sun shades, rear-view mirror, arm rests for each front-seat passenger in all models, large package compartment in the instrument board, easily read airplane type instruments placed in a panel in front of the driver, front-seat adjustment, inside safety door locks, assist straps, carpet-covered tonneau, foot rails, conveniently located ash trays, robe rails and newly designed front compartment floor mats.

The seats are deep and comfortable with flexible pad reinforcement, a construction giving softness yet maintaining the shape of the cushion without "padding down."

The bodies of the new Buicks are sealed against heat, noise and cold. The 18-degree sloping windshield is set in rubber, rubber windlace is placed around the doors and the control pedals are fitted tightly with rubber and felt collars where they pass through the toe and floor boards. The dash is completely covered with a mat insulated with heavy felt, while under the front and rear compartment floor coverings is a heavy felt insulation.

For permanence of finish and to provide a rustproof base for Duco, the raidator hood, fenders and running boards of the new cars are bonderized. Fenders and all sheet metal parts are all finished with Duco.

The full line of body models together with standard colors specified for them follow: Five-passenger, four-door club sedan with built-in trunk, crillion blue; two-passenger business coupe, empire blue; five-passenger four-door sedan, ambassador maroon; five-passenger touring sedan with built-in trunk, nassau tan; and four-passenger sport coupe, montague green. Black is an optional color on all models at no extra cost.

Pontiac's '34 Motor More Economical Than Predecessor

The straight eight motor of the 1934 Pontiac, more powerful and economical than its famous predecessor, is matched in smoothness by few motors in any price class, according to B. H. Anibal, vice president in charge of engineering for the Pontiac Motor Company.

Developing 84 brake horsepower—increased from 77 in the 1933 Pontiac—it accelerates with silent brilliance and attains an effortless road speed well above 80 miles per hour. Fuel economy has been improved by 10 per cent.

Displacement remains at 223.4 cubic inches, but compression has been raised to a new ratio of 6.2 to 1. A new type cylinder head, which cools the advancing flame of the cylinder explosion, permits the use of ordinary grades of fuel under this high compression.

So smooth is the new motor, asserts Mr. Anibal, that the car can be slowly accelerated in one-mile stages throughout its entire range of speed without the slightest trace of vibration.

Several factors are responsible for Pontiac's smoothness. For one thing, the motor is so large and capable that only 55 per cent of its available power is required at a road speed of 65 miles per hour.

The exceptionally large mass of the motor block also is another factor. The block weighs 225 pounds and is three-point mounted on steel-reinforced supports of live rubber.

The ribbed crankcase extends 2 1-2 inches down below the center line of the crankshaft, a design which produces extreme rigidity. The five main bearings are supported by five solid walls of metal extending entirely across the block.

All moving parts are balanced with extreme precision, the connecting rods being balanced in production not only for over-all weight but also for identical centers of gravity. Pontiac's almost square ratio of bore to stroke, 3 3-16 by 3 1-2 inches, reduces the internal stresses of operation and permits the big 71-pound crankshaft to be given added rigidity by overlapping the crankpins and main bearings. The last trace of torsional vibration is eliminated by a larger harmonic balancer, built into the fan drive pulley.

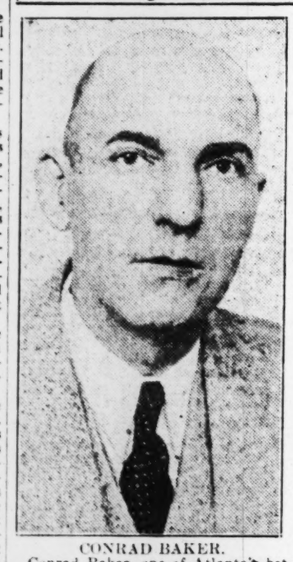

The exclusive Pontiac cooling system, with "fountain cooling" of the valves, thermostatic control, recirculation of water within the motor when the radiator is closed off during the warm-up period, serve to limit the variations in temperature between the front and rear cylinders to only three degrees. This promotes smooth operation, as does also the "equal loading" of cylinder charges through down draft carburetion and careful manifolding.

Another motor feature is found in Pontiac's "metered flow" full pressure lubrication system, providing a regulated flow to all bearings which remains unchanged during the entire life of the car.

Added power, plus further economy in fuel consumption result from several improvements. One of them is the higher compression ratio. Even more important is the "vacunmatic" spark control which supplements the centrifugally-operated conventional system of automatic spark advance. In the past, the limited flexibility of the latter, especially under the constantly varying spark requirements of part throttle operation at ordinary road speeds, rendered unavoidable a certain loss of economy. That flexibility now is supplied through a vacuum control, operated by the vacuum in the intake manifold, which accurately reflects the load upon the motor and makes constant corrections in the spark control, thus capturing an added fuel economy.

A further development which guards Pontiac economy is the "gaselector." This device permits a quick and accurate manual adjustment of the distributor in order that the motor may take full advantage of whatever grade of fuel the owner elects to use. It may be adjusted to operate on third grade gasoline without spark knock or to obtain maximum results from premium fuels.

Willys Dealers Report Gains For Georgia

E. O. Herndon, wholesale manager for Evans Motors, Georgia distributors and dealers of the new Willys for 1934, has just returned from a trip over the state, and reports business very good for Willys dealers. The new cars, he said, cannot be supplied in sufficient quantities to meet a growing demand.

The Evans organization now has active dealers in all the larger cities in Georgia and in a great many of the smaller towns. Mr. Herndon, although wholesale representative for several years, states that he has never seen demand for Willys cars as lively as it is now. "The outlook for the automobile business in Georgia is much better than last year," he said. "Willys expects a boom year. The car is low-priced and engineered for service, and its upkeep economies are geared to recovery pocketbooks. South Georgia people think the new Willys is the coming popular car in the low-priced field. All present signs point to Willys as one of the leaders of the year in the state."

Road Tests Wear Out Brakes, But Not New G-3 Tire

Road tests so severe that brakes on the automobiles used were worn out every 72 hours were conducted to prove the new G-3 tire, latest development of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, according to C. C. Mason Jr., of the Mason-Kominers Tire Company, local Goodyear dealer.

"In order to put the severest possible strains and abuses on the new tires," says Mr. Mason, "they were driven at 60 miles an hour and brought to an abrupt stop every five miles.

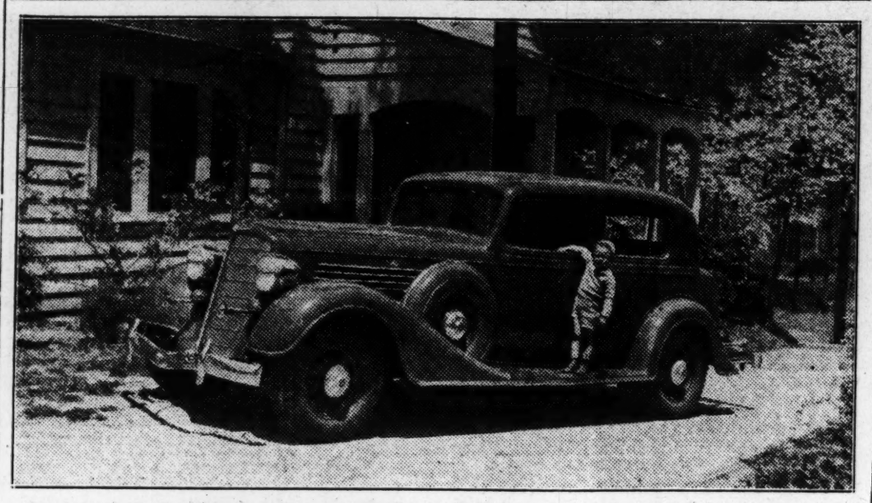

"This punishing test wore out brake linings so rapidly that the brakes had to be adjusted every eight hours and linings replaced every three days. But the tests proved that the new G-3 was adapted to use on the modern, high speed, high powered automobile.

"Cars had been improving rapidly and tread wear became more of a problem. The road tests all proved conclusively, however, that tire mileage had been stepped up and non-skid tread wear increased on an average of 43 per cent.

"The improvements of the G-3 were accomplished by widening and flattening the tread surface in contact with the road, widening the riding ribs and narrowing the grooves between the non-skid blocks and increasing the number of non-skid blocks in the tire's circumference.

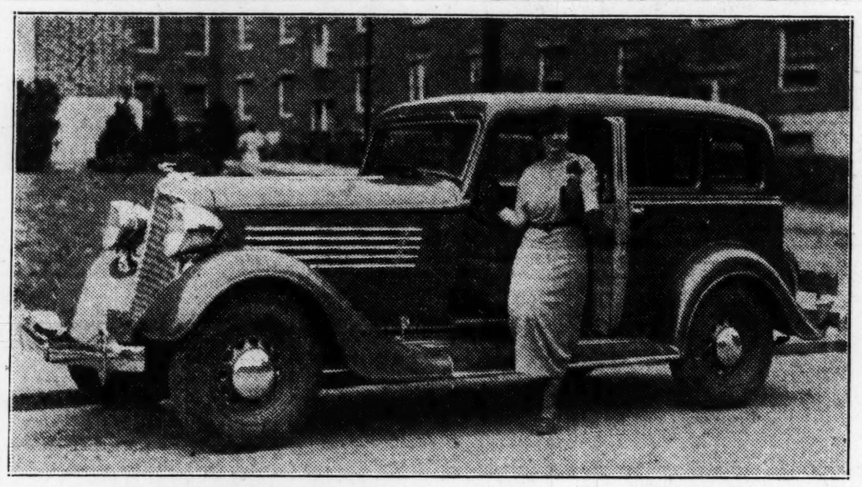

"In my opinion the G-3 tire is the most important contribution of the tire manufacturer to motoring since the introduction of the balloon tire," Mr. Mason said.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Scamper: The Bunny Who Went to the White House. By Anna Roosevelt Dall, with illustrations by Marjorie Flack. When the author decided to write an up-to-date story about a little New England bunny who one day called at the White House via the postman, with the message that he had been sent to play with the president's little grandchildren—"Sistie" and "Buzzie," or as we should write "Miss Eleanor Roosevelt Dall," and Master Curtis Dall Jr.

The story of Scamper and his preparations for his new home and new city will delight any child. He arrived in Washington in time for the Easter egg rolling, two of the faithful dogs being on the welcoming committee. On being asked for an intreview Scamper said he was not prepared to say whether or not he would like Washington, though he felt sure he would like his new home.

After Babs and Dave, for that is what the children are called in this delightful story, had shown Scamper all their favorite plans for having fun, and he had enjoyed a ride around Washington, meeting the president, who gave him a smile and invited him to be a guest on his yacht, had a surprise ride with the First Lady in an airplane; a glimpse of the guests at a White House dinner, he decided that his lines had fallen in a mighty fine place.

Scamper had many adventures, but the one which counted the most was his visit to Mount Vernon, over which the children will go into gales of laughter, and as the result of the overdose of kindness, with the good times he had had, and what he believed was ahead of him, he decided that the White House was the best home of all. The illustrations, which show Washington scenes and White House interiors, are not only attractive but beautiful, and no more acceptable gift book can be selected than the story of "Scamper," the little New England bunny. (Macmillan's Book, New York.)

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

Penny and His Little Cart. By Amy Wentworth Stone. Illustrated by Hildegard Woodward. Jacket and six full pages in color, and five full pages in black and white. The story is woven around a dear little boy who was named Peleg Penniman, but whenever his name was called everybody laughed and finally he was called P-Penny. On his little red cart, however, was painted "P. Penniman, bundles called for and delivered." So the little fellow has been doing a flourishing express business. It is a delightful story and all little boys between 8 and 12 will enjoy it. (Lothrop, Lee & Sheppard Co., Boston.)

Spunky. The story of Shetland pony, by Berta and Elmer Hader. Among the attractive children's books that have been brought out this season is "Spunky" and the little folks who they read the story and admire the pictures of this beautiful Shetland pony will be delighted. It begins in Shetland islands, from which place Spunky is sold to a coal mine, next he becomes a circus pony, later he becomes a peddler, then the property of several little children, and at last we locate him as a "park pony," where he becomes one of the chief attractions. Mr. and Mrs. Hader are well known to all children. (The Macmillan Company, New York.)

The Big Bad Wolf and Little Red Riding Hood. Written and illustrated by the Walt Disney Studios. The old charm of the little girl on the way to see her grandmother when she meets the Big Bad Wolf has become more attractive and more interesting by the skillful drawings and picturesque text of Walt Disney, who is so well known from one pole to the other through his creation of Mickey Mouse. Then there are the Three Little Pigs, and who does not remember them; and with Disney's lyrics and drawings they are unforgettable. While in this story the Big Bad Wolf doesn't exactly eat grandma, and nobody comes to kill the wolf, so the Third Little Pig finds a solution. There are many changes in these two stories and they are still classics with the same old charm for children. (Blue Ribbon Books, Inc., New York.)

BOYS' BOOKS.

Guns on the Rio Grande. By Robert Ames Bennet. The title and the name of the writer are two things that a boy enjoys—a western story and one written by Mr. Bennet. This time the story is woven around Dave Telford, ex-Texas Ranger, whom we first meet while he is trying to get a job on Judge Keith's ranch. The story has plenty of action. (Ives Washburn, publisher, New York.)

Wild Riding Runt. By Frank C. Robertson. There is not a dull moment in this western story which moves with the rapidity of a Texas pony. Cigaret Johnny was a horse rustler in the beginning but in the end he became a ranch detective. It was said of him that he could get in more tight places than any other 10 men this side of a cowman's paradise. There is plenty of romance and western romance always takes the lead. It is a thrilling story. (Ives Washburn, publisher, New York.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Valerie Hathaway. By Claudius Gregory. This is a story that continues to be sensational, though it was published in the United States a year ago, and first in Canada.

While the author is a Canadian it is claimed that the story is 100 per cent American in character, plot and locale.

Valerie Hathaway is confronted with a problem which in lesser or greater degree is the problem of every man and woman. . . . With her husband, Carl Hathaway, Valerie presents a theatrical act, through which they demonstrate the actual existence of "mental telepathy." Carl Hathaway dies suddenly, still a young man, and leaves with Valeria, yet a girl of 22, the thought that the mind does not die, and that because of their unusual faculty, they will continue to know each other.

The story is the striving of Valerie Hathaway's mind following her husband's death, and its influence in her life after her marriage to Felix Storm. Several have given their reasoning on this subject, all perhaps not agreeing except that it is a story of deep thought.

As a bay the author was a lover of detective stories—before he was 21 he had written 20 novels, none of which he ever offered for publication. His first book, "Forgotten Men," was published six weeks from the day he wrote the first chapter.

Mr. Gregory likes to weave stories about men and women, people he knows, and the story of Valerie Hathaway is the actual story of a woman who possesses the telepathic talents he describes. (J. S. Sears Co., New York.)

The Witchfinders. By Stanley Hart Cauffman. The story is laid in England in 1647—nearly 300 years ago when that country was beginning to hear rumors and rumblings of war. It is on a beautiful June day and seemingly the only attraction on this day was the news of the burning of two witches at Toothill, a town not far from London.

The historical figure in this most interesting story of love and adventure is a man whose name is not so well known, but who stands out from the first page to the last as being a crook, a knave and a scoundrel—these three names in their last analysis mean the biggest swindler in England. Through his shrewd influence, and at a time when parliament was disorganized, he was appointed "witchfinder general of England." From that time it was a reign of terror through the land covering everything from robbery to murder.

But even in that time there were fine, clever and courageous young men and two especially felt it was their duty as citizens who loved their home and land to get rid of the racketeer and his band of lawless men. It is not only a thrilling story founded on true records which the author so interestingly relates but it is a story in which romance holds the winning card, and one summer evening at twilight, "sweet with the songs and rustling leaves," true lovers listened to the bell "whose song was that of bliss." The author of "The Sun Sets Red," tells this unusual story of a time long past, with so much interest and appeal that it seems but yesterday that we met the master of Overmead. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

Historical Romance Of Venus' Right-Hand Man

"The Fool of Venus," 438 pages, including adequate glossary.

(Reviewed by Frank Drake.)

"The Fool of Venus," by George Cronyn, is one of the most singular and fascinating books which has been published in many a year. It is a historical romantic novel of life and morals in the twelfth century and the tale of a famous troubador of that day is told most divertingly against a background of apparently authentic history of the crusading age.

Morals, or rather conventions, were somewhat different in the twelfth century from our own standards and Cronyn uses to full advantage the exposition of that difference. He writes of the life of Piere Vidal, a troubador of Provence, in a style that is flavored with the quaint language and sentence construction of those distant days but his words flow with such ease and naturalness that they do not appear strange to modern eyes. That touch of musty construction has hidden charms for the reader, those charms completing the spell which stories of knights in shining armor and fair ladies in rich dress always bring.

Cronyn's fool of Venus is Piere Vidal, whose greatness above that of other men caused him to be considered a madman. But he sang the best songs of his age and left hundreds of beautiful love lyrics and battle songs to inspire later men.

In those days, when Vidal was battling windmills in the interest of justice who often turned quite a cold shoulder to him, great ladies were courted constantly by the troubadors. In fact, such courtship was expected to the extent that if it were not forthcoming the lord considered the troubador had insulted his house and himself. Sometimes a particularly fair lady would find herself kept busy indeed, when half a dozen troubadors decided at the same time to visit her lord. But as Piere Vidal said, it was far better to love and sing of it than to love secretly and ingloriously.

Pieres' love life, which he followed according to the Laws of Love, then a very important document containing the ethics of true love, is closely interwoven with a picture of the crusades and the life of the western world at that time.

Vidal, the singer and fool, accompanied Richard Coeur de Lion on one of his crusades and together they led an army against a city to victory when all seemed lost. Richard is painted by Cronyn exactly as he must have appeared to his followers. When the English king stole a falcon from a peasant, saying that he was procuring it in the "kingly way," one troubadour remarked that he liked Richard the better for it, for, he said, it showed "the English king is not above petty larceny."

The troubadour of Provence married a Greek princess and their son was claimant to the throne of New Rome, but Vidal, when the time came, would not let the son have the crown, because it meant only bloodshed and the blinding of justice. Vidal's star was the goddess Venus, who appeared to him one night and he forever afterward was willing to lay down his life for the justice and beauty she represented.

Riotous living was in vogue then and life was cheap but Vidal, a man far in advance of his contemporaries, fought for his principles steadfastly throughout his life. One admires him as Cronyn did. He was a stout fellow.

"The Fool of Venus" is like a great picture, a mosaic of many countries and many men and women, beginning and fighting desperately for, the development of their world and for the protection of their estates. Though it is fiction, it tastes of pure fact, and though it is crammed with facts, they are romantic. The volume is not one which will appeal to a great many persons, but those who read it will have spent a few hours in an age long forgotten and too seldom written about in this day of the machine. (Corici-Wiede, New York.)

MOONLIGHT ON THE CHATTAHOOCHEE.

The beeches kiss their shadows on the river's brim,
Enamoured, like Narcissus, with their charms,
And poplars, in the day sedate and prim,
Yield to the embraces of the night wind's arms;
The Great Bear in the north seems brighter far
In the still waters, and the Milky Way
A bit of chiffon with each captured star
Held in its meshes for the moon's array.

O wondrous beauty that the river bears!
When hectic labors of the day are past,
Selene, goddess of the night appears,
And by the magic she alone can cast,
To all fair things new loveliness is given,
A veil-clad earth and a reflected Heaven.

PROPERTY INVENTORY DETAILS ANNOUNCED

Some months ago the government, under the direction of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, made a real property inventory in more than 60 cities. Several thousand white-collar unemployed, taken from the rolls of the CWA, were used in gathering the information. The primary object of the inventory was to give employment to the so-called white-collar class.

More than 60 cities have been canvassed in this study by door-to-door enumerators seeking information on the physical condition of residential structures, the use of sanitary facilities and heating appliances, the extent of crowding, the percentage of vacancy and other conditions. Its purpose is to gather necessary but previously uncollected statistics on residential conditions which will serve, among other uses, as a factual basis on which the building industry can make plans for revived activity.

Since the report of the inventory for Atlanta has not yet been released, it is interesting to note the conditions that have been found in other cities so far reported.

It has been found that 80 per cent are adequate or more than adequate for living purposes; 20 per cent crowded; 82 per cent of the residential units rent for less than $30 per month; 45 per cent are in need of minor repairs; 20 per cent are in need of structural repairs; 3 1-2 per cent are unfit for human habitation. There is a vacancy ratio of 7 per cent.

A large majority of the houses that are listed as unfit for human habitation are vacant, as a great many of them have been partially demolished by vandals and, of course, are not used for human habitation as they are rapidly being razed by the owners.

He said that small farms were now active and would continue to feature real estate activity.

"CUSTOMER" DECAMPS WITH $10 IN CHANGE

Change from a drug store netted an Atlanta gunman slightly less than $10 early Saturday morning when he relieved a negro delivery boy of that amount.

The drug store at 1130 Euclid avenue received a telephone call requesting that a package of cigarettes and change for a $10 bill be sent to 1100 Alta avenue.

Owen Mapp, negro delivery boy, delivered the order. He handed the man a package of cigarettes and the change. The man was to return with a $10 bill, but he did not. He returned with a revolver, so Mapp left.

GROUP PLANS GIFT OF 'TALKING BOOK' FOR BLIND PUPILS

Presentation of a "talking book," a combination electric phonograph and radio set, to the Calhoun Street school for the use of its students in classes for the blind, will feature the annual meeting of the fifth district chapter, Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind, at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in Rich's tea room.

It will be a gift of the association to the school, and will be used in the sight-conservation classes, conducted by Mrs. R. C. Witcher, as well as the classes for blind students, taught by J. J. Auburn Twelve Wins Famous Mexico Race

The Auburn car that won Mexico's annual automobile racing classic on May 6, and set a new record for the course, was a stock model 12-cylinder brougham, the Auburn factory has been advised.

The race, sponsored by the National Automobile Association of Mexico, attracted unusual attention this year because the length of the course had been practically doubled. Heretofore the race has been run from Mexico City to Puebla, a distance of 129 kilometers, but this year the run was extended to Tehuacan, 256 kilometers from the capital.

The Auburn brougham was piloted by the veteran driver, Estrada Menocal, who had won the two last races in a Chrysler. His time this year was 2 hours 1 minute 27 4-5 seconds, against his old record of 1 hour, 8 minutes 12 seconds over a course just half as long.

Entered in this year's race were practically all the popular makes of American-made cars. Several of the cars entered were specially built for the race, but the Auburn winner was a stock model.

Driver Menocal was given a great ovation when he brought in his Auburn the winner, according to news dispatches of the race.

Shell Secures Big Midwestern Oil Properties

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 12.—Shell Petroleum Corporation has acquired all the real estate, facilities and business of the O'Neil Oil Company, of Milwaukee, Wis., one of the largest gasoline and motor oil distributing organizations in that state, it was announced today by Alexander Fraser, president.

The deal was for cash and the amount understood to have been approximately $1,000,000.

The major part of the properties involved are located in Milwaukee county. Several other properties, in cities and towns within a radius of 40 miles of Milwaukee, are included in the transfer.

Approximately 250 storage units and resale outlets of all kinds are affected.

Consummation of the deal makes Shell Petroleum Corporation one of the leading petroleum marketers in Wisconsin.

J. W. Watson, vice president and treasurer, St. Louis, Mo., and J. G. Sinclair, northern division manager, Chicago, negotiated the deal for Shell Petroleum Corporation.

Hudson Production Passes Totals For Year 1933

Every Terraplane and Hudson turned out from now on represents a gain over last year's production. On Wednesday, April 18, just before 11 a. m., car number 2,160,368, a Terraplane, came off the end of the line. This Terraplane sedan made some interesting history because, although it was only the third week of April, it passed the total production for the entire year of 1933.

"Every car we make for the next seven and a half months will represent a gain over last year," stated Chester G. Abbott, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car., "and we are looking forward to mighty fine business for the rest of this year. The fact that we have been able to ship more cars between January and mid-April of this year than we did all of last year, is something new in automotive history.

"For a week now we have been watching for this interesting car to come off the line. Incidentally, it was car number 2,160,368 produced by the Hudson Motor Car Co., since its founding in 1909. By the end of the day, April 18, we had exceeded the production of last year by about 600 cars. The car which tied the production of last year is now in a freight car bound for Los Angeles, Cal.

"Shipments of Terraplanes and Hudsons are still running at about four times the rate of a year ago and heavy manufacturing schedules have been planned for May to keep up with the nation-wide demand for these cars. Reports from all territories indicate that the automobile business will repeat the experience of last year as regards its continuance through the major part of the year, but the volume will be materially higher. Our own sales have increased at a materially faster rate than those of the industry generally, which has naturally established us closer to top position in sales in many of the leading centers."

SEA ISLAND SETS RECORD FOR BUSINESS

SEA ISLAND BEACH, Ga., May 12.—A record unapproached in any previous season was established at Sea Island Beach during the winter-spring season which closed last week. The season opened on December 23 and thousands of guests from the north and Canada were entertained.

During a period of more than six weeks during the season, from February 20 through April 9, the peak of the season, the Cloister hotel and apartments and every available cottage on the island were filled to capacity. During that period 1,022 definite requests for accommodations were turned down at the desk and by wire. These requests were for a total of 4,026 days. This was in addition to the hundreds who were advised that the hotel was filled to capacity and that the hotel was unable to accept reservations.

The Elder hotel, at Indian Springs, long a leading resort with Atlantans and others throughout the southeast, will formally be opened for the summer season on May 1.

FASTER TRAIN SERVICE PLANNED BY SANTA FE

The Santa Fe System announces, effective on May 20, faster train service to all western destinations, particularly the Grand Canyon National Park and California.

MERCHANTS SHOWN GOLDEN RULE PLAN

The Golden Rule plan of merchandising that is being presented to Atlanta merchants as a means of aiding community welfare agencies, and other organizations as well as private organizations, in raising money is meeting popular approval, it is reported by Joe Rosenfield Jr., 307 Norris building, who is fostering the plan.

The participating merchants will donate a percentage of their cash receipts during the Golden Rule plan period of six months to an escrow fund placed in a bank, from which sums can be earned for various organizations through the accumulation of Golden Rule certificates to be issued by the merchants to the patrons of their establishments.

Already more than 15 organizations have investigated the Golden Rule plan and through their presidents have agreed not only to sponsor the idea, but have pledged themselves to patronize Golden Rule stores and thus earn for their organization funds to carry on their work.

More than 3,000 members of these organizations are now waiting for the Golden Rule plan to start so that they might patronize those firms giving the Golden Rule cash certificates, which will be redeemed from the escrow fund in the bank. Any merchant or organization wishing to obtain additional details may phone Walnut 0677.

Wages on Hotel Job Set by Labor Board

The Atlanta regional labor board Saturday set a scale of wages for workmen employed on a hotel project at Rome, Ga., by the Upchurch Construction Company, of Montgomery, Ala., and said the increase should be retroactive from the time the men returned to work following their recent strike.

All striking employes were ordered to be allowed to return to work without discrimination and the board, refusing to rule on the "open" and "closed" shop, also said both sides must observe in good faith the collective bargaining clause of the NIRA.

The following wage scale was ordered with the provision that wages now in effect should not be reduced: Common labor, a minimum of 30 cents per hour; carpenters, a minimum of 55 cents per hour, and bricklayers a minimum of 87 1-2 cents per hour.

The board also ruled that there must be no further strikes or lockouts during the completion of the hotel project at Rome.

SILVER SITUATION HOLDS UNCHANGED

Democratic Leaders Lay Plans for Adjournment Within 3 Weeks' Time.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The negotiations for silver-rehabilitation legislation remained in status quo today, but a majority of the senate silver bloc clung optimistically to the belief a satisfactory bill would emerge sometime next week.

Meanwhile, with the stock market bill now on the way to conference with the house and other important legislation ready for floor action, senate democratic leaders laid plans for an adjournment within the next three weeks by continuing to bring the senate to work an hour earlier than usual.

Silver legislation and the reciprocal tariff bill probably will be the last two big measures acted upon.

Chairman King, democrat, Utah, of the unofficial silver committee, said he expected no developments in negotiations with the treasury and White House over the week-end.

Further conferences with Secretary Morgenthau will be held early next week after the treasury head has had an opportunity to discuss with President Roosevelt the progress reported by silver bloc members to have been made at their parley yesterday.

King confidently predicted a bill would come out of the discussions that would declare the policy of the government "shall" be that silver be made a primary monetary base with gold for currency issues with the ultimate aim of a 25 per cent silver and 75 per cent gold ratio.

Steps to carry out such a policy, such as nationalization of all domestic stocks and other purchases, would be made permissive, in the opinion of King and some other members of the bloc.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, and some others have said they would not be satisfied with anything less than a mandatory purchase clause.

The Borah faction contends the president already has permissive power to help silver but has not done so and additional authority of this nature would be useless.

COMPLETE BIRTH DATA SOUGHT FROM GEORGIA

The federal department of vital statistics has selected Georgia in which to undertake a campaign to bring birth registrations up to date, with the idea of later extending to other states the methods employed.

Dr. T. F. Murphy, chief statistician of the federal bureau of vital statistics was here Saturday to confer with Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the Georgia department of health, who will co-operate in gathering the registrations.

The work will be under the personal direction of Dr. A. W. Hedrich, assistant professor of vital statistics at Johns Hopkins University, who will seek the co-operation of all school teachers and womens' organizations.

Dr. Murphy explained that the state will be flooded with small cards, bearing a list of the data required, with the request that anyone knowing of births during the last 12 months return the cards to the state department of vital statistics, properly filled in as to details.

Promptly upon receipt of the cards the state department will return to the parents of the children mothers' notification certificates.

While the state department of vital statistics has made every effort to obtain a record of all births in the state, many have been missed, and Dr. Murphy said it was this interest by Georgia in attempting to obtain registrations that prompted the federal bureau to select this state in which to begin its work of compiling the statistics.

ATLANTAN'S MOTHER DIES IN PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Richard Henry Chapman, of Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., the mother of Mrs. William W. Horne, 1318 West Peachtree street, died Saturday at her home after a long illness. She was 86 years of age.

Mrs. Chapman was the wife of a member of the board of directors of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Philadelphia and a leading wholesale dry goods merchant.

Surviving, in addition to her husband and her daughter, are three sons, Richard H. Jr., Charles James and Edward Felton Chapman, all of Philadelphia, and one granddaughter, Mrs. Irwin Townsend Hyatt, of Atlanta.

Burial will take place Tuesday morning in Woodlands cemetery, Philadelphia.

23 PRISONERS MOVED TO TREUTLEN COUNTY

Twenty-three prisoners were transferred Saturday from Fulton tower to Treutlen county, under orders of the prison commission.

Included among the men transferred is Raymond Williams, serving 20 to 30 years for robbery, who was indicted recently in a kangaroo court investigation. It was said in the solicitor-general's office that the indictment will be held over against Williams. Ten white men are in the number of men sent to Treutlen county, the others being negroes.

There is a silver lining beyond the Golden Rule Plan.

WHITNEY HUBBARD PAINTINGS ON VIEW AT MUSEUM TODAY

An interesting exhibition of the work of Whitney M. Hubbard opens Sunday afternoon at the High Museum. Mr. Hubbard is one of the foremost marine painters of the United States and the major number of studies are of surf in sunlight, a theme which produces beautiful effects of waves and rocks in colorful arrangement. Thirty-eight studies are comprised in the show.

Mr. Hubbard has lived and painted his entire lifetime on the eastern end of Long Island and this constant application to his subject matter places him in a rare position among artists. Many of these studies have been exhibited in the large museums and circuit shows of America.

An invitation is extended to all Atlantans who have not yet taken advantage of the opportunity of viewing the internationally famous painting of "Richard Brinsley Sheridan," by Sir Joshua Reynolds.

Another noted picture, now on exhibition, is the portrait, "Miss Annie Graham," by Thomas Beach, renowned British artist. This picture is loaned to the museum anonymously and may be on view for only a limited time.

The High Museum is open free to the public daily from 9 to 5, from 2 until 5 on Sunday afternoons and on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings from 7 until 9 o'clock.

ISAKESON INSTALLS FUR-STORAGE PLANT

Louis Isaacson, proprietor of the fur store at the Peachtree entrance to the Henry Grady hotel, announced on Saturday the installation of one of the largest fur-storage plants in the south.

The plant is in the subbasement of the hotel and has room for 1,000 coats.

The freezing temperature is kept in the plant and its contents are protected by a large safe door which was bought by Mr. Isaacson from the former Peachtree branch of the First National bank. The public is invited to inspect the plant Monday.

Inaugural of "Symphonic Hour," Broadcast From Portland, on Air Today.

Howard Barlow, eminent director of symphony orchestras before the microphone, will conduct the Columbia symphony orchestra in the new summer series of "Symphonic Hour" concerts, to be transmitted locally through the facilities of WGST.

Barlow was in the podium when the first full symphony was broadcast over the Columbia network, in 1927, and has directed numerous musical organizations over the air since then. He is specially well known for his able direction of the New World Symphony orchestra and for his introduction of Nipo Martini, now with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

During his long association with Columbia he has developed a technique that fully utilizes the possibilities of radio in symphonic programs. Meticulous attention is devoted to the arrangement of the microphones and the control of power. This assures the most faithful reproduction of the composer's work by bringing the powerful cresendos and delicate diminuendos, so often lost in either torrential clamor or extraneous noise during regular concerts, within the compass of the new medium.

The "Symphonic Hour" has been a summer feature of the CBS schedule since 1927 and includes readings from all the great masters of classic music. It may be heard here today from 1:15 to 2 o'clock.

Today's program, which will be heard here fifteen minutes after the opening, because another program had been scheduled previously, will feature Brahm's Majestic Symphony No. 3 in M major. Other selections will include the stirring Beethoven "Prometheus overture and two of Dvork's Slavonic Dances, Nos. 1 and 10.

Mothers Honored At Portland.

Among the Mother's Day broadcasts scheduled today, on WGST, will be found an especially devoted and beautiful program from Portland, Ore., where the Portland Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Sampietro, will be joined by the Benedictine Boy's choir, of Mount Angel, Ore., and the 80-voiced mixed chorus of the Sanctuary of Our Sorrowful Mother, where the broadcast will originate.

The sanctuary has been designated by his holiness, Pius XI, as a place of special celebration in honor of "Mary, Our Mother." Rev. A. M. Mayer, director of the sanctuary, will deliver a brief address on "Mother's Day Observance."

The broadcast may be heard over WGST, from 2 to 3 o'clock.

Waring Offers "The Rosary."

Fred Waring will pay tribute to his mother, and the mothers of the nation, during his program to be broadcast over the CBS chain and WGST tonight, from 7:30 to 8 o'clock.

Nevin's "The Rosary," Mrs. Frank Waring's favorite selection, will be presented as a glee club arrangement, with Stuart Churchill, high tenor, as the featured vocalist.

Sylvia Sidney In Preview.

Sylvia Sidney will head the cast in the radio preview of Paramount's latest picture, "Thirty-Day Princess," co-starring Carey Grant, during the "Forty-five Minutes in Hollywood" broadcast over WGST and the CBS chain tonight.

Another novel feature of this regular Sunday night entertainment from Los Angeles includes dramatized versions of real life incidents "on the lot."

Mark Warnow and his orchestra, with the Eton Boys offering the vocal interludes, will play current hit tunes from the most recent productions there. WGST lists the organization at 8:30 p. m.

Listeners Invited To See "Vitality."

Continuing on their new 8 o'clock spot, the "Vitality" ensemble will broadcast another variety program from the WGST-Ansley studios tonight. Jack Stapp, program director, has renewed his invitation to those who have applauded the program to be present at the studios and observe the artists perform, in person.

Starring Manfrey Duke, blues singer, Paris Lee, baritone, and Frank McSherry's orchestra, with the Old Philosopher as master of ceremonies, the schedule tonight includes:

"You're the Whole Parade"; "Out for No Good"; "Fantasie Oriental"; "Ain't 'cha Glad"; "Son of a Gun"—Orchestra.

"Wrong Side of the Fence" and "I Knew You When"—Manfrey Duke.

"Home Folks"—Paris Lee.

Paris Lee will also sing an unannounced request number.

At a conference with Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus, at which she was accompanied by her stepson, Percy, Mrs. Lea was told any clemency application would be handled through the usual channels.

Luke Lea Jr. was ordered to serve two to six years in lieu of payment of a $25,000 fine imposed in Buncombe county superior court by Judge M. V. Barnhill after his conviction, with his father and Wallace B. Davis, of conspiring to defraud the Central Bank & Trust Company, Asheville, of $800,000.

Appeal To Be Filed On City Rates Ruling

Assistant Attorney-General John T. Goree announced Saturday that the public service commission would appeal the decision of Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton superior court, holding that the commission had no authority to regulate municipal power plants, to the state supreme court.

The city of Albany with 6 other municipalities Friday won its fight for an injunction halting an inquiry into municipal rate schedules.

Mr. Goree said the appeal would be filed with Judge Moore Monday.

THREE BROTHERS HELD FOR ASSAULT, ROBBERY

Three brothers, the youngest 14 years of age, were being held by DeKalb county police on a charge of felony Saturday night following investigation of an assault and robbery of Marion Bishop, 72, of Wesley Chapel.

Hayden Evans, 25; Louis Evans, 16, and Benny Evans, 14, are the three youths held. During the night of April 28 Bishop heard a noise in his garage. He investigated and, while armed with a shotgun, he was overpowered by three youths. One of the youths struck Bishop with some instrument, and the gun was taken from him.

At the office of Chief W. O. Parker Saturday it was said Benny and Louis Evans had admitted they participated in the affair.

STAMPS IN THE NEWS.

Andorra is just entering that philatelic division which comes under the classification of airpost. Its first set of such stamps consists of 12 values, ranging from 25 centimos to 5 pesetas.

Depicted thereon are either an airplane or a mountain scene, the design being the same for each group of four stamps. Andorra is a semi-independent state under the joint control of France and the Spanish bishop of Urgel. The new stamps are for the Spanish administration.

In connection with the philatelic exposition at Milan, Italy, a special issue for the Italian colonies has been printed. They are for 20, 30 and 50 centesimi and 1.25 lire.

The Irish Free State has proposed a 2-penny charity stamp to be ready before Christmas.

The value to collectors of the 3-cent brown Newfoundland stamp issued for the first trans-Atlantic airpost flight by Hawker in 1919 is going up. A recent sale in London sent the figure to $1,050.

Costa Rica has prepared a set of 13 air stamps, while from Uruguay have come eight postage stamps commemorating the "third republic."

ATLANTA CLUB MEETINGS.

The Stamp Collectors' Club of Atlanta will offer a Mother's Day program at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the assembly room of the Peachtree Arcade. Mrs. D. S. Wells is in charge of the entertainment and all the ladies of the club, including wives, friends and other relatives, are especially invited to be present, as it is to be a ladies' night.

Talks on the Mother's Day stamp, showing of heirlooms of mothers of members and other interesting events make up the program.

Atlanta Stamp Society.

The Atlanta Stamp Society, A. P. S. Branch No. 96, will meet at 7:30 o'clock Thursday night at the Henry Grady hotel.

The society had a most enjoyable meeting last Thursday night. Approval circuits from the Rutherford Stamp Club and the A. P. S. were on hand, and the members in attendance had an unusual opportunity to fill many blank spaces in their albums.

The meeting Thursday will be held in parlor A at the Henry Grady. Mr. Clark is scheduled to show his collection of autographed blocks, and a large attendance should take this occasion to view this unusual collection. Interest in collecting seems to be in full swing, and it is confidently expected that this interest will hold, despite the summer season.

NATIONAL PARKS ISSUE.

James Waldo Fawcett, in the Washington Star, says:

It seems assured that the National Parks series of stamps will be issued. No responsible officer of the postoffice department has been willing to authorize a statement, but it is generally believed that the plan has presidential approval.

Indications are that there will be 10 stamps, running through the denominations 1 cent to 10 cents and printed in the standard colors.

The designs, it is believed, will show representative scenes in the following parks: Yosemite, Grand Canyon, Mount Rainier, Mesa Verde, Yellowstone, Acadia, Great Smoky Mountains, Sequoia, Glacier and Zion.

Date of issue should be about July 3.

COVERS FROM CAPITALS.

A writer in Weekly Philatelic Gossip says: "A complete collection of covers of every capital city in the world will be one of the most interesting collections you can secure.

"I suggest as a start you secure covers from the capitals of every state and possession of the United States on the date of the anniversary of their admission to the union.

"To secure covers from the foreign capitals I use postal reply coupons, which are sold by the postoffice for 9 cents each, which I inclose with my cover and request, or I purchase from dealers stamps needed and affix them to my cover, being sure that sufficient postage is applied to insure the return of the cover. I address my request, usually, to our ambassador or consul in the capital city in question, with a polite request that he return my covers . . .

"You will be surprised at the number of capitals there really are in the world."

CONFEDERATE CACHET.

A Confederate veterans' reunion will be held in Chattanooga, Tenn., on June 6, 7 and 8, 1934, and at the same time a convention of the Sons of Confederate Veterans will also be held.

The reunion is being sponsored by the American Legion, which is also sponsoring a cachet for the event. A cachet of the same design but in a different color will be applied on each of the three days.

Covers for this cachet should be sent, unsealed, already addressed and stamped, in a large envelope addressed to W. Ralph Wharton, Box 724, Chattanooga, Tenn.

JUNIOR STAMP EXHIBITION.

The first national Junior Stamp exhibition will be held the last two weeks in June at the Brooklyn Children's museum, Brooklyn, N. Y. Exhibits from clubs on the Pacific coast, from the middle west, from the south and from the eastern coast have been promised.

Dealers and manufacturers of philatelic supplies and accessories have been most responsible and many worthwhile prizes have been received. A quantity of high-grade albums have been received from the Scott Stamp & Coin Company, to be awarded as first prizes; the American Philatelic Line has sent albums, stock books and packages of stamp hinges; Grossman Stamp Company a series of stamp packets; the Stampolog, Inc., albums; John W. Nicklin Co., albums; H. E. Harris & Company, selected packets of stamps; A. E. Pade, choice mixtures of foreign stamps; Harper & Brothers, books; Sears Publishing Company, book; Walter C. Sargent, albums; Leo August, albums. Others have written that they were sending material also.

There is no fee or other charge for entering exhibits. Address all communications to Frank L. Wilson, Director Stamps Jr., 100 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON FLASHES.

Additional plates have been employed in the printing of the Mother's Day stamp, and the complete list now stands as follows: Flat-bed, 21,202 to 21,205, inclusive; rotary, 21,210 to 21,219, inclusive. First printings from the flat-bed plates went to Guam, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and the Virgin Islands. Robert E. Fellers has announced that the philatelic agency will have both flat-bed and rotary types.

A link of history connects the name of Whistler with the Century of Progress World's Fair stamps, as well as with the Mother's Day stamp. The painter's grandfather, Major John Whistler, was the builder of Fort Dearborn and the founder of Chicago.

The Philippine trade commission, Barr Building, states that a further stock of the recent Olympic games stamps is expected "about the third week in May."

The division of stamps will be the first integral section of the postoffice department to move into the new building at Penn avenue and Twelfth street. May 15 is the date set for the transfer. The philatelic agency will have quarters on the sixth floor.

The postoffice department will probably have a special display at the A. P. S. convention, Atlantic City.

Unofficially, I learn that about 40 different stamps are under consideration in the postoffice department at the present time. Indications are that the scheme for the presidential series will be carried through, despite the lack of enthusiasm among collectors. Certain individuals insist that Mr. Roosevelt wants his neglected predecessors honored, but I doubt the accuracy of their argument. The president was not friendly to the idea when it first was suggested. He may have changed his mind, but it is not likely. A far more interesting theory is that another individual is responsible and that Mr. Roosevelt, somewhat regretfully, is permitting him to have his way.

I believe that many collectors will want the duck hunters' license stamp, value $1. It will be a beautiful work of art, large in size, blue in color. And it will be an annual affair—there will be a new design each year.

JAMES WALDO FAWCETT.

TWO KINDS OF COLLECTORS.

Stamp collectors could easily be divided into various classifications, according to the thought in mind. In this instance we will roughly split them into two classes—those who appreciate the other fellow's stamps and those who do not; without criticising the latter class, let us at least say a word of praise of the first. The chap who sits beside you at your desk and goes carefully over your volumes, exclaiming in delight at the pieces that you yourself are proud of, is a friend worth having. He substantiates your own good opinion of the collection you have worked so hard over—he makes you radiate pride of achievement—he warms your heart. Probably your collection isn't at all the kind of a collection he would build for himself—possibly in his heart he may rather despise your preferences; however, that may be, we say "blessings on his head" for, in being courteous and respectful of our humble holdings, he is making life pleasanter and advancing the cause of philately.—MEKEELS.

ARCHAEOLOGY SOCIETY GATHERS HERE FRIDAY

Two-Day Program Includes Visit to Etowah Mounds and Other Points.

The Society for Georgia Archaeology will meet in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday of this week. The executive council will meet at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at the ceramics department of Georgia Tech and at 7 there will be a dinner at the Capital City Club, followed by a round-table discussion to which all members of the society and friends interested in the pre-historic period in Georgia are invited.

Plates for the dinner are $1 and those desiring reservations should phone Mrs. Wayne Patterson, Hemlock 4667; Mrs. K. R. Lummus, Hemlock 1925-W; Mrs. E. Bates Block, Hemlock 0619; Miss Annie Laurie Hill, Hemlock 0358, or Mrs. R. S. Fleet, Hemlock 6237.

Dr. John R. Swanton, one of the nation's most distinguished archaeologists, has been invited to speak during the meeting.

On Saturday there will be a visit to the Etowah mounds, near Cartersville, the party to meet at the courthouse in that city at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Following the visit to the ancient mounds, luncheon will be served in Cartersville.

Saturday afternoon there will be visits to Dalton and Fort Mountain, so called because of the ancient fortress still to be seen there. Near Dalton, at Resaca, is the site of New Echota, the last capital of the Cherokee Indian nation, and the spot where the treaty ceding the Cherokee lands to the United States was signed.

The Etowah mounds, on the north side of the Etowah river, are of remarkable formation. Scientists from many states have visited them and have excavated them and studied their contents for many years. Large quantities of pottery and other remains of antiquity have been found here, differing widely from similar relics found in other mounds, indicating an older and different civilization once flourished in this section.

Members of the executive council of the society include Dr. C. C. Harrold, Macon; J. M. Mallory, Savannah; Mrs. M. E. Judd, Dalton; Bonnell Stone, Oxford; Linton Solomon, Macon; W. A. Harris, Macon; Dr. A. V. Henry, Atlanta; Ogden Persons, Forsyth, and R. W. Smith, Atlanta.

Bryan Grant Beats George Lott; Boosts Davis Cup Team Chances

CRACKERS RALLY TO BEAT CHICKASAWS, 10 TO 4

BREAK O' DAY!

By Ralph McGill

Take me out to the ball game,
Take me out to the crowd.
Buy me some peanuts and crackerjack,
I don't care if I never get back.
Oh, it's root, root, root for the home team,
If they don't win it's a shame.
Oh, it's one, two, three strikes, you're out
At the old ball game.

(Waltz me around again Willie, around, around and around.)

The Crackers are coming home today, having won 10 games in 14 played on the road.

Bryan Grant defeated George Lott at Memphis in the finals of the tennis tournament there and if he is left off the Davis cup team there is nothing left to do but secede from the Union.

High Quest, of the Brookmeade stables, won the Preakness, to give to the stable owned by Mrs. Dodge Sloane four important victories in less than a month, including the Kentucky Derby.

(Awake and call me early, mother dear, for I'm to be queen of the May.)

LET'S ALL GO OUT TODAY.

Atlanta's baseball club, departing from home in fifth place, and accorded but a mild ovation, slugged and fought its way to a tie for first place.

Winning 10 games in 14 played puts to rest all talk about the schedule's inequalities and proved once more that there are 77 games played at home and 77 on the road and that all one needs to combat that situation is a ball club that can win games.

The team is not a hard-hitting club and yet it hit well. It is not a championship fielding club and yet it fielded like one.

It is made up with a pitching staff which includes four rookies and two pitchers of experience, yet it has had marvelous pitching.

It is ridiculous to claim a pennant for this team. Before the season started this corner was the only voice crying in a wilderness for this team as a real contender. It is still that. But the roughest road is yet ahead.

No team Atlanta has had merits a welcome as does this one.

No manager Atlanta has had has been as frank and as courageous as Spencer Abbott who burned all his bridges before the season began by saying, "This is my team, I had all the co-operation possible. If it fails, blame me."

He is a he-man, this Abbott. And a manager the players will follow.

A CUP PLACE FOR GRANT, OR ELSE.

The hide-bound, self-satisfied but oft-ridiculous Davis cup committee of the U. S. L. T. A. has consistently refused to give a cup position to Bryan Grant, of Atlanta.

Just how they will continue to justify that position now that Grant has twice defeated Lester Stoefen and has added George Lott to the list of beaten foes, is difficult to conceive. He has defeated one of the better singles players on the cup team and the world's best doubles player.

They should give Bryan Grant a chance not as any gesture toward the south or toward Grant but because it would be giving the American team a chance. It has not been overly successful. Grant could do nothing but improve it.

Grant lacks tact. He has no more tact than an American diplomat. But he has courage and he will play great tennis. The cup committee should be looking for tennis players. It has looked long enough for other types of members. After all the object is to win tennis matches.

They can no longer say Grant is too small or that he does not play well on grass. It so happens that a majority of this country's courts are of clay. (Just as most of the amateur tennis heroes have feet of clay.) But Grant, once on the cup team and given a chance to practice on grass against suitable opponents, would improve. His outstanding victory of 1933, the defeat of Ellsworth Vines at Forest Hills, was accomplished on turf.

Suppose we all wire Norris Williams, captain of the cup team, care Parrish and Company at Philadelphia, and suggest that we believe Grant a cup player. A kind, courteous wire.

TOO MANY GOOD ONES.

Mrs. Dodge Sloane has so many good thoroughbreds she doesn't know what to do.

Bob Smith, the trainer for her Brookmeade stables, said before the Preakness was run that he had, in High Quest a better colt than Cavalcade, the winner of the Derby.

He proved it Saturday when High Quest finished first and Cavalcade second.

High Quest had already beaten Cavalcade. That was at Harve de Grace in a six-furlong event when they were both two-year-olds. He beat First Minstrel, Spy Hill, Speedmore and others.

He was not nominated for the Derby.

There is a colt named Good Goods who hasn't been given a chance as yet.

And there is the American Derby and the Arlington classic.

What will we do about this monopoly on thoroughbreds? Does the Blue Eagle apply?

A LETTER FROM HENRY.

Crowds of 15,000 at track meets on the west coast are no novelty at all. In fact, the special stadia, built for track meets, are constructed to seat as many as 30,000 and are often sold out.

A letter from Bill Henry, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, the finest newspaper on the west coast, reports that 40,000 are expected to attend the national collegiate meet in June, which meet will see Perrin Walker, the Georgia Tech flyer, competing with the nation's best sprinters.

Henry, the best and most popular of the west coast sports writers, writes a most interesting letter asking for information as to southern track. It reports on track, on our old football friend, El Trojan, and on baseball. He writes:

Dear Ralph:

Just as one long-suffering sports writer to another, what are the chances of the good people down in your part of the country sending some noble athletes out to Los Angeles to the national college meet in June?

We are very much interested in that young fellow Perrin Walker, of whom we've heard a great deal, and are wondering if

Grant Is Winner Over Lott; Boosts Cup Team Chances

Stages Comeback, 4-6, 6-1, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3, To Win Dixie Invitation Tourney at Memphis From Davis Cup Star.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 12.—(AP)—Bryan Grant, "Mighty Midget" of the tennis courts, wrested the University's Club's Dixie invitation tournament tittle from George Lott, Chicago Davis cup star, here today by outfighting his opponent in a five-set match, the score being 4-6, 6-1, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The victory meant more than a title for the game little Georgian. It was the first victory he had ever scored over the stout Chicagoan in tournament play and he had conceded an advantage to his opponent before the start of the match.

The victory also boosts the little Atlantan's chances to land a place on the American Davis cup team this season. He stands a good chance of being placed on the doubles team with Lott in the cup matches.

The final score does not tell the whole story. It was a case of a game little man fighting with all his power and heart to win over a man who had seemed unconquerable to him before.

In losing his championship in the finals today Lott became just another victim of the little "Giant Killer." Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, No. 3 United States star, fell before the diminutive southerner in the semi-finals yesterday.

Lott, starting off impressively, played a clever game in the first set in which he forced his young opponent into repeated errors, and scored sensational volleys.

Fighting gamely, Grant, viciously contesting every point, literally carried the second set through sheer determination to win.

Reaching the heights of his power in the third set, Lott won 6-1, with an apparent ease that seemed to disconcert the little Georgian.

However, after a 10-minute intermission, "Bitsy" went back to put, as he said later, "my very heart into it," he broke through Lott's service, made sensational getts and kept the ball far back into Lott's court, keeping the Chicagoan away from the net where he is usually dangerous. Grant won the set, 6-4.

FORCES GAME.

Continuing to force the game and outfighting his opponent at every turn, Grant won the deciding set, 6-3, by probably as brilliant a game as he has ever played. Lott seemed to be unable to make any progress against him.

"I am sorry my family and Uncle Larry (Larry Grant, Atlanta) weren't here to see me play today," Grant commented.

"I wish my good friend, Malon Courts, of Atlanta, could have been here, too. I am very happy."

Berkeley Bell, of Texas and New York, and J. Gilbert Hall, of South Orange, N. J., won the doubles championship, 6-2, 7-5, in a finals contest with Lester Stoefen and Bryan Grant, in a match reduced to two out of three sets by agreement.

Bell and Hall had entered the finals by defeating Lott and Robert (Lefty) Bryan, of Chattanooga, 6-3,

Lee Blanks Dodgers, 5 to 0

NEW YORK, May 12.—(UP)—Big Bill Lee, 25-year-old Chicago Cub right-hander turned in the best pitching performance in the National league today when he blanked the Brooklyn Dodgers with two hits to win, 5 to 0.

It was the second shutout victory for Lee, a youngster whom Manager Charley Grimm is banking on to lead the Cubs to a pennant. Lee won his first major league game May 7 by holding the Philadelphia Phillies to four hits.

The Pittsburgh Pirates held first place jointly with the Cubs by defeating the Phillies, 11 to 6. The Pirates found a quartet of pitchers—Holley, Kleinhans, Moore and Grabowski—for 13 hits, while Larry French, Chagnon and Hoyt gave up 11 safeties.

By rallying in the last two innings, the New York Giants defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 4. After scoring once in the opening inning, the Giants were held in check until the eighth when they tallied twice. In the final inning they scored three runs.

BRAVES BEAT REDS.

Boston's Braves pounded Stout, Lindsey, Kolp, and Benton for 15 hits and won, 8 to 2, over the Cincinnati Reds, who made 12 hits off Fred Frankhouse.

A wild throw to second base by Luke Appling sent Ben Chapman scampering home in the 10th inning.

High Quest Wins; Cavalcade Second

By Orlo Robertson.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 12.—(AP)—In a thrilling nose finish, two great three-year-old thoroughbreds from Mrs. Isable Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade stable today settled a personal dispute as they soundly whipped five other fleet colts in the $25,000 Preakness at Pimlico.

High Quest, making his first start since winning the Wood Memorial, won the race, but only a nose back driving forward like a huge machine, was Cavalcade, winner of the Kentucky Derby, seeking the elusive turf double.

Leaving in their wake such speedy colts as Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery and Mrs. Frank J. Heller's Agrarian, the Brookmeade stars upheld the confidence of the majority of 30,000 fans, who packed the old hilltop course to make the Derby winner and his fleet stablemate the prohibitive choice at $2.90 for $2.

Mrs. Sloane, New York and Florida sportswoman, declared to win with Cavalcade but little Bobby Jones had no such intention in mind as he sent High Quest to the front at the rise of the barrier and kept him there through as great a stretch drive as has ever been seen in the 44 years of the famous stake.

LENGTH BACK.

A length back at the end of the one and three-sixteenth miles was Discovery, second to Cavalcade in the Derby and fighting to ward off the determined challenge of Agrarian, which was third in the Kentucky Derby. One and one-half lengths separated the pair at the judges' stand.

The judges first posted Agrarian's number as finishing third but quickly changed it, giving the chestnut son of Display the position. It was the first time in 14 starts that Agrarian had failed to finish in the money.

In defeating his stablemate for the second time since they began their racing careers last year, High Quest earned $25,175 to boost his total earnings to $44,690. Cavalcade's share of the gross purse of $30,200 was $2,500 and sent his earnings up to $53,855. High Quest beat the Derby winner by a length in the Eastern Shore handicap at Havre De Grace last fall.

Over a fast track, High Quest reeled off the distance in 1:58 1-5, one-fifth of a second off the track record but four-fifths of a second faster than the best Preakness time, made by Coventry in 1925. Out in front all the way he stepped the first six furlongs in the sizzling time of 1:12 2-5 and was at the mile post in 1:37 3-5.

BAD BREAKS.

But for a few bad breaks, Cavalcade might have joined Sir Barton, Gallant Fox and Burgoo King as the only horses that have won both the Derby and Preakness and "Uncle" Mack Garner probably would have been rejoicing over his first victory in the famous stake.

The Derby winner had all the worst of the racing luck. He was sixth away from the barrier and was forced to go wide at the first turn as High Quest sped along in front with Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's Time Supply, Discovery and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Spy Hill lapped close behind the fast-traveling pacemaker.

Garner made his move midway in the back stretch. He took Cavalcade to the outside and, like the thundering charge of the light brigade, he moved forward. Entering the homestretch, however, Garner sought to find an opening on the rail. The move proved costly as Cavalcade was pocketed between High Quest, running on

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 13, 1934.

Harry Hits 'Em Hard

Harry Taylor, the handsome young first baseman of the Atlanta Crackers, is one of the sensations of the club thus far. They're calling him "Houdini" Harry because of his clever fielding around first, and his bat has been a potent factor in the Crackers' highly successful road trip which ended yesterday.

At present Taylor is hitting .375 for the Crackers and is leading the club in runs driven in with 21 in 24 games. The Crackers got him in a trade from Albany of the International last winter. The Cubs paid Seattle $22,000 for him two years ago. He is destined to go back to the big leagues.

GREAT CROWD TO GREET CRACKERS

By Jimmy Jones.

Atlanta's dream of Southern league baseball on Sunday will come true this afternoon when the Crackers, back from a successful road trip of two weeks, open a 14-game home stand with Larry Gilbert's New Orleans Pelicans at 3 o'clock.

A crowd second only to that of opening day is expected to turn out to welcome the club back home and to celebrate the advent of baseball on the Sabbath here. Advance estimates are that, with fair weather prevailing, the attendance will approximate 12,000 persons, which would be only a few short of the colorful throng which saw the opener here with Nashville on a gloomy day.

Not since the late Charley Frank experimented with a few Sunday games out at Fort McPherson back in 1919 has Atlanta attempted Southern league ball on Sunday. Frank used the program selling idea as admission, but it was none too successful.

This year the Atlanta public, after voting overwhelmingly in favor of legalizing Sunday ball last year, saw it become an actuality when the Junior Chamber of Commerce conceived the idea of putting on the games for Atlanta charities.

NINE GAMES.

The Crackers will play nine Sunday games in all here this year. They already have played two Sunday exhibitions before large crowds, around 4,000 witnessing the first with Toronto. President Wilbert Robinson obtained the optional Sunday dates for Atlanta in the winter schedule meeting at New Orleans, anticipating that the city would have Sunday games.

Manager Spencer Abbott yesterday informed The Constitution that Frank Barnes, one of his two veteran left-handers, would be his choice to face the Pels in the series opener this afternoon. Barnes has pitched two six-hit victories for the Crackers on the road and one of them was a 4-0 shutout of the Birmingham Barons. The big fellow apparently has rounded into form with the arrival of hot weather.

Barnes is a hot weather pitcher and while his relief work Friday at Memphis was far from scintillating, he is obviously effective as a starting pitcher. Abbott banks on him for a victory, anyway, by way of getting his men off on the right foot at home.

MOOSE NOT OUT.

Abbott also intimated in his wire that big Moose Clabaugh, still the longest clouter of the Crackers, regardless of what his present status may be, will be back in the lineup before long.

"I took him out today to give him a little rest; undecided about playing him Sunday," Abbott stated in his wire.

Reports that Abbott would reinstate Taft Wright, the youngster who was hitting at a .355 clip when a twisted ankle sent him out of the lineup at Birmingham, on next Tuesday were still unfounded. Wright's ankle, rather badly sprained, has improved but hasn't quite mended completely as yet.

Wright, however, will be ready soon and Abbott should have no worry about his outfield with Duck McKee going like a cool million and Ray Wise still hitting above .300. Abbott also has "Pip" Koehler, his ace utility man, who does a very good job of playing the outfield, although

HAYES VICTOR OVER MEMPHIS IN FINAL GAME

Casey Starts But Fails in Fourth; Club Tied for Lead.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 12.—Lefty Billy Bayne's fine pitching was offset by five Chick errors and the Atlanta Crackers won the third and deciding game of the series today, 10 to 4.

The Crackers went back into a tie with Chattanooga for the lead as the Lookouts lost to Birmingham, 6-5.

For seven innings the Crackers got a total of one earned run off the Memphis southpaw, but seemingly discouraged at misplays by his teammates, he gave up two triples, a double and a single, which, combined with an error, gave the Crackers five runs in the ninth.

Atlanta opened with Hugh Casey, youthful right-hander, but he was banged out of the box with two down in the fourth after being nicked for 10 hits and four runs.

ABBOTT SMART.

The Crackers' veteran manager, Spencer Abbott, again made a master move by inserting young Millard Hayes, also of the right-handed species. Hayes fanned Buck Redfern, the first batter he faced, to end the fourth and then gave up only two singles in the last five chapters.

Singles by Andy Reese, Joe Prerost and Frank Brazill, along with a wild pitch, helped the Chicks to pick up their first cluster of two runs in the opening session. They got two hits in each the second and third but were unable to convert.

Bayne first bumped into trouble in the fourth when Duck McKee led off with a single to right. Reese made a great stop of Harry's Taylor's sizzling drive down first and threw to second trying for a double play, but a trifle late. Redfern handled Ray Wise's grounder cleanly but threw low to first. Joe Palmisano hit to third and Redfern fumbled but recovered in time to force McKee. Wise ambled home when Wes Kingdon bobbled on Koehler's grounder and Palmisano dashed in on Byrne James' one-bagger.

CHICKS BUNCH 3.

The Chicks grouped three safeties to accumulate two more runs in their half of the fourth. Ramon Cuoto opened fire with a single to right, and a pass to Calvin Chapman and singles by Reese and Prerost put the runners across.

Once more the Crackers tied the count in the sixth, making two runs when the side should have been retired. With two down, Kingdon took Palmisano's effort through short and threw low to first. Koehler hit to left field and Jimmy Powell misjudged the ball, allowing it to go for two bases and scoring Palmisano. A stinging single through second by James sent Koehler home.

An error hurt Bayne again in the eighth. After Taylor hoisted to center, Wise shot a single to left. With a double play in sight, Kingdon kicked Palmisano's grounder and both men were safe. Koehler popped to second but James lined a single to center, scoring Wise.

BAYNE GIVES UP.

The Memphis pitcher started well in the ninth, striking out Hayes for the second time but subsequent happenings put the Chicks too far behind in their half to catch up. Followed a double by Chatham, a triple by McKee, a single by Taylor, an error by Kingdon on Wise's roller, and a triple by Palmisano, accounting for five tallies.

Realizing Bayne should have won with better support, the spectators gave the pitcher a rousing ovation as he was the first batter in the ninth. He responded with a single to center but was forced a few moments later by Reese, after Chapman had flied out to left. Prerost skied to first to end the game.

SMITHIES WIN GOLF CROWN

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 12.—(AP)—Tech High, of Atlanta, retained its team championship in the annual southern interscholastic golf tournament here today. The Atlantans had a gross score of 656.

Other team scores were: Salisbury, 678; Greenville, S. C., 683; Winston-Salem, 701; High Point, 756; Charlotte, 702, and Fayetteville, 726.

J. "Kid" Brown, of Tech High, won the individual title with a low gross score of 148.

Other members of the Tech High team are Captain Tommy Barnes, Jack Cook and Paul Senkbeil.

It marks the third straight year in which the Atlanta team has won the southern prep golf championsip.

Bulldogs Stage Rally To Beat Tech Before Alumni Crowd, 4-3

GEORGIA WINS CLOSE GAME TO EVEN SERIES

Moorehead's Hit Sends Winning Run Across in Ninth Inning.

By Jack Troy.

ATHENS, May 12.—Georgia Tech's jumping Jackets barged into the seventh inning of the final game of the four-game series with Georgia today apparently all set to win the first series since 1913, which is a long time as Jacket fans will readily tell you.

But it was time for the old seventh-inning stretch and as the soulful strains of alma mater carried across the field the Bulldogs determined on their first action of the day. They had been held scoreless up to this point with the Jackets holding a three-run lead. Carl Waits had been very effective.

Georgia got very busy indeed in the manufacture of runs and tied the score. Waits went out and Sloan Stribling III, who had pitched the day before and indeed in some part of every game of the series, came in as relief.

TIGHT SPOT.

It was a very tight spot. There were three men on the bases, two out and the score knotted. But Stribling took Harrison Anderson's roller and retired the side.

A great exhibition of relief pitching, it was. But in the next inning Stribling threw his knee out of joint fielding a fly and had to retire. The game Jacket right-hander received a great ovation as he left the field. McKinley came in, walked a couple of Bulldogs, and then got the side out.

And it was in the ninth that Georgia won the game, 4 to 3, to square the season's series and leave the matter of baseball supremacy unsettled for the year.

Two were out. And then Harrison Anderson, who is a great pinch-deliverer, singled. Cy Grant, the old Cornelia apple knocker, banged a double against the right-field fence. Quick fielding by Tommy Spradling held Anderson on third.

STAGE SET.

And so it was that the stage was all set for Leroy Moorehead, the chunky catcher and one of Georgia's finest athletes. There were two strikes and one ball. The Georgia band struck up the old familiar battle cry—Glory, Glory to old Georgia.

And Moorehead responded with a spanking single through second base which Minu Grossi vainly attempted to get and Anderson scored the winning run.

It was one of the features of Alumni Day, this colorful game which introduced Governor Eugene Talmadge as the first batter and Miss Elizabeth "Betty" Schilling, of Marietta, as the pitcher. Georgia trackmen had just won a one-sided victory over Florida, 88 1-2 to 38 1-2. And the alumni and students were in a responsive state of mind.

A few good-natured catcalls greeted the governor as he walked to the plate arm-in-arm with Callender Weltner and Theresa Hamby, of Atlanta. The governor was a Georgia athlete once upon a time.

The governor, suh, is a democrat. He took off his coat, turned back the brim of his cowboy hat and took a firm grip on the bat. Miss Schilling gripped the ball and wound up. Ball one, low. Ball two, low. Ball three, low. Ball four, low. Ball five, high. Ball six, low. Strike one, swung. Strike two, foul. Ball eight, high. Ball nine, low. And then the governor connected with a hard smash which Charley Treadaway, Georgia second baseman, gathered in.

SENIOR PARADE.

And the game was on. It was delayed for a time in the first as the seniors, comically attired, held their annual parade around the field. Governor Talmadge led the parade on a horse. There was a mock "shotgun wedding," fifth horseman and all the rest.

Behind the pitching of Waits, Tech scored three runs and held this advantage until the seventh. In the second inning Sundial Martin walked, Gibson hit to Cy Grant who threw the ball over Anderson's head at first and both runners advanced. Minu Grossi's single scored both runners.

Tech scored again in the sixth. Johnny Ferguson doubled to center and came home on Carter's error.

And it was an unlucky seventh for Tech. Grant beat out an infield hit to Hoot Gibson and then took second on Gibson's wild throw. Hal Gibson, pinch-hitting for Carter, walked. Willie Sullivan's single scored Grant, the old Cornelia apple-knocker.

GEORGIA SCORES.

Treadaway walked. And Ennis Jordan clouted a hard single to right, scoring Hal Gibson and Sullivan. The old ball game was securely tied up. Stribling came in to do his great bit of relief pitching and then went out in the next inning when he twisted a knee in making a great catch of Moorehead's fly. McKinley relieved him. And held the side scoreless until the ninth.

But the Bulldogs were determined. No Georgia team had lost a series to the old rival from Atlanta since before the war. And the alumni could not be let down. So Anderson, Grant and Moorehead turned what had seemed inevitable defeat into a glorious victory.

Willie Sullivan pitched the full game for Georgia. He has won something like four out of five games this year. He gave up only eight scattered hits.

TECH'S CHANCE.

Tech had a great chance to score in its half of the ninth but Hoot Gibson, who doesn't give a hoot for conservative baseball, got too anxious after tripling to center with one away and was caught out at home as he came in with Grossi up to attempt a squeeze play. Gibson seemingly got his signals crossed. And Moorehead tagged him in front of the plate as Gibson wildly leaped for the plate. Grossi then singled but there was no scoring.

Waits hit two doubles. Martin, Wagnon, Ferguson and Grant got one apiece. Georgia got only eight hits but really made them count. Martin and Treadaway starred afield. Grant was great except for his one wild throw to first.

It was a great day for Georgia. There was plenty of glory in the Tech and Florida victories.

Betty Schilling Delivers a Fast One - - - The Winning Hit as Georgia Beats Tech

Miss Betty Schilling, of Marietta, pitched nine balls and two strikes before Governor Eugene Talmadge (right), the first batter in the final game of the Tech-Georgia series, lined out to Treadaway, Georgia second baseman. The governor is a former Georgia athlete. Tech lost and still hasn't won a series from Georgia since 1913. In the center Leroy Moorehead tears out for first base after delivering the single that scored Harrison Anderson with the winning run yesterday at Athens. It was alumni day and Georgia athletes celebrated by beating Florida in track and Tech, the old rival, in baseball. Each won two games and the matter of diamond supremacy is left unsettled for this year. Staff photo by Turner Hiers.

Messenger Vs. Barnes Today

The setting is perfect for Atlanta's opening Sunday ball game today.

The Crackers won 10 out of 14 games on the road.

They returned to a tie for first place as Chattanooga lost to Birmingham.

Now comes a perfect set-up on the pitchers.

Andy Messenger, former Cracker right-hander, and last year a Nemisis of the club after being traded to New Orleans, will face the Crackers today on the hillock for the Pels. He will try to beat Frank Barnes, big Cracker left-hander.

If the Crackers beat Messenger and draw around 12,000 today, it indeed will be a perfect day.

TECH GOLFERS ROUT DAVIDSON

Georgia Tech defeated Davidson's golf team, 18 to 0, Saturday, the same score by which the Wildcats lost Friday to Emory. Harris and Ridley, of Tech, defeated Cannon and Hambrick, and Moore and Yates won from Barnes and Bowman.

BOYD RETIRES.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 12. (AP)—Pollack Boyd, four times state golf champion, has definitely decided he will not participate in the titular tournament here June 27-30, he said today.

REESE IS WINNER OF NET TOURNEY

Billy Reese, state and city champion, added another crown to his collection when he won the college invitation tennis tournament Saturday afternoon on the Biltmore Club courts. Reese won in straight sets over Hank Crawford, a fellow Tech star. The scores were 6-1, 6-0.

It was an all-Tech finals, with Reese and Crawford in the singles, and Reese and Kiser against Tumlin and Morrell in the doubles. Reese and Kiser won the doubles, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1.

The singles match was one of the shortest of the year and required only 25 minutes to complete it.

Reese played almost perfect tennis and took advantage of Crawford's errors. Crawford won the fourth game with his service working fine. His placements were noon too good.

In the doubles, Kiser played a far better game than at any time during the tourney. He showed a decided improvement over Friday's play and his net game was very good.

Boys' High Alumni Will Meet Tuesday

if he and some of the other top-notchers in the south aren't going to come out here for the big affair.

It looks now as though it would be a great meet. There were 15,000 cash customers out to see the Southern California-Stanford meet last Saturday and I'm inclined to think that we will have 40,000 out to see the NCAA. The Coliseum track is in better shape than we had it during the Olympic games and we're just completing a "long turn" which will enable the quarter-milers to have a full 220-yard straightaway at the start of their race, one good turn and about a 100-yard straightaway on which to finish.

And how is our old friend, Spencer Abbott, making out down there with that trick rule about base runners advancing an extra base? I guess Spencer's spectacles would drop clear down onto his chin if he saw one of his pitchers walk a run in from second, from the way he used to get excited out here when they did much less than that.

The Angels are making a runaway race out of the Coast league so far, with young Mr. Demaree, the ex-Cub, slugging the ball all over the place. Walter McCredie's Boy Scouts up at Portland are having a hard time getting under way.

I'm sending my family down your way to spend the summer at the Athens "Y" camp up at Tallulah Falls. They're driving back right after the NCAA meet and will be up at camp all July and August.

If you have any tennis tournaments about that time of year it might be that Mrs. Henry and the girls could play. Mrs. Henry hasn't done much tournament playing lately but she's playing well. She has held the championship of every state on the coast at one time or another. Lately she's been helping out the youngsters, who are doing pretty well. Peggy, who is 18, attended the U. of Georgia for one term a couple of years ago. She's just finishing her sophomore year at Occidental College out here and is the school champ. Pat, the second youngster, graduates from L. A. High in June and has been school champion for two years—she's a good player, although I imagine that she won't be in very good practice after graduation. Virginia, the third youngster, is just learning. I guess they'll have a lot of fun playing with the girls up at "Y" camp.

If you should see the Trojan football team this year you'd never recognize it as the one you saw play Georgia last fall. Most of the linemen have graduated and they'll have to fill in with a raft of new recruits, but they have plenty of big fellows, and I rather imagine that they'll be good enough to spoil the afternoon for most of the teams that they'll play.

Regards to the "scribes" and if you have any information about southern trackmen coming here for the NCAA, I'd appreciate a line about them. Thanks.

Yours,
BILL HENRY, L. A. Times.

It was Peggy Henry who defeated all the male tennis players at the University of Georgia. She offered to enter the annual tournament, but the gallant males ruled that only men could compete. They play tennis on the coast. Real tennis. I warn the girls at the "Y" camp to bear down.

It is too bad that Georgia isn't catching El Trojan this year. Mr. Harry Mehre and I would relish playing El Trojan when he didn't have everything in the world.

That baseball rule, of course, has been rescinded.

As for the track stars—Perrin Walker is going. There are other stars likely to go. The south seems to have a good supply of sprinters this spring.

PREP TRACKMEN TO CLASH HERE

There will be an interscholastic track meet on Grant field next Friday afternoon, and high school boys from all over the south are eligible to compete. It is an invitation meet given by Boys' High and Tech High, and it is hoped that all of the winners of the meets recently held at Athens will attend. Entries may be made with Coach Charles Ward at Boys' High as late as Thursday. They must be certified by the principal as Georgia High School Association rules will apply.

The best athletes of the G. I. A. A. meet held here last week will be present again to participate, and in addition there will be teams from Asheville, N. C.; Morristown (Tenn.) Baylor school, and McCallie school, of Chattanooga. This meet should produce the best interscholastic records of the year, as the boys have all had plenty of time to practice, and have had the experience of several meets to toughen them.

Buford Nine Beats Porterdale, 11 to 3

PORTERDALE, Ga., May 12.—Buford's Shoemakers defeated Porterdale, 11 to 3, here this afternoon in a free-hitting contest.

Bob Hasty pitched for Buford and was touched for 10 hits, but kept them well scattered, and only in the last few innings did the locals score.

Ed Baxter, with three for five, led the hitting for Buford, while Carson and Patterson hit best for the losers.

Atlanta Cyclists Stage Hill Climb

Atlanta has been awarded the 1934 southern championship hill climb and Sunday, May 20, has been set as the date, it was announced Saturday by the Atlanta Motorcycle Club. The hill climb will be held on North Side drive just beyond Pace's Ferry road, and will be sponsored by the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps, together with the Motorcycle Club.

The climb has been sanctioned by the contest board of the American Motorcycle Club and will be recognized as the official southern championship for this year.

It was also announced that it will be an annual affair here, and all the factory representatives will be present and aid in sponsoring the event.

The hill measures 250 feet from bottom to top and is one of the most dangerous of its kind in the south. It was for this reason that the hill has been selected for the southern championship event.

A mammoth parade, exclusively for motorcycles, will be held from 7 to 8 o'clock Saturday night, May 19, through the principal streets of the city.

It is the first parade of motorcycles to be held here and every motorcycle rider in the city is invited to participate.

The American Legion band will play at the hill climb and will be a part of the parade on Saturday night.

FANS TO THRONG CRACKER PARK FOR GAME TODAY

Ten Victories on Road To Swell First Sunday Crowd.

he started with the club as an infielder.

Disregarding the colossal blow-up of Friday's game at Memphis, when they tossed away a 11-0 lead which they held over the Chicks, the Crackers have played excellent ball on their long jaunt around the circuit. They broke even with New Orleans in four games, beat Birmingham four straight and took two out of three from Little Rock and Memphis.

Abbott, himself, said he would be satisfied with an even break on the trip which took his club to New Orleans, Birmingham, Little Rock and Memphis. But the club, including three tough games lost to New Orleans, Little Rock and Memphis, still had a record of 10 victories in 14 games played up to Sunday.

Two of the games lost were to New Orleans and Little Rock, respectively, in the ninth inning, when the Crackers had apparently comfortable leads wiped out. In the third game at New Orleans, Hugh Casey lost a tough game on errors after he went into the ninth inning pitching great ball on the long end of a 4-1 score. In the last game of the series at Little Rock, the Crackers had a two-run lead wiped out in the ninth. Then came the big blow-up of Friday when everybody, including Manager Abbott, thought the Crackers had that one in the bag.

PUT IN SUBS.

Abbott was so sure of the game that he began putting in his substitutes in the seventh inning, Neisler behind the plate and Koehler at second. Then the Chicks apparently went crazy and hit everything three Cracker pitchers threw at them.

All of the Crackers did some sensational hitting on the road, particularly McKee, Sheerin, Harry Taylor and Joe Palmisano. All of these players boosted their batting averages substantially. The young pitchers also performed well. Bill Schmidt weakened in Friday's game at Memphis but previously the big fellow had won three straight.

Art Jacobs, the screw-baller, also came around in Thursday's game when he set down 13 Chicks in order after relieving Bud Thomas, getting credit for his first victory of the season.

Starting with New Orleans today, the Crackers play 14 games hand running at home before again vacating the city.

They play the Pels today, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; Birmingham Thursday, Friday and Saturday; Memphis Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and Little Rock Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

In view of the great rivalry between the Crackers and New Orleans, the series with the Pels should boost the attendance to a new high.

Lassiter To Appear On Avondale Card

Promoter Brownlee has signed a wrestler who will probably give Freddie Lassiter a hard fight Friday night, May 18, at the Avondale arena. He is Dan Kellengher, of Vancouver, Canada. Kellengher holds a decisive victory over Lassiter.

Eddie Elzea, Danish wrestler and auto race driver, clashes with another great favorite of the Avondale fans, Ted Sarris, of New York.

"Gorilla" Tucker, of Omaha, Neb., will meet John Dameron, of Kirkwood, in another wrestling match starting the card at 8:15 p. m.

Fourteen Golfers Seek To Qualify for National Open Here Monday

YATES, SARGENT TO SEEK PLACE AT EAST LAKE

Atlanta District Awarded Two Places; Play Opens at 9 A. M.

By Roy White.

Five Atlanta amateurs will seek to qualify Monday on the No. 1 East Lake course for the national open golf championship tournament June 7, at the Merion Cricket Club. They are Charlie Yates, P. G. Hanahan Jr., Dan Sage Jr., Crawford Rainwater and S. E. Gill. Only Yates has played in the sectional qualifying before.

Nine other players, Harold and George Sargent, East Lake, professionals, Ernie Ball, of Mobile, Ala., former assistant professional at East Lake; Tom Wright, Knoxville amateur; C. V. Mitchell, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. E. Norvell, Jack Harkins and Ewing Watkins, Chattanooga, and Eddie Miller, Gadsden, Ala., former southeastern professional golf champion, are also entered.

Two Places.

Two places have been awarded to this district by the United States Golf Association in the annual sectional elimination rounds.

Harold Sargent, Yates and Ball will lead the way, leaving the first tee at 9 o'clock. They will be followed by Miller, Hanahan and Wright at 9:05 o'clock, with the others leaving the first tee at five minute intervals.

There will be 36 holes of medal play, with the two lowest scorers being nominated for the national open test in June. The afternoon 18-hole round will start at 2 o'clock.

Keith Conway, president of the Atlanta Golf Association, will again be in charge of the qualifying rounds for the U. S. G. A. He will be assisted by officials of the East Lake Country Club.

Dan Goss, Birmingham, and Ernie Ball, Mobile, Ala., won the two places last year but did not survive the gruelling test of the open play.

OTHER PLACES.

The Birmingham players have been entered at the Nashville district this year.

Competition Monday should be keener than ever before for half of the field is from Atlanta, with the other half from other courses.

Officials at the East Lake Club stated Saturday that the greens and fairways are in much better condition than at any time this spring. The last few days of warm sunshine have made the grasses grow fast and with another cutting early Monday morning, there should be no alibi for the condition of the greens.

The pairings:

9:00—Harold Sargent, Atlanta; Charlie Yates, Atlanta, and Ernie Ball, Mobile.

9:05—Eddie Miller, Gadsden, Ala.; P. G. Hanahan Jr., Atlanta, and Tom Wright, Knoxville.

9:10—George Sargent, Atlanta; Dan Sage Jr., Atlanta, and C. V. Mitchell, Philadelphia.

9:15—Crawford Rainwater, Atlanta; W. E. Norvell, Chattanooga and Jack Harkins, Chattanooga.

9:20—S. E. Gill, Atlanta, and Ewing Watkins, Chattanooga.

Practice rounds for the national open qualifying test were opened Saturday afternoon when 13 of the 14 players trekked over the old course. The only player who did not practice was Tom Wright and he arrived in the city too late to play 18 holes, but will play a couple of rounds today instead.

There were no good scores recorded. In fact none of the players attempted to score, but were getting their range. Several balls were played from difficult lies and several putts were made on a majority of the greens.

Charley Black Jr. Wins Medal Honor.

Charlie Black Jr., with a 70, one stroke under par, won medal honor in the qualifying round for the President's cup tuornament on the Capital City course.

First-round matches must be completed by Wednesday night, with the second round scheduled for the latter part of the week.

Handicaps will apply in all flights.

In the first round, Black plays John Owens, former captain of the University of Pennsylvania golf team. Several other outstanding matches appear for the first round.

The pairings:

Chip shots was Saturday's subject.

Bradshaw, Thornwell Best Jones, Freeman.

Tess Bradshaw and his partner, E. A. Thornwell, scored another victory over their rivals, Big Bob Jones and C. E. Freeman, Saturday afternoon on the old East Lake course. It was another of their weekly grudge matches, but developed more interest than some of the former matches.

Thornwell sank a 20-foot downhill putt on the eighteenth green to win from Freeman, while Bradshaw carded a 74, two over par, to win over Colonel Jones, who shot a 76.

The score of the veteran foursome were among the best that has been recorded in many months. The matches have been in progress for

Sprinting Duels at the Flats - - - Perrin Walker Loses and Wins

Tennis Stars In Benefit Match

A tennis match will be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Aileen Timmons on Wieuca road for the benefit of the Tallulah Falls school, the affair having been postponed from last Sunday due to rain.

The match is being sponsored by Miss Timmons and members of her committee of the Girls' Circle for the Tallulah Falls school and will be numbered among interesting events of the week-end. Cold drinks and other refreshments will be sold during the afternoon and tickets may be bought at the gate or from any member of the committee for 10 cents.

Four well-known southern players will participate in the exhibition, including John A. Boykin, of Atlanta; Nick Polites, of Atlantic City, N. J.; James Robinson, of Plant City, Fla., and Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta.

Acting as master of ceremonies will be Milo Potucek. Members of Miss Timmons' committee are Miss Ida Thomas, Miss Jane deBruyn Kops, Miss Clara McConnell, Miss Mary Ella Bowman, Miss Pearl Fort, Miss Kathleen Pierson, Miss Margaret Cummings, Miss Reta Cummings, Miss Catherine Cummings and Miss Sara Traynham. All friends of the Tallulah school, of the Girls' Circle and tennis fans are invited to attend.

SMITHIE NINE MEETS PURPLE

Boys' High and Tech High will close their annual baseball warfare at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon on the Henry Grady field.

Tech High has won nine straight games without a defeat and cinched the Big Six championship last week as Boys' High was beaten by Columbus at Columbus. The Purples had previously lost to Tech High.

The Boys' High-Tech High baseball series is annually the highlight of the spring athletic program. And the game always ranks with the best of the season.

Both teams this year are well fortified with good pitching and Friday's game looms a pitchers' battle.

Boys' High has Jim Bagby, young son of the former Cleveland hurler, and Gene Crockett, who plays in the outfield when not pitching. Both are excellent hitters as well as pitchers.

Tech High has Pete Morris and John Maher, two fine righthanders. Morris gave Riverside one hit and Maher hurled a no-hitter for seven innings in a recent double-header against the Gainesville nine.

G. M. A. and Boys' High will play a postponed game of the Big Six schedule Monday afternoon on the Henry Grady diamond. Boys' High has a chance for second place in the standings, while G. M. A. is battling for a chance at second place.

Tech High won the championship last week in an undefeated season, but has a postponed game with Boys' High to be played this week.

Boys' High has lost two games already, but hopes to wreck Tech High's perfect record.

EMORY GOLFERS CLAIM TITLE

Jeff McCord, athletic director at Emory University, announced Saturday that the Southern collegiate golf championship would be claimed for Emory's strong 1934 team which ended its season with a brilliant 18-0 victory over the Davidson linksmen here Friday.

The Emory team won six matches out of seven, defeating every important southern collegiate team except Georgia, to whom they lost by the score of 11 to 7. And two of the teams beaten by Emory by large scores were victors over Georgia.

Coach McCord and the whole squad is confident that they can defeat Georgia in a return match. They attribute the loss to the fact that Georgia merely "got hot" for a day—so hot, in fact, that they could have beaten almost anybody.

Members of the Emory team are, in the order of ranking: Bobby Chambers, Joe Horacek Jr., Albert Stubbs and Epps Brown., The first three named are three-year veterans. This is Brown's first year at Emory.

Bobby Chambers explains the team's success by pointing out that there is very little difference in the caliber of the four members of the team. All are capable of shooting 75's, and consequently the second foursome usually captures all of the possible nine points under the Nassau system. Only once this season, in the match with Georgia, when one of the members of the second doubles had a miserable off-day, has this combination failed to win at least two-thirds of the points possible for it to win.

Among the teams beaten this year are the University of Richmond, Georgia Tech, Davidson, Florida, University of Miami and Tennessee. Both Tennessee and Tech defeated Georgia, the latter by a 16-2 score.

Last year, when Harvey Hill was the fourth man on the team, Emory lost but one match, and that to Tech.

Woodpeckers Lose To Albany 'Toppers'

ALBANY, Ga., May 12.—The Albany Timber Toppers, representing Company 1411, CCC camp, defeated the Woodpeckers, of Company 1430, Butler, Ga., here today by the score of 10 to 7.

"Slim" Fields, the sensational first-sacker of the Timber Toppers, cleared the bases in the seventh inning with a three-bagger that landed in the woods in deep left. White also played an excellent game for the Timber Toppers.

Thorton and Newsome starred for the losers.

Tech Trackmen Win Over Strong Tigers

Third Defeat for Auburn Since 1922; Dupree Wins 100, Walker First in 220.

By Ralph McGill.

In that famous poem, "Casey at the Bat," it is related how very rocky it looked for the Mudville nine when Casey went to bat. But it looked no rockier than did the "Cause of Georgia Tech" yesterday at Grant field when the Jackets won a dual track meet from Auburn in the closing minutes by a score of 65½ to 60½.

The Jackets needed a first and second place in the broad jump and a like number of places in the javelin throw to win the meet.

They won three places in the javelin and two in the broad jump just to make it convincing.

Over in the center of the field a couple of football men, Jack Phillips, the All-Southern fullback, and "Tarzan" Lackey, a guard, were being very nonchalant about it. They were joined by a non-football man named Korf.

Net result, three places, first, second and third.

Meanwhile the broad jumpers, Warren McMichael and Perrin Walker, were busy, and turned in two places.

When Mr. Alexander raised his megaphone and gave the crowd of 1,500 the result, it cheered itself hoarse. It was the largest crowd that has seen a track meet here.

That's how the meet was closed out. The lead should be that Perrin Walker, Tech's sprint champion, was defeated in the 100-yard dash by Sterling DuPree, the Auburn backfield star, but came back to beat DuPree in the 220-yard dash.

HIGH POINT.

Walker closed out the meet as high-point man, leading with 19 points. He was second in the 100, first in the 220, second in the high jump, second in the shot put and second in the broad jump.

I am not sure but I think they kept him around to sweep up the stands and sell soft drinks and ice cream. He seemed to be doing everything else.

There were really three leads. Three Southeastern conference records were tied. Sterling DuPree equaled the record with his 9.8 seconds in the 100-yard dash. Walker started without starting blocks, which were used by DuPree. Walker was closing fast and would have won had the race been three yards farther.

Walker equaled the record for the 220 when he ran it in the fast time of 21.2 seconds.

Lloyd Richey equaled the high jump record by leading 6 feet 3 inches to tie the mark set by Bill David, of Georgia, in the conference meet last spring.

TECH LEADS.

The meet swung to Tech in the half mile. There was the race of the day. Tech was not supposed to win it. Yet Tech won first and second place.

Jim Davenport was first and Harvey West was second. They are both Atlanta boys.

West took the lead. He had run in the 440 a few minutes before. The field overhauled him. Davenport took the lead. Kaiser, of Auburn, then moved up.

This was on the back turn of the second lap. Davenport spurted when he saw the shadow at his elbow. He held his lead. They came to the stretch turn. It was something like the Kentucky Derby.

"Cavalcade" Davenport swung into the lead and held it. And here came "Discovery" West, beating out the Auburn runner to win second place.

That was the meet. Tech had been trailing and still was trailing when this race was done. But it was this race which put them in a striking position. They needed the javelin and the broad jump when that was done. They got them.

ANOTHER LEAD.

Oh, yes, here is another lead. This seems to be a story of leads.

This defeat of Saturday was the third Auburn has suffered since Wilbur Hutsell went there to coach in 1922. Tech won in 1928. Florida won in 1929. And that was all until yesterday.

Walker's defeat in the 100 yard dash was not startling although it was not too startling. Dupree is a veteran runner. Walker is a sophomore. Walker carries the handicap of knowing he is a slow starter.

Dupree was away so fast in the 100 yard sprint that it appeared he had beaten the gun. He had not, of course. It was simply that he is a great starter. Walker was over-hauling him at the finish, being a matter of inches behind. But that start beat him. The starting block undoubtedly aided DuPree. Tech does not employ them because records made with the blocks are not authenticated.

WALKER WINS.

In the 220 yard dash Walker appeared to falter and then came on to win handily. Both boys are great runners.

An unusually handy man Saturday was Warren McMichael. He was first in the high hurdles, second in the low hurdles and first in the broad jump.

Second to Walker in the leading scoring contest was Lloyd Ritchey, the Auburn jumper. He won the low hurdles, the high jump and was second in the high hurdles.

It was an unusually excellent meet and a tribute to coaches George Griffin and Mike Chambers. Mike has coached the weight men. The team has won from Kentucky, Georgia, Vanderbilt and Auburn, losing only to Alabama.

The Southeastern conference track meet at Birmingham closes out the spring meets.

The Auburn freshmen defeated Tech by one point.

MISS JAMESON, MRS. WOLF WIN

By Bob Myers.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—(AP)—Betty Jameson, 15-year-old shotmaker from Dallas, Texas, and Mrs. Leon Wolf Jr., of New Orleans, stood on the brink of golfing royalty tonight, victorious in exciting semi-final matches of today's championship play in the women's southern tournament.

The youthful Dallas star defeated Marion Miley, a 20-year-old miss with a poker face from Lexington, Ky., 1 up in 19 holes, to climax a bitter battle that left the gallery of sunbroiled followers exhausted with excitement.

Mrs. Wolf continued an amazing game of golf that had previously upset the tournament dope blasting away the crown-winning hopes of Miss Virginia Williams, of Houston, Texas, 5 and 4.

Miss Jameson, who has repeatedly toured the New Orleans Country Club in the 80's and has packed a lot of tournament experience into her three-year career on the links, goes into tomorrow's finals a heavy favorite over Mrs. Wolf, who usually turns in a score above 90.

The Jameson-Miley match today went into a nerve-wracking extra hole with Miss Miley's chances for victory wrecked by stymies.

Jameson evened the match on the 18th when she stymied Miley and holed out a 5.

On the 19th, both were on in 2—both lying 15 feet from the pin. Jameson's putt rolled in line with Miley's ball, and the Kentucky player was stymied again. Her putt kissed Jameson's ball and almost pushed it into the cup. She tried to hop over but it was impossible. She then conceded the hole and match.

Miss Miley met defeat today after eliminating Aneila Gorcyzca, of Fort Worth, the defending champion, in a hard-fought match yesterday.

Mrs. Wolf, who counted Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis, four-time winner of the southern crown, among her victims earlier in the week, had little trouble disposing of Miss Williams, herself a little "giant killer." The Texas girl's previously consistent good game went to pieces before the persistent shooting of the lone Louisiana survivor and their match ended on the 14th.

Winn, Buresch Head Fair Street Card

Hugh Winn and Stanley Buresch will meet in the main match tomorrow night on the wrestling card at the Fair street arena, one block from the state capitol at Fair street and Capitol avenue.

Buresch challenged Winn last week after the first fall of Buresch's battle with Ted Sarris, and Winn promptly accepted. Winn, recognized as the southern light heavyweight champion, and likewise titleholder in Georgia, is a smooth and experienced wrestler, who so far has been able to conquer each newcomer to this section. In Buresch, however, Hugh is taking on a man with greater experience who has been pinned but few times in a long career.

The kangaroo kick, developed by Buresch, is one of the most unusual "holds" in wrestling, and when Buresch is using it the kick is frequently the end of the match.

The big, black-headed fellow from Tucson, Ariz., who made such an impression last week in his first appearance in Atlanta, will be back on Matchmaker Jason Thompson's card tomorrow night. He is Spike O'Brien, the Arizona bad man. O'Brien will not be able to play for the crowd in this match, as he is tangling with Ted Sarris, who has met the best the world has to offer in wrestling during a career that has carried him through 27 countries.

Wayne Coleman will meet John Dameron in the opener.

Fans should be well pleased with this card. Tickets are now on sale at the Tumlin soda stand in the Hurt building, or may be reserved at Dearborn 3932.

TARHEELS WIN.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., May 12.—(AP)—North Carolina won its 13th successive state collegiate track meet here today with 85 points, as nine new records were set. Duke was second with 37 points, Davidson third with 33, and N. C. State fourth with 7. Lenoir Rhyne scored 2 points in the varsity meet.

Horse Guard, Fort Mac Meet

There will be a polo game Sunday afternoon, May 13, at Fort McPherson, between the Governor's Horse Guard and the Fort McPherson team. In the last game that was played the Horse Guard team defeated Fort McPherson by a 9-7 score. The playing field is now in better shape than ever before, and with favorable weather the game should provide plenty of interest and fast play for followers of polo in Atlanta. Polo is a grand game, becoming more popular yearly; and it has the feature of being as interesting to the spectator as it is to the players themselves. People of Atlanta are fortunate to have access to polo games, as those who have seen polo played will admit.

The lineup for the game will be: For the Horse Guard, Graham, No. 1; Christian, No. 2; Moran, No. 3; and Williamson, No. 4. For Fort McPherson, Wing, No. 1; Howell, No. 2; Shubert, No. 3; and Baker, No. 4. The referees for the game will be Colonel Bruce L. Burch, and Ray Love, of Atlanta.

WEST END CLUB 'SHOOTS' TODAY

The West End Gun Slub will stage a "ham shoot" at the club ground Sunday starting at 10 a. m. and firing all day. There will be a ham for prize in both the scratch and the handicap division. All shooters are invited to come out and enter as the club is open to everyone and the added birds will put all shooters on equal basis.

Vice President L. E. Draper and J. M. Nelson will be in charge of the shoot in the absence of Secretary C. L. Davis, who, with President S. W. Roper, Captain I. B. Duke and Dr. O. T. Malone, will form a squad to represent the club in the Birmingham city championship to be held on the grounds of the North Birmingham Gun Club. They will enter with other squads from local clubs.

Club officials announce that plans are under way to place the club among the best in the south. The club received this week a new set of Chamberlin Wonder Skeet traps, which is the de luxe in equipment for gun clubs. These traps will be put in use Sunday week. Work is under way on new walks and grading the field. As soon as this is completed, work will be started on a new clubhouse and grandstands which will seat a large number of visitors. This work will be completed in time for the Atlanta city skeet championship to be held at the West End Gun Club on June 16 and 17. The work is under J. M. Nelson, chairman of the grounds committee, who is assisted by other club officials.

Airport Stages Shoot Today.

Jack Gray will open his Airport Gun Club for the first Sunday shoot today at 1 o'clock. Shoots will be held henceforth on Thursdays and Sundays, Gray announced.

The public is invited. It is a fine club and hospitality is paramount. The firing will continue until nightfall.

Smith Is Capitol Shoot Winner.

Marion Smith surprised the boys out at the Capitol Gun Club yesterday afternoon when he blasted out a great 54x50 with handicap to win the silver goblet. There was a three-way tie for second place.

Ashby Taylor, Hugh Nunnally and Clyde King each broke 51. Taylor left early so the shoot-off for an arm-band will be held later.

Leading scores included Guy Melchor, 50; Jake Orr, 49; Jack Tway, 49; Jimmy Calhoun, 48; E. L. Wight, 48; Benson Freeman Jr., 48; Jack Gray, 47; H. A. Elliott, 47; Ralph Minehan, 46; H. N. Alford, 40; George Cushing, 38, and George Sherrell, 30.

Ashby Taylor had a 50 straight, his first. One of the rounds was registered. Jack Tway broke a 25 straight.

Hugh Nunnally won the random shoot with the amazing score of 24x25. It was brilliant shooting.

Henry Alford and Jack Tway led the singles shooters at the 16-yard traps with 24 apiece. Larry Grant had 22, Freeman had 19, Nunnally had 17. Jack Tway led in doubles with 46. Henry Alford had 44 and Benson Freeman broke 38.

Lights have been installed at the club and all is in readiness for an inaugural shoot this week.

WEEKLY EVENTS TO BE BOWLED ON WEDNESDAY

Response To First Special Event Last Week Brings Continuation.

The response to the first weekly special bowling event for tenpin bowlers was so good last week that a continuation of staging weekly sweepstakes will be made at Blick's Bowling Center each Wednesday evening for the big pin smashers.

Thirty-five bowlers turned out for last Wednesday's contest, in which a suit of clothes was awarded the winner.

Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock five games are scheduled to be bowled on a handicap basis, and no entry fee will be charged; the players pay only the cost of the games.

A revised prize list will be offered, with the winner receiving a pair of Friendly shoes; runner-up to be awarded two pair of socks, and third place, a necktie.

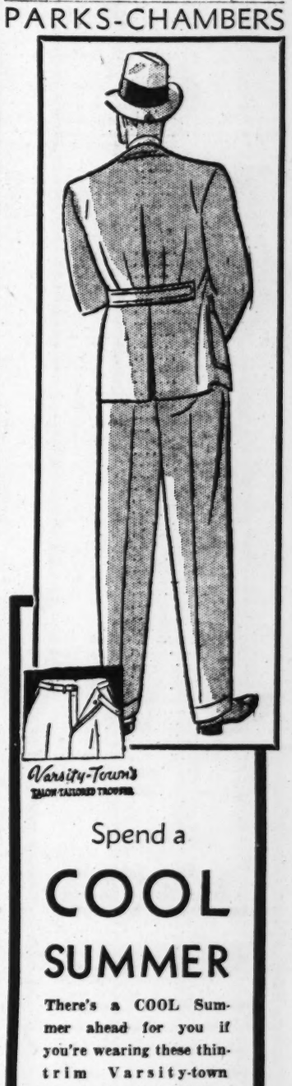

The scratch mark of 190 will be used, with each player given two-thirds the difference between his own average and the scratch amount, per game. However, a maximum handicap of 25 pins per game has been set for all participants.

Bowlers who do not bowl in regular tenpin leagues but would like to take part in the contest are invited to confer with members of the bowling committee relative to arriving at a fair handicap to be used in their particular case. Members of the committee include J. Mitchell, H. Parker, H. Elsner, J. H. Sperry and A. D. Couden.

Probable entries for Wednesday evening will include W. Elsner, Timmons, Sperry, Parker, Van Frank, Granger, Fitch, Morris, B. Elsner, Fernander, Phillips, Althausen, Whitham, Rogers, Brundage, H. Elsner, Johnston, Walter, Philler, Davey, Sutton, Couden, Henderson, Grist, Mitchell, Clein, Douglas, Hall, Heineck, Turner, Scarlos, Bergquist, Rusch, Wegner and a number of others.

Preliminary to the tenpin sweepstakes a meeting of the Atlanta Bowling Association will be held at the office of Blick's Bowling Center, Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. All members of the association and interested tenpin bowlers are urged to be in attendance, as plans for the organization of a summer bowling league and other important business details will be in line for discussion.

Weintraub Continues Slugging and Takes Southern League Lead

JOE PALMISANO IN THIRD PLACE; MARTIN SECOND

Atlanta Has Leadership of Team Batting. Vols Second.

Phil Weintraub, Nashville outfielder, continues to hit the ball hard as shown by his batting mark of .449. Weintraub was stopped in his consecutive game hitting streak after he had reached 17 straight. Second lace goes to Martin, Nashville third baseman, who has a mark of .406. Joe Palmisano, hard-hitting catcher with the Atlanta Crackers, is the only other regular hitting over .400. Joe has a mark of .405. McKee has hit safely in 13 straight games through Thursday.

Atlanta took the lead in team batting with a mark of .307, with Nashville second and Memphis third. The Crackers are second in fielding, trailing Memphis, which has a mark of .977.

New Orleans continues to lead in double plays with 27.

Prather, Nashville, holds the lead in home runs, with six, and has driven in 21 runs.

Harry Kelly, veteran Memphis hurler, leads the pitchers with five wins and no defeats. He turned in a double win on May 9. W. Hughes, Birmingham, and Hayes, Atlanta, are tied for second in the pitchers' race with three wins and no defeats each.

(Includes games of Thursday, May 10.)

PITCHER RELEASED.

ST. LOUIS, May 11.—(AP)—Pitcher Jack Salveson was released today by Manager Bill Terry, of the New York Giants, to Montreal of the International league, subject to 24-hour recall. The release left the Giants with one man over the player limit, and it was rumored Outfielder Leiber would be sent away.

Miracles in Sports — By Robert Edgren

RECORDS FALL IN AMERICAN; REYNOLDS LEADS

Many Fall During Past Week of Play in Senior Loop.

Major league records went by the boards in flocks the past week. The American league had a hand in setting a two-day major league home run record of 28 and then break or tie several of its own marks.

The Red Sox did the shattering of team records. They set one record, scoring the most runs in a single inning when they counted 12 times against Detroit in the fourth frame on May 6, and in the same inning tied the major league record with four triples in one inning. Two days later Carl Reynolds' consecutive hitting record for the season was ended at 17 games. The Red Sox outfielder was stopped by Tommy Bridges, of Detroit, but during this streak he made 34 hits in 67 times at the plate.

Oscar Melillo, of St. Louis, established a season's record for fielding by handling 119 chances without an error. He made his first fielding mistake on May 9. Buddy Myer, of Washington, has handled 115 chances with only one error.

Reynolds not only retained his batting leadership but increased his average from .451 to .468, all without the aid of any home runs. He also leads in hits, 37, and in total bases, 56.

Rollie Hemsley, of St. Louis, raised his average, too, from .306 to .432 to take second place away from Joe Vosmik, of Cleveland, who now has .427, a drop of 15 points. Heinie Manush, of Washington, rates fourth with .403 and Lou Gehrig, Yankee slugger, had a big day May 10 to go up to fifth place with .400. Larrupin' Lou got two doubles and two homers in four times at bat, the fifth time in his career he has made four long hits in one game. Lou's four blows accounted for seven Yankee runs and it gave him the lead over Reynolds in runs batted in by 25 to 24.

Babe Ruth hit four home runs for a total of seven, Bill Werber, of the Red Sox, kept his doubles lead at 10 and Gerald Walker, of Detroit, though hitting only .243, has stolen eight bases.

Red Ruffing, of the Yankees, won one game to pass Gomez, of the same club, and Thomas, of Washington, for the pitching lead. Red has won five and the other two four. All three are unbeaten.

A Mat Menace — By Jack Sords

Savoldi Is 'Kicking' His Way to Top Rank

Former Notre Dame Star and His "Drop-Kick" To Face Dr. Sarpolis Wednesday.

Jumping Joe Savoldi and his famous "drop kick" will return to Atlanta Wednesday night as the feature of Matchmaker Henry Weber's weekly program at Ponce de Leon park.

Jumping Joe, who once lugged that football for the late Knute Rockne at Notre Dame, will meet Dr. K. Sarpolis, the New York bone bender, in a 90-minute match, the feature of an all-star card of three matches.

Savoldi, a well-built, tough-to-get-along-with wrestler, will bring a new style of wrestling to Atlanta. Since his match here many months ago he has developed into one of the top ranking matmen, a serious contender for Jimmy Londos' world's championship, and his famous kick is dreaded by all his foes.

Savoldi employs his famous "drop-kick" to win his matches. It was this trick that defeated Londos in Chicago last year. It was a "fluke" victory and Londos retained his title. However, Savoldi has the satisfaction of beating the champion and is working harder than ever to build himself up for another shot at the title. He is well versed in the tricks of the trade and in addition to being one of the most rugged men in the game, is a smart wrestler.

BONE SPECIALIST.

Dr. Sarpolis, a New York bone specialist, really knows his "joints" and will be in there doing his best to upset Mr. Savoldi's apple cart. Sarpolis has appeared here several times and has shown himself to be a top-notch wrestler. He will give Mr. Savoldi's "joints" a thorough going over.

Matchmaker Weber is well pleased at being able to bring Jumping Joe here for another match. The former Notre Dame star is going big in the east and midwest and is ranked as one of the better wrestlers. He has beaten most of the leading boys with his famous "drop-kick" and is feared by many.

OTHER MATCH.

Another match that will draw its share of the crowd is the one between Frank Speer and Karl Davis, the big midwestern. They will meet in the one-hour match.

Speer, former Jacket football star, is one of the most popular men to perform here. Since leaving Tech he has gone into the mat game with all seriousness and has battled his way to the front. He is now rated one of the best of the younger wrestlers. Daviscourt, Sun Jennings, Chief Tom Marvin and other good men are listed among his victims. Davis, one of the better midwesterners, is in for a hard match.

Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters on Peachtree.

Five Fine Matches On Moreland Show

The kind of show the fans pay well to see will be presented free Thursday night at the opening of the Moreland avenue outdoor arena. There will be five all-star matches. And the participants will be the ones who usually appear in headline attractions at other arenas.

Hugh Winn, the city and Georgia light-heavyweight champion, meets Ted Sarris, the Greek adonis, who resembles Jim Londos, in the feature match. Matchmakers sought Eddie Elzea and Sergeant Harry Nixon, but both found an able excuse for not meeting the ever-ready Winn.

The other matches include Gentleman John Mauldin and Dan Kellinger, the Canadian star, in the semi-windup; Bulldog Gust Pappas and Elmo Glenn; Bull Schmidt and Wild William Collins; Bob Anderson and Young Gotch.

It is one of the finest cards presented in the city. And, in addition to its promise, it is free to the public. Everyone is invited.

A new idea will be tried. The first three matches will be by rounds. There will be two 10-minute rounds with one minute of rest.

Winn is the only wrestler in the city who successfully uses the bouncing split, with which he has bounced many an opponent into submission. Sarris has the cat-like grace of Londos and is one of the better wrestlers appearing in the city. He is the third ranking light-heavy nationally.

The show will begin at 8:15.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—(UP) Monkeys in Salt Lake City's zoo will not be entirely without water because of a threatened shutoff by the water department. Mrs. George Sundom, Freeport, Ill., sent a two-ounce bottle of water, with a note reading: "Feed to the monkeys daily."

LESLIE LEADING BATTING RACE IN NATIONAL

P. Waner and Cuyler Next in Line; Bush Leads Hurlers.

The National league batting race is really getting hot. No longer eligible to the lead because of his few times at bat, Pie Traynor, Pittsburgh, has vacated the coveted position in favor of Sam Leslie, Brooklyn, though Kiki Cuyler, of the Cubs, was king for a day.

Leslie liked the Cubs' ball park and it was there that he passed Cuyler. The Dodger first sacker now has a .410 average, 24 points ahead of Paul Waner, of Pittsburgh, and 25 ahead of Cuyler. Mell Ott, of the Giants, slipped to fourth place with .378 and Hal Lee, of Boston, and Jim Wilson, of the Phillies, have .365 each for fifth.

Chuck Klein, of the Cubs, added two home runs to his total, now eight, to aid the Cubs and Brooklyn in tying the National league record for home runs by two clubs in one inning, four, and also helped the Cubs figure in the major league record of 28 for home runs in two days. Klein also leads in total bases, 64.

Another record, though for the season, was Gus Suhr's hitting in 18 consecutive games for Pittsburgh. He was stopped on the 19th game by Curt Davis, Phillies' pitcher.

Medwick, of St. Louis, is the runs-batted-in pacesetter with 24, taking the lead away from Klein. Vaughan, of Pittsburgh, scored 10 times to send his total runs to 25 and Leslie and Klein are tied in hits at 32.

Williams Pitches Great Ball as Gulf Nine Upsets Commodore Feds

FISHER BODY TAKES LEAD IN COMMERCIAL

Fulton Bag Returns to Victory Column With Win Over Pinson.

The Gulf Refining Company, behind the masterful pitching of Williams, took the undefeated Federal Prison nine into camp, 4 to 1. Williams allowed two hits and both of these were made by Edwards. Harry Gorman led the Gulf stick attack with three smacks in four trips, while McGaughey got two hits, a double and triple, to help in the run scoring. Two double plays, one by each team, were the fielding features. Besides allowing two hits, Williams sent down 10 Feds via the strikeout route. The Gulf club got off to a two-run lead in the very first inning and this proved to be sufficient to win.

BAKERS SWAMP CHEVROLET.

The American Bakers Company kept pace right behind the leaders by swamping the Chevrolet Motor Company team, 13 to 1. Breezy Winn, on the mound for the Bakers, although allowing eight hits, kept them well scattered, whereas the Bakers were continually on Buice and kept hammering away from the start and climaxed the game with six runs in the eighth. Frank London, the Commercial league leading hitter, got one hit, but this was a home run in the third inning. Quinn, Simpson, Hull and Winn hit best for the winners with three hits each, while Ogle and O'Neal got two safe blows for Chevrolet. A fast double play, Quinn to Braswell was one of the fielding features. Winn whiffed 11 of the Chevrolet would-be hitters.

FISHER RETAINS LEAD.

The Fisher Body Company nine gained undisputed leadership of the Commercial league, by staging a rally in the last two innings and downing White Provision Company, 11 to 6, while Federal Prison was losing.

Lefty Williams had to come to the rescue of White, star Fisher Body twirler, in the fifth inning, and although he fared rather badly, his mates hammered Seagraves for eight runs in the latter innings to sew up the ball game. Both clubs got 12 safe blows, while White made six errors to five for Fisher Body.

The hitting of Ker, Craven and Mott featured for Fisher, while the hitting of Pickett and Fleming featured for White. Clark made some fine catches in center field for White, Mott in left field and Key at shortstop for Fisher turned in some fine fielding plays.

FULTON DOWNS PINSON.

The Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills got back into the winning column by downing the Pinson Tire Company aggregation, 18 to 4. The Fulton Bag nine got 20 hits off the combined efforts of Stephens and Hootey, while Harper breezed under the wire allowing the opposition 10 hits for 4 runs.

Getting four hits in six trips to the plate, Woods, left fielder of Fulton Bag, was the leading hitting star, while the entire Fulton Bag team played brilliantly behind him, as their fielding only showed one error. Although Pinson drew first blood they were unable to keep up the heavy bombardment of Fulton and were forced to see their lead taken away in the second inning, never to be regained.

Rowell and Jeter with two hits apiece were the hitting stars for Pinson.

OUSLEY LOSES ONE.

Scoring two runs in the tenth frame, Roswell defeated Ousley Chapel, 10 to 8, on the WSB diamond in the biggest upset of the Georgia league this season. Both clubs hit hard with Jones, of Roswell, getting a single, two doubles and a triple to lead his club. Newsome's triple with two on, tying the score in the seventh, was the losers' longest blow. They now lead the Dixie league with a perfect record. D. B. Eskew paced the batters with four hits in five times at bat, with Kelly securing three in four trips to the plate. PETRELS BEAT TIGERS, 9 TO 3, TO TAKE SERIES

Eddie Anderson Stars as Birds Amass 18 Safe Blows.

AUBURN, Ala., May 12.—Oglethorpe hit safely in every inning to win an easy 9-3 diamond victory over Auburn here this afternoon and make it two out of three over the Tigers for the season. The two teams split their two-game series in Atlanta and tied Friday in a 12-inning struggle.

The Petrels had their heavy artillery hitting the mark so well Saturday that they accumulated 15 hits off Mugs Erwin in seven innings and three off Lefty Wilcoxson the last two stanzas. Eddie Anderson, Oglethorpe, the coach's son, had a field day at the plate, hitting four for four. Buster Fisher and Dago George also slammed out four hits a piece for the winners.

Gump Arial, Alternate-Captain Bill O'Barr and Warren McMahan, each with two safeties, led the Tigers in securing their 10 knocks off Lefty Dixon, who took up Saturday where he left off Friday. The three are seniors and finished their college athletic careers Saturday.

Dixon, although he was nicked for 10 safeties, was never in much trouble and had mighty good control. He hurled five innings Friday but this did not prevent him from bearing down in the final game and holding the Plainsmen fairly well in check.

Jones then went to the whip and High Quest moved away from Discovery, leaving Cavalcade room to charge on. He staged a great finish, but Jones, ever fearful of the still dangerous Vanderbilt colt, continued to ride High Quest with all his brilliant horsemanship.

Time Supply, after forcing the pace through the back stretch, called it quits at the head of the stretch and wound up sixth, five lengths back of Spy Hill in fifth place. Riskulus, carrying the hopes of Norman Church, of California, never was in the race, finishing last.

Pimlico Betting Largest in Years.

BALTIMORE, May 12.—(AP)—With $177,805 wagered on the outcome of the Preakness, won by Mrs. Dodge Sloane's High Quest, more than three-quarters of a million dollars passed through the pari-mutuel machines at Pimlico today. It was the largest single day in the last five years. The play on the eight races totaled $802,439.

Lassiter and Sarris Battle Thursday

Ted Sarris, New York Greek wrestler, who defeated John Mauldin last week, will meet Freddie Lassiter, Ohio state champion, in the main event at the Lakewood Heights arena, on Promoter Frank Bettis' card starting at 8:15 o'clock Thursday night.

In the semi-final match Gus Pappas, Dallas, Texas, will meet Chippewa Charlie McClain, the Indian wrestler, in 60-minute match. Pappas challenged the latter at this arena last week and the challenge was promptly accepted. Anything is liable to happen when these two boys get together as they are both rough.

Gorilla Tucker will meet Bob Anderson in the opening match. This is sure to be a thriller and all the fans are expecting to see the opening match.

GRANT DEFEATS LOTT IN FINALS

Grant's Victory Boosts Cup Chances.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 12.—(AP)—Bryan Grant's victory in the finals of the Dixie Invitation tennis tournament here today may put him in a position for a trial for the Davis cup singles.

Officials of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association, who would not be quoted, said tonight they would urge consideration of the Atlantan on the basis of his victories over Lester Stoefen and George Lott on successive days.

They pointed out that since Stoefen left here tonight for Philadelphia for a Davis cup tryout that Grant, having beaten him, probably will be given the same consideration.

Inquirers, however, were referred to Holcombe Ward, of New York, chairman of the Davis cup committee, for a statement.

FLANAGAN SEEKS MEDICA'S PLACE AS TANK CHAMP

Young Floridian Confident He Can Take Jack's Measure.

MIAMI, Fla., May 12.—(AP)—From the deep south this summer will come an accredited challenger to the distance swimming supremacy of Jack Medica, be-spectacled collegian from the other extreme corner of the United States.

But 16 years old and already out for a "comeback" is Ralph Flanagan, Miami High school sophomore, who has been stripped of all the records he once held except that for the American mile.

Flanagan, whose "gimme a thick sirloin, smothered in catsup," is probably the strangest pre-swim order as ever a champion ate, is back in the pools, methodically stroking through a thousand or so yards each day.

And despite the more than six months absence from competition because of classes, his training swims which started this week have convinced the youngster that "I'm better now than ever."

MEDICA'S RIVAL.

It was only a year ago that Flanagan was perhaps Medica's most feared rival. They fought it out over almost every distance from 440 up, with Medica, according to the Miami boy's tally, winning three of the five meetings.

Flanagan is nearly 20 pounds heavier now than when he last matched strokes with the Seattle swimmer and captured the crowd's plaudits and high point honors in the national outdoor meet before a World's Fair gallery.

"And while Medica has been knocking off my records," the black, curly haired youngster—and how he hates the headline title of "schoolboy swimmer"—explained, "I've developed my timing and am confident I can take his measure."

INJURED KNEE.

A little water on the knee—the result of a dance floor fall—delayed Flanagan in his return to a rigid, daily training swim.

The knee is as good as ever now, assured the Olympic team member. He was one of the youngest athletes to compete in the 1932 international events.

Ralph will open his "comeback" campaign in the Chicago national outdoor swims July 6, 7 and 8, and he hopes to make such a creditable showing that he may be asked to join the Japan-bound squad of United States swimmers later that month.

He took the mile and 300-yard medley and placed second in the 440 and 880 at Chicago last summer for high point honors. His national mile record is 21:12.2, "and one of the chief ambitions of my life is to clip off the few seconds between that time and the world mark," he said.

Arne Borg, the great Swedish swimmer, is the world ti list. He was clocked over the mile in 21:06.

SWIMMING FAMILY.

In Florida, the champions swim by families—the Rawls sisters, Katherine, Evelyn and Dorothy, for instance. And then there's the Flanagan boys—Ralph, 16; Melvin, 19, and Everett, 15.

But Everett and Melvin have handed down defense of the family's aquatic honors to their brother. One of the brothers is slated to go to work soon on a Tennessee dam, and the other is a New York pool guard.

Ralph "took to the water like a duck," Father Harry Flanagan, a meat butcher, who will drop his meat ax any time to talk about his boys, repeated the phrase.

The youngest of the Flanagan clan—his chief worry of the moment not Seattle's Medica, but sophomore biology and approaching exams—learned to swim in the ocean off Miami Beach when he was "so high."

And Father Flanagan measured off on an arm a mere infant.

Senators, Chisox Trade Infielders

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The Senators and Chicago today traded utility infielders, Bob Boken going from the Washington team to the White Sox for Ralph Kress. The exchange was on an even basis, with no cash involved.

Clark Griffith, president of the Senators, said the deal was completed by telephone this afternoon. Kress will report here tomorrow while Boken will join the Sox tomorrow in Boston, where they open a three-game series.

several years and they play at least one each week and oftentimes two or three.

Jones recently scored a "team" victory over Bradshaw in the opening of the East Lake tournament program, and members of the winning team were guests at a dinner. The foursome play was broken during the "losers pay" dinner tournament.

Bryan Grant Sr. Wins Golf Prize.

While his son Bryan Jr., was winning the Dixie Invitation tennis tournament at Memphis, Tenn., Bryan Grant Sr., former Southern tennis champion, was stroking his way towards a prize on the East Lake golf course. Grant was in a tie for second place in the regular weekly blind bogey tourneys and scored one of his best rounds of golf.

Nat Thornton, a former teammate of Grant in winning southern doubles tennis titles, was in the stands at the Biltmore Tennis Club courts watching Billy Reese win the Southeastern Invitation college tennis tournament.

Thornton has taken particular interest in Atlanta's young tennis stars and sat next to Burtz Boulware, Tech freshman who will make a tour of the eastern tourneys during the summer with Reese.

Three Players Tie At Druid Hills.

Dr. Ralph Byrnes, Bowie Martin and Bill Terrell shared first honor in the regular weekly blind bogey tournament for members of the Druid Hills Club. The winning score was 73.

Second place was divided between Leonard Crawford, Snap McCord, J. A. Bell and Dr. Claude Hughes, who were one stroke away from the leaders.

Paul Bolerjack Wins at Piedmont.

Paul Bolerjack with a 75, won first prize Saturday afternoon in the blind bogey tournament on the Piedmont park municipal course.

Miss Margaret Maddox, former city and state woman's champion, finished in a tie with C. B. Wells and S. P. Booth for second place. Miss Maddox carded a 37-37—74, for one of the best scores in recent weeks.

East Lake Golfers Set New Record.

East Lake golfers set another record for Saturday afternoon play when 73 players entered the weekly blind bogey tourney on the two courses. There were more than 260 players on the courses during the afternoon, one of the best crowds of the year.

In the bogey, John McClelland, J. R. Edmondson, E. R. Neely, T. L. Reed, Dr. C. W. Strickler and T. A. Martin finished in a tie for first place with 84's.

Nine golfers, H. S. Bray, Ralph McClelland, Bryan Grant Sr., A. V. B. Gilbert, R. S. Mather, M. M. Smith, J. B. Dorris, J. Michael and T. L. Johnson were one stroke away from the leaders for second place.

Crawford Rainwater, George Suggs, Keith Conway, P. W. Crawford, H. R. Stone, L. E. Mock, Travis Johnson and A. N. Patton were tied for third place.

W. W. Cole won the prize of one golf ball.

Druid Hills Plays Ansley Park.

Druid Hills and Ansley Park golf teams will meet at 1 o'clock this afternoon on the two courses. Half of each team will play at Druid Hills and the other half will play at Ansley Park.

The match was scheduled for two weeks ago, but due to the cold rain during the afternoon it was postponed until this afternoon.

The same lineup of players as announced for the first match will play today.

Members of the Druid Hills team who will play at Ansley Park are Bill Jones, Brown Rainwater, Albert Stubbs, Garrison Ballenger, Ray Menke and Ed McKeithan. Against the Druid Hills team, Ansley Park will send Forrest Adair Jr., J. Dobbs, W. O. Cheney, Parks Huntt, Dr. Sage and R. L. Nichols.

Ansley Park's team at Druid Hills will be Dan Sage, Jiroud Jones, John Kilpatrick, Gene Gaillard, W. C. Caye and Jacob Cook. Druid Hill's team at home will be Julius Hughes, John Owens, Jimmy Wilson, Bill Terrell, Snap McCord and Harvey Hill.

Sweetwater Golfers Meet Marietta Today.

Sweetwater Golf Club will seek its first victory in the North Georgia Golf league Sunday afternoon against Marietta on the Cobb county course, in the only match scheduled. West End is leading the league with four victories. Ansley Park has a perfect record but has played only three matches.

Sweetwater has lost one match and tied one, while Marietta boasts of two victories and one loss.

Nevertheless, the match should be interesting. Each club has several fine players, and it is expected, with a break from the weather, that some good cards will be turned in.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Wall Street kept on its blue-tinted glasses during today's short session of the stock market, and prices completed a third week of almost steady declines.

Selling quickened for a time, and the turnover for the two-hour session was 1,110,110 shares, or more than the volume for yesterday's five-hour trading, but a little buying and short covering appeared in the last few minutes, which reduced and in some cases cancelled the extreme losses. Wider declines in principal shares were largely limited to a point or two.

Standard Statistics Co.'s price index of 90 representative shares receded a full point to 74.8, which is the lowest since early November. The 20 rails and 20 utilities held just above their lows of January, but the composite index for 90 shares was pulled under the 1934 lows by the 50 industrials. At 74.8, the index was 6.8 points above the level at which last year's long decline from midsummer to mid-October was checked.

SELLING CONTINUES.

There was nothing to account for the continued selling save the lack of any change in the tenor of the business news, and the natural gloom which descended upon Wall Street as the senate met in expectation of passing the stock exchange control bill.

The weakness of stocks spread to bonds, where corporate issues were irregularly lower. The securities markets gained no strength from commodities. Wheat encountered profit taking, in response to forecasts of rain over some of the drouth-stricken areas. Losses were about 1 to 2 cents a bushel. Corn and cotton were narrowly changed, but rubber futures reacted nearly a cent a pound, and silver futures closed .10 to .46 of a cent an ounce lower.

Published reports that President Roosevelt's requests for supplementary appropriations would be kept strictly within budget estimates was interpreted in some quarters in Wall Street as indicating that no fresh artificial stimuli for business were planned. While gratifying to sound money exponents, this left stock market quarters rather despondent, for it was pointed out that business was evidently being given an increasing opportunity to go forward under its own steam at a time when a seasonal stimulus is lacking.

GLOOM OVERDONE.

Some quarters in Wall Street insist, however, that recent gloom has been overdone, that business volumes are holding close to the spring peak, despite the usual tendency toward contraction at this time, and that there is no reason to look for anything serious in the way of a summer lull. F. W. Dodge Corporation's figures for April on building contracts in the states east of the Rockies offered some encouragement, since privately financed projects rose to the highest level since last August, while publicly financed projects declined. If privately financed projects continue to expand, it will provide evidence that business is accelerating under its own steam. So far as building construction is concerned, however, the volume is still but a fraction of the 1922-30 average.

Among shares losing 1 to 2 points or so were American Can, American Shipbuilding, American Sugar Refining, American Beet Sugar, American Tobacco B, Borg Warner, Case, Cerro de Pasco, Deere, DuPont, Goodyear, Great Western Sugar, Illinois Central, Lehigh, Montgomery Ward, Pennsylvania Railroad, Scott Paper, United States Industrial Alcohol, Chrysler and General Motors. United States Steel lost only a minor fraction and American Telephone closed a fraction higher. Several of the rails and utilities closed about steady. News of the receivership for Follansbee Brothers, one of the smaller steel companies, caused a drop in the stock to 2 1-4, but it closed at 3, where it was off 2 1-2, net.

FEDERAL COURT TRIAL OF INJUNCTION SOUGHT

A suit against the Georgia Power Company which challenges the constitutionality of a corporation set up by the Tennessee Valley Authority Saturday was postponed until May 15, when the defendant will file a motion to transfer it from the state to federal courts.

The application was filed in Fulton superior court and the motion for a transfer to the northern district of Georgia will be heard by Judge G. H. Howard.

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—Secondary issues suffered another sinking spell in today's abbreviated bond market, but prime investment loans maintained a relatively steady tone.

The activity was not especially pronounced, but selling was the rule throughout the two-hour period. Transactions totaled $7,041,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate bonds declined three-tenths of a point to 85.3. On the week this average was down 1.8 points. The net revision was the heaviest for any week since last November.

Although the majority of United States government securities eased 1-32 to 4-32 of a point, dullness predominated in this list. The turnover here amounted to only about $600,000 compared with 1,600,000 last Saturday. Five of the treasuries, which were the most active, were unchanged.

In the corporation groups the better acting issues included those of American Telephone, Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Burlington, Delaware & Hudson, National Steel, M.-K.-T. Pennsylvania, Universal Pipe and Utilities Power & Light.

The secondary divisions apparently reflected the unsettlement in stocks. There was little news of importance to the bond market as a whole.

Among some of the noticeable losers were Warner Brothers 6s, off 3; Texas & Pacific 5s of 1977, off 3; Studebaker 6s, off 4 1-2; Southern Railway General 6s, off 3; Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, off 2; New York Central 4 1-2s of 1978, off 2; Missouri Pacific 5s of 1965, off 2; Louisville & Arkansas 5s, off 2 1-8; Laclede Gas 5 1-2s of 1960, off 2 1-2; Georgia Midland 3s, off 3 5-8; Erie 5s of 1957, off 2 1-2; Cuba Railway refunding 7 1-2s, off 3 1-2; Chicago & North Western convertible 4 1-2s, off 4; St. Paul 5s of 1975, off 3 1-2, and Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s, off 3.

The foreign section was quiet and slightly irregular. Some of the Germans improved.

Stopping on Crosswalks

Drivers are not permitted to park their cars on crosswalks. Stopping or parking with any part of the automobile on or across the "crosswalk space" seriously interferes with the movement of pedestrians in that area legally set aside for their use in crossing streets or highways.

SUBDIVISION OPPOSITE BOBBY JONES GOLF COURSE

PROPERTY consisting of 100 lots, two real nice bungalows, No. 12 Belvedere Drive and No. 686 Wilson Road, on large lots with all city improvements including paved streets and sidewalks, in a subdivision with prices already established—with homes of the better type. Near the intersection of Collier Road, on North Side Drive, opposite Bobby Jones Golf Course, fronting on the best part of Howell Mill Road in a community that speaks for itself.

THE above property is owned by the Pittman Construction Company. They are not in the real estate business and their business requires all of their time, and for this reason, they have selected us to dispose of this property at the best possible price, considering that we are forced to take prices in line with today's value. According to their old sales list of a few years ago, their prices ranged from $1,000 to $3,500 per lot. Mr. Pittman does not know what they will bring on today's market, and we cannot tell him, and for this reason he advises us to sell the lots—and let the people name the price. We believe that the majority of people will agree with us, if they buy on today's market, they can certainly reap an enhancement on their purchase.

EVERYBODY is invited to be present. If you would like to see a blue print, call us, we will be glad to send you one. Any other information desired concerning this subdivision will gladly be given.

SUBDIVISION fronting on North Side Drive, just the right distance from town, with paved street, sidewalks, and other city conveniences. We believe this will be a good buy on today's market. No price is set—you will make the price, and each lot will be sold to the highest bidder on unusually easy terms. Free barbecue for all, and other attractions.

Week's News in Review

By RICHARD HIPPLEHEUSER

NEW YORK, May 12.—(AP)—The wanderings of Samuel Insull ended—in jail.

Then, under bonds of $250,000, he was freed . . .

An old man, ailing but chipper, defending himself of the law's charges of collusion in the collapse of his once mighty system of utilities.

After a hasty, secretive disembarkation with the dawn below New York harbor, a speedy train ride west, federal agents delivered Insull to the custody of Chicago courts.

Why the secrecy? Insull asked.

Refusing to plead either guilty or not guilty, Insull's first move was a demand to know his legal status.

Was I extradited, deported or kidnaped from Turkey? He wanted to know.

Vast holdings of property and securities were pledged by friends to release Insull from jail—a jail almost within sight of the Grand Opera, the gas and power companies he built.

There was one bond of $200,000 to the federal government; another of $50,000 to the state of Illinois.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

The Drouth.

In the middle west, parched by drouth, thousands of acres in wheat and oats went up in clouds of dust.

Heavy winds swept over dry fields. The finely-pulverized top soil, with its sowings of grains, was swirled into clouds. The sun was darkened over widespread areas. Soil sifted down on buildings in eastern cities, onto the Atlantic ocean.

President Roosevelt and his cabinet convened to plan aid.

Prices on grain exchanges soared. The worst spring planting weather in 40 years, the department of agriculture reported, already has ruined 20,000,000 bushels of wheat.

War Debts Again.

That perennial problem of diplomats, war debts, bobbed up again. It always does before interest-payment time. And the next payments are due June 15.

The much-mooted Johnson bill seemingly has clarified nothing. It has added to the complications.

There were reports from usually reliable sources that some debtor nations have been informed token payments will not exempt them from the strict provisions of the Johnson bill, aimed at such nations.

There were other reports that the president has laid down, as yet, no all-embracing policy.

Only one thing seemed certain: That the United States will engage in no general conference on war debts. Each nation must discuss its debts separately with the White House and treasury.

The Mellon Case.

The government lost its income tax fight against Andrew W. Mellon.

A Pittsburgh federal grand jury refused to indict the multi-millionaire who served three republican presidents as secretary of the treasury.

There is no disposition, said Attorney General Homer Cummings, to challenge the result of the jurors.

The NRA.

The controversy over the NRA's review board raged on.

Although the White House still held secret the board's report, one thing came definitely to public knowledge:

Clarence Darrow dominates the sharply critical board. The majority of the members stood with the aging foe of the vested interests of capitalism.

On Capitol Hill.

A senate committee turned down the president's appointment of Dr. Willard L. Thorp, young Amherst professor, as a department of commerce aide.

He doesn't possess enough practical experience, the committee said. The White House withdrew the appointment.

The democratic leaders maneuvered the stock control legislation around to passage in the senate.

In the house, enough signatures were obtained to force a vote May 28 on a measure establishing a 30-hour week for railroad workers.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

A Collapse.

In London, Argentina turned down the plan of the world conference to raise wheat export prices 10 per cent by limiting production.

The conference virtually collapsed, adjourned.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

'Dancing Around' Stage Revue, 'She Made Her Bed' at Capitol

Another snappy stage revue and a good first-run picture is the amusement bill of fare at the Capitol theater, starting today. On the stage is the "Dancing Around" revue, a company of 22 stage performers, including lots of pretty girls, headed by the famous Janis Andre, known as the girl with the form divine. On the screen is the Paramount picture, "She Made Her Bed," with a brilliant cast of stars, including Richard Arlen, Sally Eilers, Roscoe Ates, Robert Armstrong and the new juvenile star of 1934, Richard Arlen Jr.

Advance reports on the stage show indicate that "Dancing Around" revue is really a passing show of youth, beauty, music, song and dance, with the lovely Janis Andre presenting "A Symphony of Fans" and "An Indian Fantasy." Those who see Miss Andre in action will have the opportunity to witness one of the country's outstanding dancers. She has just closed a long engagement at the Paradise Club in New York.

The Four Bars of Harmony, better known as "Radio's Favorite Quartette," is another outstanding feature of this stage show, having headlined all the so-called big-time vaudeville circuits in America. Bert Dexter will handle the comedy situations throughout the revue.

Roseda Langdon, Althea Auderer and Francis Sanford, three cute bundinary. Eva Marlowe, the personality dles of pep, will offer a brand of tap-Harlem and rythm dancing extraordinary. Eva Marlowe, the personality girl, will let the audiences in on her hot-cha style of acting. And there are many others, who will delight and entertain. The Broadway Syncopators," red hot stage band, are augumented with Enrico Leide's Capitolians.

A bunch of wild animals; exciting horse races; a pitched battle between an enraged tiger and a man and a raging fire which burns down an entire tourist camp are several of the most potent elements that bring a thrilling, entertaining climax to the Capitol's screen offering, "She Made Her Bed."

Starting next Thursday, on the screen, the Capitol will offer the much-heralded new star, Francis Lederer, in the RKO special production, "Man of Two Worlds." Elissa Landi and J. Farrell MacDonald will also be featured in this production.

'Such Women Are Dangerous' Stars Warner Baxter at Fox

If you're a man and want to learn how to fight off the advances of three lovely damsels, see Warner Baxter in "Such Women Are Dangerous," at the Fox theater. And if you're a woman, you'll want to learn how best to make advances on a charming bachelor novelist.

Not that Baxter is altogether successful. But his suave sophistication serves him well in most dilemmas. It isn't until he gets into serious trouble that his usual defenses desert him. That leads to an unexpected climax that introduces some excellent serious drama into the picture.

Baxter is at his romantic best in this vehicle. Surrounding him are three lovely leading ladies, Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson and Mona Barrrie. Miss Ames is his faithful secretary who tries with scant success to protect him from the others. Rochelle is the infatuated debutante who tries to storm the citadel of the novelist's heart by the sheer impetousity of her attack. It is she, incidentally, who gets Baxter into his most serious trouble—a murder trial. And Mona Barrie exercises her more mature charms with stupied sophistication.

Henrietta Crosman contributes her usual polished characterization as Baxter's aunt. Herbert Mundin gives things a comic twist as Baxter's butler.

In the secondary roles excellent work is done by Lily D. Stuart, Irving Pichel, Jane Barnes, Matt Moore, Richard Carle, Murray Minnell, Frank Conroy, Fred Santley, John Sheehan, Addison Richards, Bodil Rosing, Douglas Scott and James Burke.

The short features on the program at the Fox this week are especially interesting and include a Grantland Rice Sportlight entitled "Marine Marvels," and a musical novelty entitled "Little Jack Little Revue," which features the one and only Little Jack. The regular newsreel completes a well balanced program.

"Baby Face" To Play Empire Today Only

Mother's Day finds the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, offering "Baby Face," with Barbara Stanwyck and George Brent. Here's the story of an ambitious girl of the slums, who uses men to get where she is going.

Monday and Tuesday's feature will be "Gallant Lady," with Ann Harding, Clive Brook and Dickie Moore. It deals with the experiences of an unwed mother who achieves phenomenal business success.

"The Last Mile," a grim tale of prison life, starring Preston Foster, is billed for showing on Wednesday, while Thursday finds Manager Alpha Fowler bringing back "Flying Down to Rio," at the request of his patrons. Dolores del Rio, Gene Raymond and Ginger Rogers are in the cast.

Friday finds the screen featuring "King For a Day," with Chester Morris, Helen Twelvetrees and Alice White. As usual, at 8 o'clock in the evening the stage will be turned over to a large group of amateur entertainers, who will compete in another Amateur Nite contest. Manager Fowler will be master of ceremonies.

Saturday's attraction will be Richard Barthelmess in "Massacre," in which the modern red man strikes back.

"Aggie Appleby" Plays Hilan Theater Today

Sunday the Hilan presents "Aggie Appleby, Maker of Men," with Charles Farrell and Wynne Gibson. Aggie's big task from the dramatic standpoint is to make a romantic hero from a lanky country boy whose noblest recommendation is prospective employers is his family tradition.. The cast includes Zasu Pitts and William Gargan.

Monday and Tuesday, Joel McCrea and Ginger Rogers are in "Chance at Heaven." The romance of a small-town boy and girl is threatened even when a beautiful and wealthy girl from New York comes to the village to spend a summer vacation. Others in the cast are Marian Nixon and Andy Devine.

Wednesday, "After Tonight," with Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland. The blonde star is seen as an Allied spy who operates behind the Austrian lines during the World War.

Thursday and Friday, George Bancroft is in "Blood Money." Bancroft is the boss of the underworld of a great city. The leading feminine roles are played by Frances Dee and Judith Anderson.

Saturday, James Cagney, in "Lady Killer." Included in the cast are Mae Clark and Margaret Lindsay.

"Pilgrimage" To Play Ponce de Leon Today

Today (Sunday) the Ponce de Leon theater offers "Pilgrimage," with Henrietta Crosman, Heather Angel, Norman Foster and Marion Nixon. It is a heart-touching drama of a mother who loved her only son so much she did not want him to love anyone else.

"Let's Fall in Love," with Edmund Lowe and Ann Sothern, will be the attraction Monday and Tuesday. It is a beautiful production of show life in which a producer, when his star walks out, goes out to find a new singing star for his show.

Wednesday a fast-moving melodrama, "Shadows of Sin," with Mary Brian and Bruce Cabot, will be the featured attraction. It is a well-planned story of two young people who fall in love while in college and then find out that he is the son of a police investigator and she the daughter of a hunted criminal.

Thursday and Friday's offering, "Once to Every Woman," with Ralph Bellamy, Fay Wray, Walter Connolly and Mary Carlisle, is a splendid story of a young nurse who thinks she is in love with a doctor in the hospital where she works.

Saturday, Ken Maynard will be starred in "The Fiddling' Buckaroo," with Gloria Shea and his wonder horse, Tarzan."

Lots of Stars Seen in Multiple-Starred Pictures

'Palooka' Stars Jimmy Durante At the Georgia

"Palooka," Jimmy Durante's latest film, in which he is supported by Lupe Valez and Stuart Erwin, is raging with polysyllables, as usual with Jimmy, at the Georgia this week. Durante has never had a part so perfectly cut to his peculiar madness as that of Knobby Walsh in this delightful Hollywood concoction taken from the comic strip characters by Ham Fisher.

The story concerns the not exactly bright Joe Palooka, whose father had lost the championship and his wife by training in the 1910 cabarets. Ma Palooka rears Joe in the country to keep him away from the bright lights and the baleful influence of the big city. However, despite this, in steps fate in the person of Knobby Walsh, who becomes his manager, makes him a fighter and introduces him to the allurement of the big city.

Palooka though he is, Joe manages by a fluke to win the championship and the girl of his rival, Al McSwatt, who comes into the ring drunk. However, Joe finally meets defeat in a return match, much to the delight of his mother, who considers it best for the lad. The fickle Lupe returns to her first love, and Joe, sadder and wiser, returns to his. The film closes on a hilarious surprise gag that will send you out of the theater howling.

Jimmy is a one-man riot. Stuart Erwin is better than we have ever seen him, as Joe Palooka. Lupe is more volatile and Marjorie Rambeau is superbly cast. Young William Cagney, brother of the famous Jim, makes his screen debut in this picture.

Selected short features complete the bill that is scheduled to run through next Thursday.

'The Black Cat,' Wierd Poe Yarn, At Paramount

Everyone remembers Edgar Allan Poe's masterful tale, "The Black Cat." It was full of horror and not the kind of a story one would like to hear on a dark and stormy night. Universal has come out wtih its own version of "The Black Cat," a picture which opened Friday at the Paramount. It was written by Peter Ruric, who took his inspiration from the Poe thriller.

"Frankenstein" and "Dracula" are together for the first time. In other words, Karloff and Lugosi.

There have been many horror pictures, thrillers, chillers and mysteries. But this one combines the best elements of all of these. Together Karloff and Lugosi combine their eerie talents and conspire to produce one of the strangest, weirdest and terrorful pictures ever presented.

Karloff, the greatest delineator of grotesque and monstrous characters on the screen since Lon Chaney, proves himself again the master at makeup in this film. His realistic performance as Poolzig, the master of a ghostly household, is superbly done. Lugosi establishes himself as one of the greatest character portrayers on the screen in the role of Dr. Verdegast.

The story revolves around an innocent boy and girl, just married, who fall into an unsuspected trap laid by these two Machiavillian men, whose thirst for revenge upon each other leads them to make prey of a beautiful young girl.

How it all ends and which is the victor, supplies one of the strangest and all-absorbing climaxes ever put into one picture. The supporting cast has David Manners and Jacqueline Wells supplying the love interest, and Egon Breecher, Anna Duncan, Herman Bing, Lucille Lund and many others.

The director is Edgar Ulmar. He knows his stagecraft thoroughly and learned it from such masters as Rheinhart and F. W. Murnau in Europe.

There are two pictures in Atlanta this week which have been given four-star rating by a well-known national magazine.

* * * *

"Viva Villa!" at Loew's Grand, is one. While I don't always agree with the aforesaid magazine in its screen judgments, this time most emphatically I do.

* * * *

"No Greater Glory," at the Rialto, is the other. At this writing haven't seen the picture, so can't check on the opinion.

In regard to the announced season of grand opera, which was to have opened at the Erlanger theater tomorrow, there has been no announcement forthcoming from anyone connected with it. Earlier announcements and information, furnished by the theater, were accepted in good faith. Until something is said or until Monday night reveals either a show or a dark house, nothing more can be done.

Wallace Beery in 'Viva Villa' At Grand Has Greatest Role

Wallace Beery, surrounded by a great cast, tops the famous list of his screen characterizations in "Viva Villa!" the dazzling and breath-taking epic of Mexican history, now at Loew's Grand theater. Leo Carrillo, Donald Cook, Fay Wray, Katherine De Mille, Stuart Erwin, George E. Stone, Joseph Schildkraut and Henry B. Walthall are in the supporting cast.

To get authentic backgrounds and the countless extra players, genuine peon types, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer went to Mexico to make "Viva Villa!" It has produced a stirring, universally understandable story, against backgrounds of superb beauty, photographed excellently. The sheer pictorial beauty of this film, aside from its other attributes, makes it a rare and stirring entertainment.

But "Viva Villa!" is first of all a great sweeping epic of Mexican history, told about a single hero. Pancho Villa, as a boy, saw his father flogged to death by the overlords who seized the peons' land and enthralled them in virtual slavery. Pancho grew up with a deep and venomous hatred of Mexico's rapacious ruling class. To them the lives of the peons were of no value—peons were executed or tortured for the slightest errors.

In such a state of affairs, the peons, knowing they were likely to die for an overlord's whim, were eminently ready to die for a higher cause. Villa, lusty, swaggering, and motivated by an ancient grudge, became their leader. In the bills he assembled a hobbledehoy army of ignorant, lustful men, and he led them into the plains, pillaging and murdering, heedless of consequences.

Just when Pancho's power was greatest, he met the "Christ-fool," Madero. Madero captivated Villa. Under Madero's influence, the bandit comprehended the strength which lay in his grasp. He organized it, directed it against the injustices of the government, and swept to Mexico City. The capital of the country fell before Villa's daring. Villa saw his idol, Madero, established as president of Mexico.

But Villa's work was not done. He eventually came himself to the presidency, an awkward, futile ruler. Villa could command an army of his own people—an army eager to die for him, but he could not compete with the diplomats in the executive mansion of Mexico City. How Villa lived for a dimly seen ideal, and died the crass, lovable human being he was, is thrillingly set forth in this extraordinary film.

'No Greater Glory' at Rialto Real Triumph for Borzage

"No Greater Glory," the Frank Borzage production which began its engagement at the Rialto theater yesterday, fully deserves the four-star rating which has been accorded it by the national magazines and by all picture critics and commentators. It is beyond question one of the few outstanding pieces of entertainment the screen has produced this year.

In fact, "No Greater Glory" but adds emphasis to the fact that during the past six months four of the really great film achievements must be credited to Columbia. "Men's Castle," "Lady for a Day," "It Happened One Night,' 'are pictures all of which at least equal the best.

Borzage in "No Greater Glory" has taken a universal theme of appeal to every human heart. He has told his story with some restraint, an artistic proportion that weaves a spell of fascination over every audience. It is breath-taking in its inspiration and utterly heart-thrilling in its perfect understanding of humanity, its sorrows and triumphs, its tragedy and comedy.

The picture, too, brings to the screen a new star, one who in years to come is inevitably destined for international fame. George Breakston does a piece of work in this film that will be ranked with the greatest bits of acting of the year, when the final awards are made.

The story is by Ferenc Molnar, with Jo Swerling, author of the screen play. The cast contains many well known names but was chosen, not for name value, but for ideal suitability to the parts portrayed. And the hero of the entire production is Borzage, the director.

The picture will be at the Rialto all week, through Friday next, together with a carefully selected program of short subjects as added attractions.

"My Lips Betray" at The Buckhead Today

"My Lips Betray," the delightful musical romance notable for its display of the most remarkable automobile of them all, is the attraction at the Buckhead theater for today only. Lillian Harvey, the winsome little European star, and John Boles, with his glorious voice, head the cast.

Monday and Tuesday the Buckhead presents "Gallant Lady," one of Ann Harding's finest vehicles, with Clive Brook heading the supporting cast. On Wednesday the attraction will be "After Tonight," with Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland.

"Emperor Jones," the feature for Thursday and Friday, constitute one of the really big booking achievements of the Buckhead for the year. They are showing this big picturization of Eugene O'Neill's remarkable study in negro psychology, on its first booking since its first-run engagement at a downtown theater. Paul Robeson not only gives a great acting performance but uses his famous singing voice in several effective songs.

The week closes with one of the most popular action stories of the year on Saturday. "Smoky" is really the dramatic story of a horse, with Victor Jory and Irene Bentley as the chief human protagonists in the plot.

Carefully selected short subjects, comedies, cortoons, etc., are added attractions on each program.

"NO GREATER GLORY"
AND HOW THE CRITICS RAVE OVER THIS GEM OF THE SCREEN
Washington has had world premieres before, but no greater production has had its initial unrolling on F Street than Columbia Pictures' masterpiece, "No Greater Glory."
—Washington Herald.
You may rave about Fredric March, the Barrymores, Clark Gable and Leslie Howard, but you will agree that you've seldom seen so sincere, unaffected, heart-reaching a portrayal as you will see given by this unknown star, George Breakston, in "No Greater Glory."
—Regina Crowe, New York American.
If you thought you cried at Norma Shearer in "Riptide," wait until you see George Breakston, this unknown star, in "No Greater Glory."
—E. de S. Melchor, Washington Evening Star.
It must be said that most of the highly centralized emotional appeal in "No Greater Glory" depends upon the almost unbelievably perfect performance contributed to the film by an unknown star, George Breakston.
—Nelson B. Bell, Washington Post.
The screen has a new star, who was actually unknown until his performance in "No Greater Glory." His name is George Breakston. The inspired performance of this unknown makes "No Greater Glory" one of the finest films ever screened.

THEATRE NEWS

by Ralph T. Jones

at the Alabama theater, one of the R. B. Wilby houses, on Saturday next. Following that, he goes to California for a vacation.

* * * *

If they ever get any spookier than "The Black Cat," now at the Paramount, horror films will degenerate into highly amusing burlesque.

* * * *

That was an excellent stage show at the Capitol last week. Here's hoping "Dancing Around" this week will keep up the good work.

* * * *

And for laughter, I can recommend "Palooka," at the Georgia.

* * * *

While "Such Women Are Dangerous," at the Fox, is good when it decides to go melodramatic.

* * * *

Things awaited with interest—"Twentieth Century," at the Rialto, and the return of the Crackers.

* * * *

"Erminie," to be produced this week at the auditorium by the combined talent of all Atlanta's high schools, should be a performance worth seeing. The schools contain some real individual talent and the mass effects, with the chorus and ballets numbered by hundreds, should be impressive.

* * * *

The Atlanta theater is getting this week what it has needed for some time. A complete new burlesque deal. The old company passes on and an entirely new organization steps in. If the new shows are good, they ought to revive interest in Atlanta's only burlesque theater. If they're not good—well, it just can't be helped, that's all.

* * * *

A certain production company waxed exceeding wroth recently when a nationally known commentator on things Hollywood, wrote various paragraphs saying that a certain forthcoming picture was not much good. All the high officials of the company raged and ranted and, capping their remarks, vowed said commentator had been unfair in publishing this adverse criticism even before the picture was released for showing.

* * * *

Of course, the producers are all wrong. The same writer had frequently written raves about other pictures they have made, and likewise published said raves in advance of the film's release date.

* * * *

The producers never objected then to criticisms pre-dating the picture's showing. So they have no right now to resent an adverse comment in advance. They can't expect to make a masterpiece every time they turn out a picture. And they must expect some of their product to bear the odor of cheese. Such things are unavoidable in mundane endeavor.

* * * *

It would be ridiculous to claim every picture was great. Because everyone would know the writer was fibbing.

* * * *

The only logical thing for the producers to do is to cease asking critical opinion and to market their pictures simply as so much factory product, unconcerned over any factors of art or genius or talent.

* * * *

Then critics could cease from paying any attention whatever to the screen and, perhaps, devote their talents to dissertations on the dramatic quality of the red flannel underwear manufactured by the Smith Underwear Company.

Brand New Burlesque Company For Atlanta Theater This Week

There is an entirely new company at the Atlanta theater beginning Monday. New all the way through, giving Atlanta a complete new deal in so far as burlesque entertainment is concerned.

"Harem Vanities" is the title of the new show, with Marie DeVoe, known as the "dynamic personality girl," and guaranteed to make Atlanta audiences forget all their former favorites before she has been on the stage half an hour.

Jack Christophel, known wherever burlesque and revue shows are popular, as a producer of fast and novel burlesque presentations, is directing the entire show for the Atlanta personally. He promises not only entirely new faces, new ideas in comedy, youthful and clever soubrettes, singers and dancers, a chorus of fast-steppers not over 20, new and startling stage and electrical effects, but a show that from opening chorus to final curtain will move with that zip and sweep essential to burlesque success.

The company comes here direct from St. Louis where at the Liberty Music Hall it established a record run of one year. Included among its personnel, in addition to the sensational Miss DeVoe, are Bill (Wham) Lewis, Helen Reed, Ralph (French) Duby, Bonham Bell, Virginia Pollard, Peggy Smith, Bert Berry, Ed Hill, Leah Nash, Arthur Watts and the 16 "Streamline Stylettes," said to be one of the fastest-stepping choruses on the stage.

The management promises a show entirely different from anything seen in Atlanta before, and Manager Arthur Watts, of the company, vows that Marie DeVoe will capture Atlanta burlesque fans with her sensational dancing and daring presentations.

The new company will make its Atlanta bow at the Monday matinee and there will be the regular performance all week, twice daily, at 2:30 and 8:30. And, in view of the certain popularity of the new burlesque deal, it will be advisable to make sure of favorite seats by reserving in advance, which can be done at the box-office any day after 10 a. m.

JOHN BARRYMORE BILLED AT RIALTO IN "20TH CENTURY"

In what is claimed to be one of the most hilarious feature length productions of the year, John Barrymore is coming to the Rialto theater next Saturday in the screen adaptation of the play, "20th Century."

Advance reports say that Barrymore has never before appeared in a picture with such a high comedy content. On the stage "20th Century" was rated one of the hits of its season when it ran for 152 performances at the Broadhurst theater.

Written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, the picture tells the story of an eccentric, self-centered theatrical producer, and his efforts to sign to a contract a great stage star, Lily Garland.

Carole Lombard is Barrymore's leading lady. She is seen first as a lingerie salesgirl making her first attempts to act, and later as a sophisticated, temperamental swiftfire, ready to fight at the slightest excuse.

The supporting cast includes such players as Walter Connolly, Roscoe Karns, Ralph Forbes, Etienne Girardot and Charles Levison. The direction is by Howard Hawks.

COUCH SCHOOL PUPILS HONOR THEIR MOTHERS

Today is Mother's Day. For weeks we have sung peans, memorized poems, written eulogies, all proclaiming the fathomless depth of mother's love and unfailing sacrifices. Each mother in this school will be remembered today with some small, home-made gift securely wrapped in love and affection.

Every kindergarten child will present a tiny picture, framed in cardboard cut by little, untrained fingers. Mrs. Annis Phillips, efficient teacher and camera expert, made the pictures.

All the pupils of High 6 seemed to develop artistic talent in decorating Mother's Day booklets with sprays of spring flowers done in water color. R. B. Allen, A. P. Black and Stephen Powers presented very creditable work. This grade also designed and executed tally and score cards to be used at the United States Veterans' base hospital, where many, otherwise, tedious hours are whiled away pleasantly by the patients in playing bridge.

Thirty-six children were given athletic buttons this year. Mildred Murdoch and Ralph Dalton won gold buttons; five others, silver, and the rest, bronze, but whether bronze, silver or gold, each carries the story of mental, moral and physical strength, hence the buttons are much valued insignia.

Our Abou Ben Adhem (love for others) club is still functioning, each member contributing a lunch for some needy child every day. And such tempting lunches! Sandwiches, smothered in mayonnaise and daintily wrapped in waxed paper; cake, fruit—just daily whispers of delightful picnics set in cool groves, bathed in rippling streams.

The champion marble player here, John Henry McNiel, lost to Goldsmith in the finals. This makes John Henry's second defeat, but what of it? Our histories tell us that Cyrus W. Field laid the Atlantic cable three times before his efforts were successful. Here's hoping that history may keep up its reputation for repetition, and give our boy a break next time.

Superintendent's Message

My Dear Boys and Girls:

Friday, May 18, is National Good Will Day. It is the time that the children of the nation send good wishes to the children of all other nations; it is a time in which our teachers try to bring to the attention of every pupil the fact that all the peoples of all the earth are brothers and sisters and that they should live in fellowship with each other.

During the past, dissensions and strife have often caused the nations to distrust each other and sometimes to actually go to war with each other. During Good Will Day and during all the days of the year we wish the children of Atlanta to send good will messages to the children of all lands. We wish them to pledge to the children of all lands that when they have become grown men and women they will seek to understand the problems of all nations, and that good will may prevail and wars may cease throughout all the earth, and each one shall come to know every other individual on the earth as a brother and friend.

This sounds idealistic and far off, but we can bring it a little nearer year by year if we continue to send Good Will messages, and to act with good will toward the children of all the world.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

PRODUCTION RECORD IS SET BY NORGE

With the shipment of 26,402 electric household refrigerators in April, Norge Corporation exceeded its best previous month's record by 6,404 units and set an all-time production record, according to reports received here by the Hopkins Equipment Company, Norge distributor in this territory.

Unfilled orders on hand at the end of the month totaled 34,360, even though four six-hour shifts are being operated at all Norge factories.

Total orders for the first four months of this year exceeded total shipments for the entire year of 1933, by 11 per cent, according to Howard E. Blood, president of Norge Corporation.

"April deliveries were approximately two and a half times those of the same month last year," said Mr. Blood. "Our factories are running at capacity and there is no apparent slackening in demand."

ATLANTA, GA., MAY 13, 1934.

THE BEEF CATTLE FOR GEORGIA.

Five years ago, on May 21, 1929, the first large show and sale of pure-bred beef-type bulls in Georgia was held at Moultrie, attracting a crowd of 5,000 farmers, who listened to an address made by Franklin D. Roosevelt, then governor of New York.

Already a part-time citizen of Georgia and interested in the beef cattle industry, he was unable to attend the cattle show, so he spoke over the telephone, his message of optimism being heard perfectly through the sound amplifiers used at the place of meeting.

At that time census figures state there were approximately 438,000 beef-type cattle in the state, while the figures for 1932 show an increase to 453,000. Not a startling increase, to be sure, but there were good reasons for the slow growth.

First, few Georgia farmers had been producing a high type of beef cattle; the economic slump was in progress and farmers were first to feel its effects in lower prices for their products, leaving small incentive to expand. Second, the more progressive element of farmers and breeders were already experimenting in improving the quality of their cattle by breeding grade cows to pure-bred bulls, while those who doubted the efficacy of this method were waiting to see what measure of success could be obtained. Third, a dearth of good pastures; lack of forage and feed for the winter, produced at home at small cost.

Relative to pastures and feedstuffs Mr. Roosevelt in his speech five years ago said:

There may be a few rare instances, but I have never yet seen a first-class pasture since I have been in this state during the past five years. On the contrary, I see thousands and hundreds of thousands of acres of corn and cotton land where the top-soil continues to run off year after year into the Atlantic and the Gulf. We are going broke on nitrate and other chemicals, and yet year after year the soil becomes poorer.

An example of the far-sightedness and direct manner of this man, who was later to become president and called upon to direct affairs of the nation during its most crucial period, was displayed when he said:

Nature has interposed no barriers to the successful raising of cattle in this state. More than that, the great and growing population of the whole southeastern section of the country gives economic reasons for raising beef and sheep to supply a growing local demand instead of depending on the far-away slaughter houses of the north and west.

Beef raising, like the raising or production of any other commodity, is only financially profitable if the quality is of the best. We in Georgia are slowly but surely coming to the realization that animals we raise must be equal to the best raised in other parts of the United States.

It is uneconomical for any of us to raise scrub cattle, and even though we cannot afford to go into the creation of a pure-blooded herd in a year or so, we can and we must afford, as good citizens, to improve the strain of our cattle. The practical and the cheapest way is to buy a pure-blooded beef-type sire. I myself at Warm Springs, am starting the improvement of a small herd of cattle in exactly this way. It does not call for a large amount of capital, and will, I am certain, bring dividends into our pockets in the long run; and finally, it is an act of good citizenship, if only an experiment.

I hope to see the day when Georgia will be dotted with pastures, when there will not only be a great cattle and sheep industry in this state, but where even the small individual landowner will be ashamed to own anything but good stock.

The method of improving the grade of cattle above outlined is no longer an experiment; there are many outfits which raise only pure-bred stock, but these are the breeders who supply pure-bred sires for the hundreds of large and small farms where grade cows are producing steers that furnish as good beef as can be purchased anywhere.

The dearth of good pastures that existed five years ago is gradually being changed as stock growers find the best type of grass suited for their localities and improved cultural methods are adopted. The matter of forage and home-grown winter feedstuffs is also undergoing a radical change, the inexpensive trench silo playing an important part in winter feeding of beef stock as well as that of dairy cattle.

The scrub animal is rapidly disappearing in the wake of the piny woods cow, and the time is not far distant when the hills and plains of Georgia will be producing the best of beef cattle and the growers will obtain a just price for their stock.

To advance the interests of everyone engaged in the beef cattle industry is the reason for the existence of the Georgia Beef Cattle Raisers' Association; it is an organization of which every farmer who is raising beef cattle should be a member. Its president, Colonel W. B. Hutchinson, of Albany, has done wonderful work in creating interest in the development of this industry in Georgia, and is prepared to give to anyone interested the benefit of his extensive and valuable research on the subject.

MOTORCADE IN SEPTEMBER.

Because of unexpected delay in the progress of the Madison-Eatonton link of the Four Capitals highway, the completion of which is to be celebrated by a monster motorcade under the sponsorship of The Atlanta Constitution and the Savannah Morning News, announcement is made today that the tour will be conducted in September, instead of June, as first planned.

Chairman Wilburn, of the highway board, in his letter to the editors of The Constittuion and the News requesting the postponement of the motorcade, expresses the widespread interest that is being manifested in this great motor caravan, in the statement that the board "is highly enthusiastic about the motorcade and its members are looking forward to it as one of the most memorable events in the history of our great state." Chairman Wilburn's letter in full appears in the news columns of this issue.

The growing interest in the tour is evidenced by the request last week of Macon autoists, voiced through Mayor Smart anl Chief of Police Watkins, for permission to enter an entire division of cars in the motorcade.

Macon follows the example of Athens, which some time ago secured permission to enter a large number of cars. Neither of these cities is on the Four Capitals highway, but since paved roads from them intersect the highway their residents will be equally benefited by the completion of the new route from middle and north Georgia to the coast.

The day of the motorcade will be a Roman holiday for the communities along the route, all of which will enter cars and are planning warm welcomes to the tourists as they pass through on the way to the coast. Even the farmers of the agricultural sections through which the highway runs will line the road with their families to cheer the motorcade as it passes, assuring that the motorists will receive practically a continuous ovation from the time they leave Atlanta until they reach Savannah.

The state-wide interest in the motorcade already evidenced assures that it will far surpass any project ever staged in the south. Hundreds of cars from Atlanta and north Georgia will be met at Milledgeville by other hundreds from Savannah and south Georgia, and the tour will be in the nature of a triumphal procession as it nears its goal on the coast.

Few direct routes in the south are as historic as the one that will be covered by the motorcade. On it are four of the five capitals Georgia has had since it was founded more than 200 years ago by General Oglethorpe and the section through which it passes has played an outstanding part in the momentous developments of this section during two centuries of time.

The completion of a modern highway along such an historic route is worthy of nation-wide note, and that this will be accomplished by the great motorcade which will celebrate its opening is already definitely assured.

COTTON RULES THIS WEEK.

In practically every community in the Union this week merchants and representatives of the cotton textile industry will celebrate National Cotton Week.

In commercial establishments, from the greatest department stores of the large cities to the general merchandise stores of the smallest communities, products made of cotton textiles will be given prominent display; thousands of display windows will be given over to the display of cotton wearing apparel of all kinds, and posters and newspaper articles will call the attention of the public to the economy and common sense of buying fabrics made of the south's chief product.

The use of cotton has increased materially during the past few years but not to the extent it should have, in view of the advances that have been made by manufacturers in the quality, effectiveness and beauty of cotton fabrics.

It is possible now to buy apparel made of cotton that equals in beauty the clothes made of any other fabrics, and is, in many instances, far more appropriate and lasting in quality.

It is to impress this fact upon the buying public that National Cotton Week is held each year. It has resulted in former years in marked increase in the wearing of cotton clothes for occasions of all kinds, and the elaborate plans for this year's observance should result in more definite results to this end than ever before.

Especially in the south should Cotton Week be wholeheartedly observed by the merchants and liberally co-operated in by the buyers. If the south will lead in the purchase of cotton fabrics for every possible purpose, it will set an example that is certain to be followed by the other sections of the country.

AID FOR HOME BUILDERS.

In the effort to increase home ownership throughout the country the federal government has taken an additional step towards encouraging the creation of more building and loan associations and the enlargement of the activities of those already in existence.

The first step to this end was taken in the creation of the Federal Home Loan bank as an adequate reserve discount system for the building and loan associations, and this was followed by efforts to bring about the organization of federal savings associations in every community of any size to become feeders and supporters of the home loan bank system, through subscriptions to the capital stock of these institutions.

Heretofore the government matched, dollar for dollar, all locally secured subscriptions, but on April 28 President Roosevelt approved an amendment to the Home Loan bank charter under which the secretary of the treasury is authorized to subscribe 75 per cent of the share subscriptions by accepting full paid shares in the newly created federalized building and loan associations. These subscriptions will be in addition to the equal matching of preferred stock previously authorized.

In other words, if the people of a community subscribe $100,000 to federalized building and loan associations, there will be immediately available to these organizations between $300,000 and $500,000 in federal treasury subscriptions.

In this aid to the building and loan associations, the government takes a step that is certain to increase home ownership and bring relief to the lagging building trades industry. That these two objectives will be achieved with safety to the government investment is assured by the remarkable record of stability established by building and loan associations. After 100 years of existence, through which 17 financial depressions have been undergone, these organizations have proved that in no other way can capital be as safely and profitably invested.

Especially in Georgia should there be a large increase in the subscription to the capital stock of existing building and loan associations and the creation of new organizations of this type in communities in which none now exist. Even in Atlanta, one of the wealthiest cities of the south, home ownership is far below the average for the couhtry.

Home ownership not only benefits the family but increases the financial conditions of a community generally, and those in Atlanta having money to invest should take advantage of the opportunity offered by building and loan associations to safely and profitably invest their savings and at the same time materially aid the welfare of the community.

A SPLENDID PROJECT.

A unique campaign, in which thousands of Atlanta children have participated, to encourage and emphasize love of mother and appreciation of motherhood, has been in progress in the public schools of the city since February 1, under the sponsorship of the Antlers, the junior division of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

The Antlers are composed of boys from 15 to 20 years of age, and their activities are sponsored and counseled by the senior lodge, their fourfold slogan of "courage, morality, loyalty and obedience" being directed at the development of qualities of good citizenship.

In addition to these virtues, the Antlers lay special stress upon the honoring of motherhood, each of their meetings being marked by a pause for reverent thought of mother. The project in the Atlanta schools which they complete today is, therefore, a peculiarly appropriate activity for these boys and young men.

Since February 1 practically every grade in every school in the city has staged a program in appreciation of motherhood; records have been kept of daily deeds of assistance of mother by thousands of school children, and one school has created a garden in which each child has planted a flower in honor of his or her mother.

The creation among children of an active realization of their duty of honor to their mothers is a task that will bear fruit in future years in the character of the boys and girls who are now of school age.

The officials and the teachers of the Atlanta school system have expressed appreciation of the work of the Antlers to this end during the past three months, and it should receive the grateful acknowledgment of the public.

"DOWN IN THE BACK."

It matters little who coined the phrase, "Agriculture is the backbone of the nation," because we paid it little heed until the past few years when all at once everybody realized that agriculture was "down in the back," and would require a lot of help and special attention if it ever got up.

"Down in the back" in a term used to describe a weakness that most generally affects hogs (although it may be found in other animals) and the primary cause is lack of proper minerals in the ration; the ligaments holding the backbone in proper position become weak, and the porker, especially if rather heavy, gets down and cannot get up. A bad case cannot be cured; a light attack may be remedied by proper diet and care.

Agriculture began to show symptoms of this malady some years ago; it was coincident with the great industrial expansion that glorified the exploits of manufacturers and financial wizards. It appeared that they were building on a solid formation; instead they were building on agriculture, taking no heed of the fact that they were withholding necessary elements, and then diminishing the strength of that foundation to such an extent that it "got down in the back."

Now, everybody who gives the subject any thought whatever realizes that something must be done for agriculture.

That astute financier and advisor of presidents, Bernard Baruch, said last week in one of his rare interviews:

The most important problem before the country is a just solution of the agricultural problem—as it has been for 20 years. The first thing is to establish the buying power of the farmer and the ownership of his farm. As soon as that is established many other problems will be solved. Without that nothing will be solved.

Financiers, manufacturers, merchants all have come to realize the truth of that old saying: "All wealth comes from the soil;" and as most of that wealth comes from products of the farm they find they cannot go on until agriculture gets a just return for those products.

Just now selfishness and greed are the greatest obstacles to the recovery progress. Every interest is fighting to get "theirs" first; they realize that something must be done to aid agriculture, but they appear to want "George" to extend that aid and let them alone.

There can be no return to prosperity until agriculture is put on the correct diet and given proper care. Dr. Roosevelt appears to understand this case of "down in the back," and so far the patient may be said to be convalescing. What he needs now is help instead of hindrance, and in due time we may anticipate that agriculture will get up on its feet and bring us prosperity.

Wilhelm Visions Hitler as Kaiser.

Former German Ruler Suspicious of New and Unfriendly Attitude of Nazi Leader.

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

PARIS, May 12.—Wilhelm II is passing sleepless nights of late with the thought that the next German kaiser may not be a Hohenzollern, but somebody by the name of Adolf I of the house of Hitler. The reassurances on this score of the crown prince, who has been to Doorn to put his father's mind at ease, have not had the slightest effect.

Ever since a couple of million storm troopers have sworn blind and unswerving obedience to the nazi fuehrer, the ex-kaiser has been in a state of alarm. Wilhelm had figured to be back in Berlin within a year after Hitler's accession to power and fully counted on a grandiose welcome-home reception on the part of the German people. More than a year has elapsed and the idea of a royal Hohenzollern restoration seems further removed from the minds of the nazi directors than at any previous time.

According to the Dutch press, a stormy family council was held at Doorn castle the other day, in the course of which the ex-kaiser violently upbraided the crown prince for having stood idly by while Hitler dissolved the monarchist party and merged the organization of the royalist steel helmet with his own storm troopers. For the first time Princess Hermine, the ex-emperor's second spouse who cannot bear the sight of the crown prince, and vice versa, was present at the Hohenzollern family council. Prince August Wilhelm, known as "Auwie" in Berlin, had sent his excuses. He is serving as a storm trooper in Herr Hitler's legions and had a date with Captain Roehm, chief of the sturm-abteilungen for that day. "Auwie's" absence first made the kaiser suspicious, then furious.

Among the many grave matters threshed out at this private gathering of the ex-imperial clan, a good deal of attention was given to the refusal of the Hitler authorities to sanction the annual charity sale by Princess Hermine. She was all set to make her yearly voyage to Berlin and had in fact engaged a suite of rooms at the Adlon hotel, when a curt telegraphic message from the ministry of the interior notified her that permission for the sale had been refused. No reason was given for this peremptory refusal.

Princes Hermine's annual visits to the reich capital have always been more in the nature of political conciliabules than anything else. On such occasions, it was never a secret, she acted as the emissary of her illustrious husband. She had conferences with the monarchist leaders, met the loyal generals and pulsed many of the political wiseacres on the chances for a return of the imperial woodchopper.

The kaiser looks upon the refusal of the nazi authorities to permit his wife her innocent little vacation as an effort to prevent any attempt at reconciliation between himself and the German people. Wilhelm knows that the nazis have always denounced him as a deserter in the hour of the fatherland's darkest hour, but he is willing to let by-gones be by-gones and forgive the brown boys their short-sightedness. Wilhelm will, in fact, overlook a great deal if only he can prevent a materialization of his worst fears.

Kaiser Wilhelm has no illusions on Herr Hitler's brand of socialism and he is afraid that the present chancellor harbors a secret ambition to have himself proclaimed emperor, if ever he succeeds in realizing the Anschluss, the union of the reich with Austria. The historic scene of the Galerie des Glaces of Versailles in 1871 would then repeat itself, but now in Potsdam or Schoenbruenn (palatial suburb of Vienna) and with this difference that the new master of the new empire would not be called Wilhelm II, but Adolf I, with Goering in the place of Von Bismarch; the loquacious little Goebbels in the place of Von Moltke, the taciturn Von Roehm instead of Von Roon. The vision of such an eventuality has become a nightmare with Wilhelm. All of the crown prince's reassurances failed to chase the gloomy picture from his imperial father's mind.

The conference occupied itself secondly with the financial situation of "the Court of Doorn." The abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain, where the kaiser has large investments, and by the U. S. A., where the stocks and bonds he owns have dipped ominously, has inflicted heavy losses on the kaiser's private exchequer. On the other hand, the new financial decree in Germany, which forbids the export or transfer of certain funds, placed him in grave embarrassment.

In view of this situation, Wilhelm addressed a request to the nazi authorities two months ago to permit him to return to Germany accompanied by the explicit promise that he would scrupulously abstain from all political activity. . . . Hitler, in spite of Goering's pleas, and Hindenburg's personal intervention, showed himself inexorable. The kaiser's request was turned down. Nor was he granted exemption from the application of the financial decree. With the upshot that the kaiser sees the future in very dark colors indeed.

Another subject of disquietude with his majesty is the fact that he feels the burden of old age creeping over him more every day. It would be a great consolation to him if he were assured that his mortal remains would be assured of a last resting place with those of his Hohenzollern ancestors in the garrison-church of Potsdam. To this end he addressed a second request to Berlin. He fully expected a favorable reply, along with superloyal wishes for a long life. Instead, he got a cold, almost brutal answer, containing about the following discouraging decision: "You die first and we'll see afterwards!"

In the light of these dolorous circumstances it must be clear that the imperial conference at Doorn was not precisely a gay affair. In the end, however, Wilhelm rallied to the occasion and regained something of his old Caesarian spirit. That was when he drew up with his own hand a communique destined for the world press and the German people. This communique ends with the following statement: "Having terminated an examination of the general world situation and particularly the situation in the German empire, the family conference, upon the proposal of his imperial majesty, decided unanimously to permit the present regime in Berlin to continue in power, while expressing its confidence in the policies pursued by the imperial chancellor, Herr Adolf Hitler."

I dare say the nazis had a good laugh when they read that!

And We Were Afraid Teacher Was Going to Flunk Him Again

Everyday Questions

BY DR. A. PARKES CADMAN.

Evansville, Ind.

Is it true that the French nation is the chief stumbling block in the way of world peace? I personally regard her as such.

France is that no more and no less than other nations in a world where each state is thinking only in terms of its own particular problems. The French attitude is simple, unvarying and consistent. If peace were internationally organized on the basis of mutual support against lawless attack disarmament would be a practical possibility and France would go far in the reduction of her fighting forces.

On the other hand, if the League of Nations is to be deserted by some of its most important members France will steadfastly look across the Rhine, continue to consolidate her European alliances, refuse to consider any serious diminution of her military strength, and she may even think so desperate a measure as preventive war is expedient.

What about the attitude of our own country? For years the United States has been on the verge of joining the World court. At least 80 per cent of our people believe in that institution, and our presidents and secretaries of state have indorsed its wisdom and necessity. Nevertheless a small group of obstructionists have hitherto prevented us from taking a step so vital to world peace and security.

The more effectively the nations are protected against war the sooner trade will revive and the world be enabled to tackle its economic and social problems. An unequivocal declaration of the purpose of this country to join the World Court and of Great Britain and her daughter commonwealths to do their international business through the League of Nations and of all the signatory powers of the pact of Paris to scrupulously adhere to that great instrument would be of far more service to humanity than accusing France or any other nation of obstructionist tactics.

Lexington, Ky.

I seriously doubt whether nations will ever treat each other with good will, still less consent, as you advocate, to co-operate in the readjustment of world problems. What are the reasons for your belief?

The pressure of necessity. Probably the world would have another war on its hand now but for the difficulties and destitution that would result as a consequence. Statesmen and enlightened citizens clearly understand that the grim game means destruction of the existing order for some nations. And who but a maniac desires that?

The fact is we are so near the changes which are transforming the thoughts of men that we do not readily discern their magnitude. The acute and sometimes heated controversies which ironically enough are the first results of efforts to secure peace should not be used to diminish the hopes and activities of peace advocates.

Nothing can obscure the eager and world-wide solicitude for security against war. This solicitude on so broad a scale is a new development in history. Never before have nations sought a common understanding as they seek it now. They ask for peace as a stable condition and not as an armed truce between chronic conflicts. You appear to wonder whether their demand will ever be granted. I have not a shadow of doubt that it will have to be, if western civilization is not to be blotted out.

The angels' song over Bethlehem justifies my faith. Not all nations nor all individuals in nations are yet ready to join in that song. But who among them does not know that its content is the only durable source of peace? After 19 centuries men everywhere recognize more plainly than ever that the message of the heavenly minstrels is also the central truth of international politics. So be of good courage, the goal will ultimately be won.

InsuranceLeaderApproves Comment on Eastern Time

Editor Constitution: I want to congratulate you on your editorial appearing in yesterday morning's paper, in which you expresesd regret that Mayor Key vetoed the resolution passed by city council authorizing daylight saving time.

Very few of our citizens realize how much Atlanta depends upon the east and what advantages we would enjoy if we permanently adopted eastern standard time, and I hope you will continue your efforts to bring about the change.

The Meaning of Motherhood

The most fundamental revelation of the Christian religion, which most vitally differentiates it from all other religions is the expression of God in terms of human relations. It is even more than the revelation which He made of Himself in Jesus. It is the expression of Himself in the relationship of Jesus to Mary, and Mary to Jesus. Because Christianity is essentially a religion of personal relations.

It is a religion of love, and so there must be two persons for its expression. There must be at least one to love and then another to be loved. "God so loved the world," and then there followed an expression of that love in human terms. Mary the mother so loved. And the first conscious experience of Jesus the baby must have been the vision of lovelight in the eyes of Mary His mother. And the first music of this religion was a lullaby song. And the first development of the life of Jesus must have been the unfolding love of a child for his mother.

Religion and Home.

This is not mere sentiment. Every worth-while sentiment has a deep significance. Here the significance is, that this picture of the family, Mary, Joseph and the baby, is a prophetic revelation. It is a picture of the kingdom of heaven, which Jesus has come to establish on earth. That kingdom is most perfectly revealed in the love-relation of the home. We need to remind ourselves that this primary revelation of our religion was not made in a church. Neither was it made to a priest, or to any other ecclesiastical authority. It was made in a home, and the first high priestess of our religion was a mother.

Here is where the human and the divine first met. Here is the trysting place of heaven and earth. Religion cannot live without the home, and the home cannot survive without religion. When we speak of the home as the foundation of our civilization, the sacred center of our culture, and the foundation from which flows our purest influences, let us understand that this is only true if the home is born out of the unselfishness of love. A loveless marriage is the breeding place of all the diseases to which civilization is subject. Better betray the state, or renounce the church than to destroy the home.

We shall do worse than waste this day, which we have dedicated to motherhood, if with undiscriminating sentimentality we ascribe the virtues of a mother to every woman who bears a child. The office is too high and holy, and its responsibilities too vital to the progress of the race. Not every woman is worthy of motherhood, nor fitted for its supreme obligations. The New Testament story is that Mary was divinely selected to be the mother of Jesus. Let your theology be what it may, Mary did play some vital part in the life of Jesus, and under God was in some significant way responsible for His personality.

Mary the Mother.

Little is told about her, and yet every sentence and word is revealing. She is the personification of unselfishness, effacing herself in the personality of her son. Think of all those sensational stories concerning His birth which must have thrilled all of Palestine from cottage to palace, and her bearing through it all is described in one revealing sentence: "Mary kept all of these sayings, pondering them in her heart."

Mary never once paraded in the honors of her son, prattled personal stories of their relationship, nor deflected the interest of the public from Jesus to herself. She never embarrassed Him by what might have been considered "semi-official" reports of His beliefs or conduct. Even in those last moments at the cross, as with a breaking heart she stands in the shadow, no uncontrolled cry escapes her lips to shift attention from the son to the mother. She helped to make it possible for Him to live, and possible for Him to die for others.

This is the meaning of motherhood. It is essentially self-giving. It is the translation of all that is best in self, into the personality of another. "Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone. But if it die, it shall bring forth fruit." That is just the story of motherhood. In the physical experience she descends into the shadow of death and unlocks the portal of life. This is only the beginning of motherhood. This experience she must repeat in the spirit over and over again.

Well might we exclaim: "Who is sufficient for these things?" Only those who have been prepared by the miracle of love. The state may legalize, and the church may bless, but only the heart's love can sanctify a marriage. A selfish woman may bear a child, but only an unselfish love can mother that child.

New York Skylines

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT JR.

Copyright, 1932, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, May 12.—Manhattan's topless towers sometimes are topped by gulls, hawks and migratory ducks, but the report that a pigeon, the first of the year, had soared to the sill of a window in the Woolworth building observatory, some 700 feet in the air, was news. The pigeon seemed a little tremulous, but, after a while, it plunged off into dizzy space to join its more wary fellows down below.

The bravest of New York's pigeons, however, are those three or four a month who dare the 1,000-foot ascent to the 86th floor of the Empire State building.

They had developed into unwanted problem children until Jack Conway, one of the tower guards, took the situation in hand. It seems that, having conquered the road upward, the pigeons are afraid to go down and stand teetering on the edge of the parapet, in a perfect blue funk.

Mr. Conway has pigeons of his own at home and he is the only one of the guards who is able to capture the Empire State's wayward birds. He carries them down 86 floors and releases them in the street with a gentle, reproving pat.

THE PASSING SHOW.

Spring in New York: "Beachcombers" on the waterfront play mumblety-peg on the rotting boards of deserted piers. . . . A trio of planes flying in perilously close formation get nary a tumble from a crowd watching laborers open Fifty-seventh street for the summer. . . . A wandering bootblack looks up from your shoe long enough to say "Now the season's on and you can make 40, 50, 60 cents a day. But on Sunday there's real money in this racket. Last Sunday, between 5 a. m. and 7:30 p. m., I got $3, counting a quarter from a drunk." . . . White shoes and white felt hats brighten the unemployed actors before the Palace during Broadway's pale daylight hours. . . . In Harlem, a suave, mellow giant struts down Seventh avenue, coatless, hatless, in a flaming red shirt, a white tie and sky blue trousers. . . . The bums have deserted the Forty-second street library to stand in the cool of movie palace lobbies equipped with air-cooling devices. . . . "But," says a taxi driver, "I always know it's spring when the traffic cops stand in the shadow of the buildings."

Street scene: Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt sidles modestly down the steps of her Sixty-fifth street town house, looks in vain for a cab and walks all the way to Madison avenue for one. By her own order, she goes "unattended." But, as she steps into her taxi, a police car falls inconspicuously into line.

Gertrude Ederle, the channel swimmer, walks unrecognized in Radio City. A scant hundred feet behind her is another celebrity who, only a short time after Miss Ederle, paraded up Broadway before a million people and under tons of ticker-tape—Clarence Chamberlain, the trans-Atlantic flyer. . . . Of all those to whom in the last mad decade lower Broadway was thrown open, who were handed scrolls, keys, and confetti, who were wined, paraded and feted, hounded by press and public, how many would get a glance of recognition now from the public which for a day was at their feet? Our guess is one—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Despite Ancient Maps and Documents of Early Explorers But Little Is Known About Lives And Habits of Original Natives of Georgia

By Isabel Garrard Patterson.

The reasons for founding the Georgia colony are clearly stated in the charter. "First—The relief of poor subjects, who, through misfortune and want of employment, were reduced to great necessity."

"Second—The establishment of a barrier for the defense of South Carolina and the provinces further north against the ravages of the Indians."

The history of Georgia from the time of the first settlement at Savannah on Yamacraw Bluff is well known, having been so recently retold in pageants and services throughout the state in over 10,000 bicentennial celebrations in 1933. It is Georgia's pre-history that must be learned.

Oglethorpe, of course, was the real founder of the Georgia colony. He mobilized the forces of piety and charity already beginning in England. His sympathy with the oppressed led him to seek the co-operation of Lord John Percival and other influential gentlemen to petition the king, George II, for a grant of land in America, to accomplish a task of strategic as well as philanthropic concern. The settlement of Savannah, Ga., on Yamacraw Bluff, February 1, 1733, had been preceded by a visit to this spot by Oglethorpe about January 20, 1733. The settlements and forts erected by Oglethorpe and the colonists are well known. His travels along the coast and sea islands on peaceful missions as well as those of war, his journeys to Charlestown and to Augusta are recorded in detail. His courageous journey across the state to Coweta Town (near Columbus, Ga.), in 1739 is historical, but few have troubled to learn the path he traveled. Likewise only a few have studied the journey of Alexander Cunning in 1730 or the path used by James Moore, of South Carolina, in 1703, 1702, and in 1690. Little is known of the routes of Henry Woodward in 1685, or of James Lederer in 1671. Over half a century Georgia had been traversed by the branching trading paths from "the inland entrepot at Savannah Town, (Augusta, Ga.), "Guale" and "Tama" had fallen to the conquests of English trade.

Commercial relations had been carried on with the important towns of the great Creek confederation in spite of wars and the migrations of the tribes, since 1680. Trading relations had also been conducted since this time with the principal towns of the Cherokee Indians.

The early maps of this country, namely that portion which embraces Georgia, are most interesting. The ones in the ethnological reports of the Smithsonian Institution, the ones in the state capital, and in books of recognized merit are worthy of consideration. The ancient maps made by the English, French and Spanish explorers are not to be ignored. The plans for the frontier settlements of Carolina began in 1717 and continued until the Georgia charter was granted in 1732. The Spanish, French and English rivalry for possessions in America underwent trials during the period of 1585 to 1763. To a lesser degree this conflict continued until recent times.

Many expeditions and attempted settlements in the southeastern part of the United States were made from 1513 until the colonies were established.

Little Known Routes.

The route of the Spaniards, Prado and Boyano in 1566 are scarcely known, although they reached many towns visited by DeSpto. We should certainly endeavor to learn the route of Hermando deSoto through Georgia. History records this daring expedition of 1539-40, and declares DeSoto and his followers to be the first white men to traverse the country now embraced by our state.

The voyages to the North American continent are still unsolved problems of history, dating from the year 1,000 A. D.

We know the first white men found another race of people here, but who were they? The wonderful Aztec civilization, from its beginning in the thirteenth century to its downfall when Cortez subdued Montezuma, has given many interesting subjects for study. Their religion, art, architecture and government show great advancement and culture. Their manuscripts, picture writings of records, laws, mythology, calendars and rituals as well as their political annals prove a remarkable intelligence.

Prior to the Aztec or Mexicans the Chicheneca inhabited Mexico in the twelfth century. The Toltecs lived there in the seventh to eleventh centuries. The Aztecs first built lake dwellings which are of especial interest, considering this mode of residence that has been discovered in the past few centuries in other countries of the world.

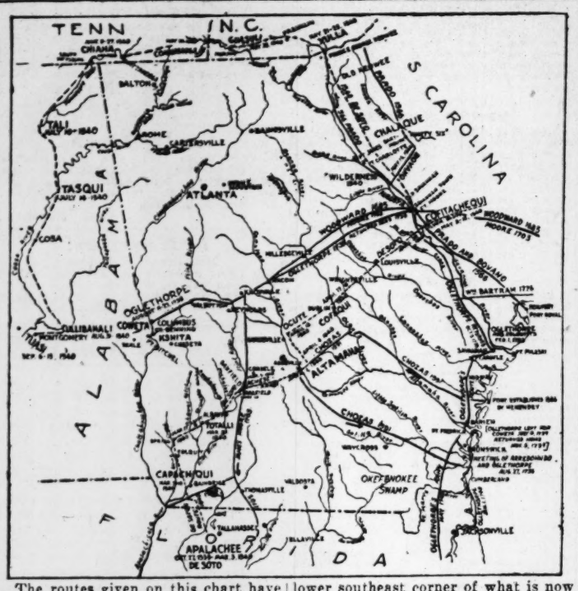

There are important links which bind together the distant families of nations, for example, the linguistic stocks. In America, the linguistic stocks of the Indians in the eastern part of the United States throw some light upon their origin.

The theories of the early writers of modern times and the records of the ancients have attempted to prove the origin of the Indians and the peoples who preceded them. Ethnologists agree that nothing can be proven except by scientific study of excavations.

The old world has been the center of study for many years and has yielded rare treasures for students of archaeology and ethnology. The new world, our North American continent, must possess a great history. The ancient trees bear witness to a great age. At Longwood, Fla., a great cypress has been estimated to be 3,500 years old. Its height is 128.3 feet, the diameter 17.5 feet and its circumference 42.9 feet.

"Before the Parthenon was erected, or even the Colosseum planned while Cheops was young and the walls of Tyre still stood, this mighty tree lifted its branches to the sun." Longwood is 11 miles due north of Orlando, Fla. Near Tallahassee, in a crystal clear spring (Wakulla) are to be seen today the bones of prehistoric animals.

Of more importance to us are the ruins of buried towns, the human beings who constructed them and their culture, in a word, THE ORIGINAL NATIVES AND INHABITANTS OF GEORGIA.

The routes given on this chart have been laid out after much study by various historians. The hypothetical route of De Soto in 1540 is chiefly the work of Dr. John Reed Swanton. J. Y. Brance and Colonel John R. Fordyce. Dr. Swanton is the authority on the place names of the Indian towns which the chroniclers of De Soto's travels gave. He has visited most of these spots and found the descriptions given in 1540 to describe the geography of the country. Infinite care has been taken to check the waterways mentioned and the distances traveled. The exact location of the spring in Early county and the "Toalli village" in Dougherty county as well as the crossing at Carrs Shoals just north of Dublin, Ga., are without question the places mentioned in the records of De Soto's route.

Dr. Swanton is the authority also for the routes followed by Prado and Bovano in 1566. The Chozas in 1591 and the route of Henry Woodward in 1685 have been copied from old maps, as has the path used by James Moore in his journey to Apalachee in 1703. James Edward Oglethorpe route to Coweta is given in part, "that he proceeded up the Savannah river to Ucheetown." Yuchi (2b) was in the lower southeast corner of what is now Screven county, Georgia. From the letters of General Oglethorpe in the Colonial Records. The Coweta Town meeting was held August 11 to 21, 1739. His letter of September 5, 1739, to the trustees, was written from Augusta, saying he had just arrived from the Creek Nation council at Coweta. On October 5, 1739, Oglethorpe returned to Savannah, and November 5, 1739, he returned to his home at Fredrica, according to his letters. These dates are given because of their significant value.

Oglethorpe's routes into Florida by land and sea have also been noted.

By treaty and settlement the watercourses of Georgia became her frontiers—the Savannah river boasts the first inland settlements. In 1782 the English had extended their towns along the Ogeechee river, by 1790 the Oconee river had been acquired. In 1803 frontier towns along the Ocmulgee river were established and in 1821 the Flint river trading posts became active. When in 1827 the Chattahoochee was taken over by the English almost all of the Creek Nation had relinquished their lands in this territory. The Cherokees in the northern part of the state remained only a few years longer.

Georgia's Government Lacks Essential Principles of Democratic Rule and Conflicts With Spirit of Constitution

Editor Constitution: Suppose the people of Georgia should, like the frogs in the fable, set up a king to rule over them, what would the United States do about it?

The Union was made up of states which had similar forms of government. No one of them was a monarchy or an aristocracy or oligarchy. They claimed and were supposed to be republics or democracies. In those early days the words "democratic" and "republican" had practically the same meaning, both designating representative popular government. The states formed the Union on the faith of their being republics. This was and is an indispensable condition of membership in the Union. The states pledged themselves to retain democratic governments. This appears from article 5, section 4, of the constitution of the United States, which says:

"The United States shall guarantee to every state in this Union a republican form of government."

In order to understand the meaning of this solemn and portentous declaration, we must revert to the deliberations of the statesmen who framed the constitution. The convention met in Philadelphia in May, 1787, just 147 years ago. During its session, 11 of the original 13 states were represented by delegates. Vermont and Rhode Island were not there. But Georgia was there, her two delegates being Abraham Baldwin and William Pierce.

Probably in all the history of the world there has never been another occasion which brought together as many great men as took part in this convention. Their grand task was to unite the several states into a representative republic. A large part of their discussions was devoted to the question of representation. They all agreed that representation should be proportional. Some argued that it should be proportional to property or wealth; some that it should be proportional to taxation or taxes paid. But the final decision was unanimous that representation should be in proportion to population.

Government by Majority.

James Wilson, of Pennsylvania, put the matter thus:

"The majority, wherever found, ought to govern. The interior country, should it acquire this majority, will avail itself of its right whether we will or no. If numbers be not a proper rule, why is not some better rule pointed out? Congress have never been able to discover a better. No state has suggested any other. Property is not the sole nor the primary end of government and society; the improvement of the human mind is the most noble object. With respect to this and other personal rights, numbers are surely the natural and precise measure of representation, and could not vary much from the precise measure of property."

Alexander Hamilton made a motion that "the rights of suffrage in the national legislature ought to be proportioned to the number of free inhabitants."

James Madison was of the same opinion; and the provision in the constitution guaranteeing to the states a republican form of government was adopted from the Virginia plan submitted by him to the convention.

Benjamin Franklin, in order to bring about agreement as to whether slaves should be counted in estimating representation and as to the contention of the small states for equal suffrage with the large states, offered a compromise giving one representative in the house for every 40,000 inhabitants, counting all the free and three-fifths of the rest, etc. This was accepted by the convention.

George Washington, who was presiding, suggested, near the close of the convention, that there be one member of the house for every 30,000 inhabitants. His suggestion was adopted unanimously.

It is not difficult to conclude that the framers of the United States constitution regarded representation in proportion to population as of the very essence of "a republican form of government."

Disproportional System Here.

Then what shall we say of Georgia? Our representation is not proportional to anything. It is disproportional from one end to the other. Each of eight counties has three representatives; each of 30 counties has two; and each of 121 counties has one representative. This plan is a clumsy effort to combine two utterly different and conflicting ideas of representation, that is, representation by counties and representation according to population. Oil and water do not mix well. It is easy to see that the element of county representation is predominant. The 121 counties vary in population from 2,744 to 20,808, but each has one member. The 30 counties vary from 21,094 to 35,408, but each has two members. The eight counties vary from 36,752 to 335,220, but each has three members. The result of this mongrel plan is that a majority of the house is always elected by a minority of the people. Out of a total population of 2,908,506, a group of only 984,597 elects a majority of the representatives. The figures in the senate are even worse, because a group of only 893,585 persons inevitably elects a majority of the senators who legislate for 2,908,506 people. In neither branch of the legislature is representation apportioned on anything like a fair basis.

It can truly be said that our government lacks both of the essential democratic principles of representation and majority rule. With these foundation stones wholly missing, can it be claimed that we have a "republican government" as required by the federal constitution?

Are we not outside the pale of democracy and without the necessary constitution to entitle us to be one of the United States?

The Happenings of The Church World

BY HERMAN L. TURNER.
Pastor, Covenant Presbyterian Church, Atlanta, Ga.

The only force which can bring together a divided world and save society from disintegration is a united religion, according to Dr. A. W. Beaven, president of the Federal Council of Churches. Dr. Beaven made this statement in addressing the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Philadelphia Federation of Churches, recently. Dr. Beaven urged that Protestantism forsake the spirit of competition, which has characterized its history in this country.

It is estimated that there are today 17,000,000 Indians in Latin America as pagan as were their ancestors when Columbus first stepped on the shores of the western continent. Neither church nor state interests itself in their spiritual welfare, and they represent a clamant challenge to the evangelical churches in North America. One denomination has barely touched the fringe of the problem in but one or two countries. Only a beginning has been made by any denomination. No submerged people of today cry more loudly for help than do the Indians of Latin America.

"Within the year the movies are certain to find themselves in the most furious and best organized censorship fight they have ever had, and they have got it coming to them. The movies have betrayed practically every trust," says Ward Marsh, a motion picture editor of Cleveland, in an article written for the Hollywood Spectator at the request of the Spectator's editor.

The Shanghai correspondent to the Christian Century writes about the Chinese preachers stressing the second coming: "The 'second coming' is, it appears, being quite assiduously preached in Chinese churches. Both the younger evangelists and older preachers participate thereon. Simple-minded and distracted people respond to it readily. But some of the younger preachers and student-hearers are beginning to raise questions as to its applicability to China's needs. There may be the beginning of controversy here. It is one aspect of the widespread emphasis by modern Chinese revivalists on fundamentalism. The Oxford group is making itself felt somewhat in China. In north China plans have been formulated to issue a rural paper. T. H. Sun, a secretary of the National Christian Council, will be the editor. A trial and promotion issue of 10,000 copies will go out."

The project of establishing a national home for the Jews in Palestine appears to be proceeding more hopefully than was anticipated, according to a recent editorial in the Presbyterian Banner. Statistics show that there are now 250,000 Jews in the country as compared with 85,000 in 1921. The Palestine Foundation fund in Jerusalem reports: "There is no unemployment. The call for labor is insistent all over the country. Moreover, today's industrial and farming output does not fully satisfy the local market, which expands further with the constant influx of immigrants. A continuation of this prosperous state may, therefore, be anticipated." This fund seeks to promote the building of huts and barracks, the allocation for the placement of German Jewish scholars, the locating of individuals and families in Jewish colonies, establishing of occupational schools, and grants of loans to individuals and firms. How far this process can go without encountering difficulties and checks, such as the growing friction of adjusting relations with the existing Arab population, cannot be foretold, according to the editorial, but the movement seems to be gaining ground in a solid and hopeful way and all will wish it well.

The writer of this column recently attended the Cumberland University alumni dinner given at Washington in honor of Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Secretary Hull paid this tribute to his alma mater, which is a tribute to the small educational institutions in America: "I am both surprised and gratified to meet this substantial number of alumni of Cumberland University (Lebanon, Tenn.). And yet there is no occasion for surprise when we reflect that Cumberland University for generations has been a powerful factor in the life of the nation. If this historic institution had been located in any other section of the country instead of having been an unpretentious school in an unpretentious locality, its wonderful work would be as widely known and recognized as that of any educational institution of like age in any part of America. The educational, religious and civic contributions made to the nation at large by Cumberland University could not be recounted within any brief space of time. Founded more than a century ago to meet the urgent needs of the frontier settlements, conceived and born in adversity, this ancient institution soon developed and taught a marvelous spirit which kept it alive and active and which lives on in every alumnus to this day. The principles of liberty and learning from the beginning have been deeply rooted in this institution. All who have been associated with it correspondingly love and revere its fine traditions. This school was created at a vital stage of our history to meet crying education needs. Let me here assert with all emphasis, however, that urgent and important as those needs were at that juncture, the necessity for the educational services of Cumberland University is immeasurably more important and imperative today than it was a hundred years ago. . . . I deem it an unusual privilege to have this opportunity to bear testimony to the proud history of our alma mater, and to point to this institution as typifying the college or university so greatly needed by the youth of America as they face the grave and enormously difficult responsibilities of this day and generation. . . . Most standards of conduct, both individual and international, have been seriously neglected and impaired. In its chief fundamental respects, civilization since the war has been on the decline. The entire political, economic, social and moral affairs of most parts of the world are unquestionably in a more or less chaotic condition. They present an unprecedented challenge especially to the parents, the schools and the churches." Secretary of State Hull is perhaps our greatest exponent of true Americanism and interpreter of democracy to the world. Senator Gore, of Oklahoma, said that Secretary Hull's career had been guided by the North Star of principle, and not by the meteors of expediency.

St. John's Was Only Georgia Parish To Favor Independence; Has Played Important Part in History of State

By W. W. GAINES.

At a noonday lunch a short while ago I chanced to sit across a little table for two from Chief Justice Richard Brevard Russell.

We fell into a conversation about Georgia and the Revolutionary period—about whigs and tories, loyalists and champions of separation and the like. And presently Judge Russell surprised me with this question: "Did you know that only one of Georgia's parishes declared for independence and that was St. John parish; and that two of the signers of the Declaration of Independence from Georgia came from that parish?"

Colonial Georgia was divided into 12 parishes. These parishes lay along the Atlantic coast and along the west bank of the Savannah river as far north as the mouth of the Broad river. They were all named for saints—the parish of St. Paul, the parish of St. Mary, etc.

St. John's parish fronted on the coast and lay about half-way between Savannah and Darien.

This Georgia parish was peculiar in that it was settled by Puritans.

On March 30, 1630, there gathered upon the docks of Plymouth, England, to embark for the new world, a band of Puritans. After a day spent in fasting and prayer they elected John Warham and John Maverick to be their pastors and resolved to settle in New England. They were leaving their native country because of the persecution under Archbishop Laud.

They took passage on the Mary and John, a small vessel of 400 tons capacity. Their contract provided that they should be landed on the Charles river in Massachusetts. But the captain, instead, put the pilgrims and their goods ashore at Nantucket Point, at the end of a 70-day passage. They settled therefore, in the tide water region near by, calling the place Dorchester, in honor of their old home in England. They numbered 140 persons.

Here they remained for 65 years, when, having heard that there was need for religious work in the southern colonies, particularly among the Indians, they resolved to migrate to South Carolina. They chose Joseph Lord, a young minister four years out of Harvard, to be their pastor and with him were constituted into a church. The parting scene was made solemn by the holy services of religion. Their former pastor, Mr. Danforth, preached from Acts 21:4-6 as a text. When the sun sank they were offering their evening sacrifice upon the bosom of the Atlantic. They formed their new settlement on the Ashley river near Charleston. Again they named their settlement Dorchester. Lord remained their pastor for 20 years.

Settle in Georgia.

In 1751, having heard of the good character of the land in the colony of Georgia, and having heard that the restrictions on slave-holding and land tenure in Georgia had been removed, and their Carolina site having proved unsatisfactory, these enterprising people sent two of their number to investigate as to the matter. They were pleased with what they found, and selected a tract of land midway between the Savannah and Altamaha rivers. They received a grant of 31,950 acres.

Whereupon the Carolina settlement removed to Georgia, a few at a time until the whole settlement had come, consisting of 38 families and five single persons. And in the act of removing they had brought their church organization with them. A third time they called their settlement Dorchester.

Their first care was to build a meeting house. Wherever they tarried in their several migrations their first act was to erect an altar.

Thus these Puritans came to Georgia.

The first to reach their new Georgia home were two families—Benjamin Baker and family and Samuel Bacon and family—and on December 5, 1752.

This church that they built was called Midway church, still standing. If Georgia has a shrine this is it.

These Puritans were members of the Congregational church. It was democratic in government, the will of the majority prevailing in its form of government.

These settlers came not as mendicants or paupers or adventurers, but as enterprising, industrious, liberty loving colonists.

A few years after founding their new home, when the community had become well established it is estimated that they numbered 350 white settlers, besides several times as many negroes.

It may be remarked that these Puritan settlers believed in slavery. It is authoritatively stated that they brought 536 slaves with them when they came to Georgia. They were loyal southerners during the War Between the States.

Prosperous Colony.

Here they prospered. They were remarkable for their thrift, courage, honesty and determination. At the beginning of the revolution St. John's parish possessed one-third of the wealth of the whole province of Georgia.

The principal communities were Sunbury and Midway. The town of Sunbury was on the Medway river and St. Catharine sound, about 12 miles from the ocean. The site was high and dry and sandy. It came to be a town of much commercial importance. It had a good harbor. As many as seven square-rigged vessels are known to have entered the port in a day. It shipped large quantities of rice, indigo, corn, etc. It was made a port of entry. By 1769 it was looked upon as a commercial rival of Savannah. Its importance grew until during the early years of the Revolution when its inhabitants numbered probably 1,000. It was a town of spacious homes and busy wharves. The St. John's people greatly preferred Sunbury to Savannah; among other reasons it was nearer.

The Midway church (and settlement) was ten miles from Sunbury, inland. It was on higher and pleasanter ground. Most of the Sunbury people had their church membership at Midway. Indeed, the history of St. John parish and that of Midway church are inseparable. It is said that Sunbury never had a church in it until long after the Revolution.

From the very beginning of our American Revolutionary struggle with England the St. John's parish zealously cast its lot and its fortunes on the side of freedom and independence. Between these immigrants from Dorchester and the distressed Bostonians existed not only ties of a common parentage, but also sympathies born of the same religious, social and political education. These Puritans, cherishing their disbelief in the established church, in the divine right of kings, and without memories or associations calculated to engender affection for the mother country, early took their stand in the struggle with no uncertain meaning.

Sir James Wright, the royal colonial governor of Georgia, advised the British ministry, that the rebel measures in Georgia "were to the mainly referred to the influence of the Puritan independent sect, who retaining a strong tincture of the republican or Oliverian principles have entered into an agreement among themselves to adopt both the resolutions and associations of the continental congress."

Because Savannah did not seem to be interested in revolutionary measures St. John parish adopted resolutions of non-intercourse with that town.

When a Georgia provincial congress in 1775 refused to take action against England St. John's parish withdrew, held a convention of its own, and sent Lyman Hall as its parish delegate to the continental congress. He made the long trip to Philadelphia by horseback. He was seated by that body as a "delegate from the parish of St. John in the colony of Georgia." St. John also sought an independent alliance with South Carolina, which had denounced Georgia as "an infamous colony," and "unworthy of the rights of freemen and inimicable to the liberties of this country."

Why Georgia Demurred.

There was a reason, however, why Georgia was slow in joining in the Revolution. She was the youngest of the English colonies and the pet of the crown. She had less in the way of grievances than any other colony. She had been greatly aided by the mother country.

However, before the close of the Revolution Georgia was as zealously for the Revolution and as completely enlisted in its behalf as any other colony.

But St. John took sides in the struggle from the very beginning. While as yet the cause of American freedom was involved in gloom and uncertainty they cast their lot with the fortunes of the revolutionists to live or die in their cause. When the Boston port was closed to commerce by England the indignation of those Georgia Puritans rose to fever heat. And St. John parish sent 200 barrels of rice to the Boston sufferers, her kinsmen in blood and in ideas of freedom.

When the British overran Georgia they were especially ruthless in their treatment of the St. John parish. Sunbury, the chief town, was so devastated that it was never able to recover from it. The revolution over, commerce and trade took a different course. The town languished for some years and finally disappeared all together. It is now one of the most famous of the "forgotten towns" of America.

And yet when the whole of the province of Georgia was subjugated by the British this town of Sunbury was the very last spot on her soil where the colonial flag was still unfurled—January 9, 1779. And yet, also, this Sunbury furnished two signers of the Declaration of Independence, two of Georgia's three signers. Lyman Hall was a physician residing in Sunbury, and its most influential citizen. And Button Gwinnett was Sunbury's local justice of the peace. United States Senators John Elliott and Alfred Cuthbert also lived at Sunbury, as did Governors Richard Howley and Nathan Brownson. It was also the birthplace of Masonry in Georgia.

For some 70 years after the Revolutionary War the St. John's district continued to be one of the finest agricultural sections of the state. But the War Between the States changed all this. Population and wealth took other directions.

The state of Georgia is immeasurably indebted to those original St. John settlers. From this Puritan blood have come many of the best known families in the state, men and women distinguished in many walks of life, who have adorned the state and the nation. Among many others that could be mentioned, the prominent Georgia names of Bacon, Baker, Stevens, Way, Elliott, Stewart, LeConte, Iverson, Quarterman, Tracy, Goulding, Mell, Winn and Osgood trace their origin right back to the parish of St. John.

They were themselves the descendants of the Ironsides of Cromwell.

From this blood have come four governors of the state, Howley, Brownson, Hall and Gwinnett; three United States senators, Elliott, Iverson, Bacon.

The number of bishops, ministers, chancellors, college professors, theological professors, foreign missionaries, lawyers, scientists, could be named and run into the hundreds.

Six of our Georgia counties are memorials to St. John parish. Hall, Gwinnett, Baker, Screven, Stewart and Liberty.

When the Revolution was over and independence had come the parishes of the state were changed to counties and the names of saints dropped and the counties renamed for English statesmen who had befriended the colonies in the great struggle—Burke, Richmond, Chatham, Camden, etc.; and the Church of England was disestablished, most of the people of the new state having come during the Revolution to look upon it as the persecuting arm of the British government.

However, in renaming the parishes an exception was made in the case of St. John parish. It was not named for any statesman or patriot, but was named Liberty county in honor of the noble stand it had taken for liberty and freedom from the very earliest days of the war.

Sunbury and Midway belong to St. John parish; and St. John parish belongs to the state of Georgia and the nation.

St. John parish! birthplace of freedoom; and noblest of all Georgia's parishes.

Poetic Thoughts on Mothers Day

To My Mother

(Died March 18, 1917.)

When I felt no one else did, would you have loved me,
Would you have held me in your arms and tenderly
Clasping the hands that fluttered wildly in the night,
Have whispered to a sad young heart, "Twill be all right?"

Could I have told you all my dreams; would you have heard
Them through and not have laughed at me, but with a word
Of cheer to make me feel that perhaps they'd come true,
Would you have helped me do the things I've longed to do?

Would you have been my pal and joined me in my play,
And been counsellor too; for skies sometimes turn gray?
My defender have been, when I had tried and failed,
When the world lashed and sneered, and under it I'd quailed?

I know you'd have been glad with me when I was gay,
And if I'd been happy, bright would have been your day.
For this is a mother's way, but I'll never know
Such a blessing as this . . . I lost you long ago.

A Flower for Mother

Boys, you're got a mother who waits somewhere today,
Her toil-worn hands are weary, those hands you often miss;
Maybe she's watching for you in a cottage far away,
Or maybe she is waiting in a better land than this.
So, boys, just wear a flower for dear old mother's sake,
She's the one who don't forget you no matter what the stake.

Remember, boys, how often, in the days that used to be,
She cured the childish heartaches, and sorrows that you knew,
And now she's sadly watching, through eyes that dimly see,
For a glimpse at memory's picture her dear love paints of you.
So boys, in sacred memory of that dear, old snowy head,
Wear a red rose if she's living, a white rose if she's dead.

The world is big and noisy, the pace is fast and hot,
You're gotten cold, and careless, and hardened in the mill;
But your mother—she is praying, and she forgets you not,
For her (and heaven bless her) you are just her baby still.
So, boys, remember mother, no matter where you be,
A red rose for affection, the white for memory.

Mother Love

How sacred, holy, 'tis to see
That Mother love will endless be,
From the first time she feels its breath
Until her eyelids close in death.
Her love, strong as a giant's strength
Goes to her child to the full length
Of its whole life, until its close
Still loves it in its death repose.

This love, pure as the whitest snow,
Has glorified our world we know.
In every nation, every clime,
We find this Mother love sublime
And full and strong as rivers stream.
'Tis like a lovely, heavenly dream
Brought by the angels from that shore
Where love and joy is evermore.

—DR. FRANK H. FIELD.

To Mother

Through the garden of memories, Mother,
I walk with you so dear,
And wear the reddest rose of all,
To show that you are here.

Memories of long, happy hours,
Teaching me every day,
Something of beauty unseen before,
And making light the way.

Complaining not in act or word,
When there's sorrow and despair,
When helpless longing wrings your heart,
When your cross is hard to bear.

Oh, time in its unending march
Has not been harsh on you,
It's brought sweet lines of tenderness
Around your eyes of blue.

And through your lovely spirit,
With infinite love divine,
Please give to me your radiant glow
Of love, oh Mother Mine.

A Departed Mother

By EDWIN HART HARKINS.

That dear face so sweet and lovely,
That dear soul so pure and kind,
Now an angel watching o'er me,
God's own pattern and design.

All to thee I owe thee Mother,
Riches of this earth I find,
Search I may, but find no other,
To fill thy place, O Mother mine.

On this day I remember thee Mother,
As all mortal souls should do,
For the generations that will follow,
All depend on Mothers like you.

Dear Little Mother

By BYRTHA B. HOLTZENDORFF.

Come close, my dear little mother,
I have something I want to say—
You are with me from morn to night,
And not just on Mother's Day.

Come just a wee bit closer,
I want you very near
To press a kiss on both dear cheeks,
One for each day of the year.

Unselfish, my dearest of mothers,
Devoting your years to others,
It seems to be your one great joy
To give your life to your girl and boy.

You gave to me along with life
The secret of true happiness—
Contentment, virtue, love through strife,
No fear of worldly loneliness.

Come close and linger, mother dear,
Your love seems ever new,
You guide us o'er the storms of life
As only mothers do.

Help me, dear, to be as you,
Patient, calm, to self be true.
Again I say I love you, dear,
On Mother's Day
And through the year.

To Mother

O mother mine, what memories
Today pass through my mind,
To bring the scenes of childhood back
From days long left behind.

How great the care, how deep the love,
That sought to teach me then
The beauty of true goodness,
The ugliness of sin.

How often weary were the feet
That led me in my youth
Away from dangerous pathways,
Toward the way of God and truth.

How quick the eyes that looked ahead,
Saw danger in my way;
How precious were the words that taught
My childish lips to pray.

How I treasure every heartache,
Each sigh, and all the tears
That were spent for me, dear mother,
Through those thoughtless childhood years.

Today you are no longer near,
Those days are past and gone,
But their lessons still are with me,
To linger on and on.

My Rose

Today the rose I wear is red
Next year it may be white;
Because the steps are heavy now
That once were quick and light.

Her vision is no longer clear
It once was very bright;
Her hair that once was raven black
Is now a snowy white.

I try to lend a helping hand
To make her burdens light;
For this I know 'twill not be long
Before my rose is white.

And while upon this earth I roam
In all the good I do;
I want no praises for myself
I owe it all to you.

And mother dear, I'll tell you this
Before we have to part;
That you have made the roses bloom
Within a wayward heart.

—JOHN T. McKIBBEN.

To My Mother

Essence of very God,
Personified in you—
Life, and Growth, and Love,
My Mother.

He had so much to do,
Earth, and sky above
Some Other

Needs must help Him through,
And who? But you,
My Mother.

Mrs. Underwood Urges That County Construct New Detention Home

Editor Constitution: I am sending you herewith a copy of a letter to the Fulton county board of commissioners which I was led to write by the article of Ralph Jones in your last Sunday's edition and your subsequent editorial.

Let me express my appreciation of Mr. Jones' ability as a writer and his and The Constitution's sense of civic righteousness.

RUTH N. (Mrs. E. M.) UNDERWOOD.
Atlanta, Ga., May 9, 1934.

Letter to Board.

Mrs. Underwood's letter to the board of county commissioners is as follows:

To the Chairman and Members of the Fulton County Commission:

Dear Sirs:

Two years ago, with a group of women from my church who were studying "Crime and Our Community," I visited, by special permission, among other institutions the detention home on Central avenue. The conditions there seemed to us horrible and inexcusable for a civilized community. We deplored it and discussed it and did nothing about it. My conscience has troubled me ever since.

With the report of the grand jury and the article by Mr. Ralph T. Jones in The Constitution of May 6, there seems to be opening up of some hope of a change for the better.

Those entrusted with the difficult and important problem of the lost dependent or delinquent children should be given every facility to properly meet their responsibilities.

To you, as the men selected to represent us in such matters, we look to take steps at once to remedy the deplorable situation.

I write as an individual citizen. The matter is being discussed by different groups in our city. Today at a civic study class to which I belong, the subject of the report of the grand jury was brought up.

Several persons have asked to associate themselves with me in this letter. We ask that the present detention home on Central avenue be abolished and a suitable establishment be provided on county owned property.

My friends and I will appreciate being informed of the developments in the matter and as citizens we pledge our aid in any way our efforts may be effective to change the situation that you may suggest to us.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. E. M. UNDERWOOD,
MRS. PAUL ACHERLY,
And Five Other Atlanta Women.

Questions the Wisdom Of Prohibiting Movies Like "Elysian Fields"

Editor Constitution: After reviewing the picture, "Elysian Fields," a few days ago, the board of censors decided it could not be shown in the city of Atlanta.

We may stroll through the labyrinths of bookshelves in the Carnegie library here in Atlanta, and no doubt find something that is objectionable to many, but why say to the masses that such and such cannot be read? You can stroll through the Louvre in Paris, with all of its labyrinths of knowledge and works of art and maybe there you will find some that is objectionable to certain connoisseurs of art and literature. For hours we could gaze upon the great works of art and literature in the Louvre and other buildings in Paris and most of us Americans would find something to criticize, but that does not necessarily make these masterpieces any less renowned by the really great and erudite scholars of art and literature.

Throughout the European nation there are works of art in the cities and parks and the people of these countries do not take umbrage to the master hand of the artist and his skill! HENRY GRADY CROUCH.

Constitution's Plea For Better Cotton Is Endorsed by Adams

Editor Constitution: I wish to commend you for your most excellent and timely article in last Sunday's Constitution on "New Cotton Conditions." I think it strikes the keynote exactly.

Unless we improve the quality of our short staple cotton I do not see how we can continue to grow cotton in Georgia. The mills have come to distinguish between the better grades and the lower grades and are willing to pay a higher price for the longer staple.

Harvesting machines move the population of the United States 10 miles west each year for 50 years because they can be used to better advantage on the large prairie farms of the middle west. Now, with one man on a four-row planter able to plant 100 acres in Texas and Oklahoma, and to cultivate it with a four-row cultivator and pick more than a bale of cotton an hour with a mechanical cotton picker, it seems to me that we can not compete with them at all on the same grade of cotton they grow. One Georgia farmer does well if he plants and cultivates 15 acres of cotton and picks it over a period of two months.

I heartily agree with you that our only salvation is in a better grade of cotton.

G. C. ADAMS,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

"Half-Gods Must Go," Should Be the Slogan Of South, Says Georgian

Editor Constitution: Here in the southland, recovery, as you have often observed, is wonderful. Its prosperous people are also full of wonder. They are wondering why there is a single discordant note concerning the conduct of affairs. They wonder that, snatched from the very brink of the abyss, we have come so far away from it in so short a time. They cry out to the carpers "Oh ye of little faith, of faltering courage, of weakness and weaker memories."

The southlander has heard before of benefits forgot, of the disastrous effects of dwindling perspective upon past blessings; but they rack their memories and search the records of history in vain for a parallel in flagrancy. They think Puck himself would be at a loss for words today, that the group he scathed and scorned were wise men, when contrasted with those of today, who a year ago gave civilization so brief a span in which to complete its holocaust.

Asked for a campaign slogan for the ensuing congressional elections, the southlanders would suggest that—not in timid, colorless handwriting on the wall, but in boxcar letters, that all who run and vote may read, you just say "Half-Gods Must Go." Too much at stake now for any opposing course, or vacillation. Then will all the country recrudesce as has the south.

—GEORGE E. GARY.

Moods

I am a man of moods.
Today a good world thrills me;
Tomorrow it is filth, comprehending me.
Sad contemplations swallow me up.
And I see the whole of time, matter and space.
Rolled into one present moving moment;
And mass and moment, comprehending all,
Moving to irrevocable ends!
There is no heaven, nor hell, earth does not give!
Then tolerance overwhelms me.
There is no evil—only necessity.
No enemies lurk to destroy me;
Or who am I to understand—
A fleeting conscious grain of dust?
But why should I be cast down;
For I am part and substance of all force and matter?
None are above me; none beneath;
"I, myself, am heaven and hell.
Not a breeze that blows,
Nor a ray that shines,
And all that God or nature wrought,
Or the hand of man, but is mine!
There is no room for little schemes,
In such a plan.
Nor hate shall mar,
Nor jealousy dim my star!

Nudism Runs Contrary To Customs of Centuries In Measuring Morals

Editor Constitution: Although I did not go to see those nudist films, nevertheless the high points and low points of those nude pictures reached the ears of almost everyone.

Young folks talked it around library tables and elsewhere, making a joke of it and breaking down modesty.

You can quote verses from the Bible either in favor of nude culture or against it. But the Christian nations have been taking up collections for a hundred years or more to send missionaries to heathen countries to shame and educate heathen to wear more clothing than the breech-cloth and short skirt and to clothe their children.

Adults in all heathen countries wear some clothing, except women in one tribe in South America.

Now the Christian nations are outstripping the heathen. No doubt our morals seem but fads to heathen which we are proving them to be.

Germany has a million nudists. Austria has nudists in large numbers, plus the world's gayest city, Vienna. France has many nudists plus gay Paris.

This nude fad runs contrary to the customs of the centuries in measuring morals.

America changed administrations and climbed out of the valley of the depression in high gear, due to modest homes, giving the mental balance to rectify conditions.

But the nudist fad, slow to start in America, is gaining fast, very fast. Nudist colonies are now organized in 17 states, ready to start or already practicing nude culture; and unless we get busy and ask congress to stop nude culture and do stop it, we, too, will become a nation of discontented, unbalanced back-to-animal-nature fadists that no kind of government can satisfy. JAMES A. CRAWFORD.

GRAND OPERA WEEK IS POSTPONED AGAIN

Notice Posted on Outside of Closed Erlanger; Ponselle's Illness Blamed.

Further postponement of the announced appearance of the New York Grand Opera organization at the Erlanger theater became known Saturday when a notice to this effect appeared on the outside of the theater, which is now closed.

No statement has been received from either the theater management or the managers of the opera company, though it is understood that both Jack Allen, who was said to be lessee of the theater, and Maurice Frank, manager of the opera company, are in New York.

The opera engagement here was first announced for the two weeks beginning April 23. It was postponed, at that time, for three weeks, the delay being attributed to illness of Carmela Ponselle, one of the principal singers with the company.

The notice posted Saturday constitutes the second postponement and again cites continued illness of Miss Ponselle as the reason. It is addressed to those who purchased tickets for the season in advance and reads as follows:

"To holders of grand opera tickets: "Due to the continued illness of Miss Ponselle it is necessary to again postpone the opera. Write

New York Grand Opera Company, care Greater Show World,
1545 Broadway,
Suite 403,
New York, N. Y.,

regarding future date or refund if you prefer, giving number of tickets and their seat numbers."

'BRAIN TRUST' DRAWS TUGWELL DEFENSE

NRA Counsel Addresses American Law Institute in Capital.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—Asserting that the NRA is a counter-revolutionary movement, Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the recovery agency, pleaded tonight for "an effort to bring planning and direction and the restraints of law and order into the adventurous anarchy of commerce."

Speaking at the annual dinner of the American Law Institute, Richberg strongly defended "a brain trust" as a "menace to every selfish interest that thrives under stupid and dishonest government," once millions of people have been educated to understand what the professors are talking about.

Before the NRA became a political issue, Richberg said, every attempt "to increase the orderliness and security of human relations" was not branded with the stigma of radicalism and revelation. Some years ago, he added, it seemed desirable to employ learned students and teachers of the law to carry forward such an endeavor.

"The formation of a brain trust to advance such a project," he said, ". . . seemed to meet' with general approval."

Then, with a touch of sarcasm, he went on:

"It is the rash, impatient man, who wants to see better government in operation before he dies, who arouses immediate and bitter hostility."

Police and Firemen benefit funds. Money will be waiting for you through the Golden Rule Plan.

GREEK BOYS AND GIRLS WILL HEAR THEODOROS

The meeting is sponsored by members of Ahepa, Atlanta Chapter No. 1. It is for the purpose of outlining to the children of Greek parents their duties to their parents, and particularly to the country where their parents have opportunities to providing them with many advantages.

Besides Mr. Theodoros, who is a federal employe in Washington, other prominent speakers will be present.

FOES BALK HOUSE VOTE ON KY. TAX MEASURE

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 12.—(AP) Opponents of the proposed state income tax bill forced adjournment of the Kentucky house until Monday afternoon, when the measure is expected to be brought up for passage.

Assignment of the 3 per cent sales tax bill to a committee, and a prompt report so that it can be given first reading Monday is an aim of supporters of the administration tax program.

The senate, unable to act on revenue bills until they are sent from the house, also was in adjournment over the week-end.

NEW DEAL IS TERMED WAR AGAINST MISERY

Tugwell Addresses Graduating Class of Oberlin College.

OBERLIN, Ohio, May 12.—(AP)—Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, told the graduating class of Oberlin College tonight that the American people are engaged in "a war against misery, against poverty, against human stupidity."

He called the New Deal "the first great national counter-offensive in the war against human miserry" and declared "it is the essence of the New Deal that its practitioners are honestly trying to find ways to establish the security and abundance to which our resources entitle Americans. And we ask for tolerance on the plea that we are preparing the way for the more expert work which you may do."

Tugwell said college students and the American people "cannot escape the realization that something rather appalling has befallen our civilization, when the plenty which we are so abundantly equipped to produce automatically causes nation-wide misery, suffering, destitution, and hopelessness, whether it has come home to you through personal privation or only through observation."

"We all of us have to face this terrible and baffling paradox together and to find the means for its resolution."

The "old order" of business, economics, and politics "became calamitous to the entire nation" and the people decided that something had to be done, he said.

Read These Easy Rules

1. Any man, woman, boy or girl living in Georgia and adjoining states, also Mississippi and the Virginias, who is not in the employ of SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR or THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION or a member of an employe's family, may win a prize except ANYONE WHO IN ANY CONTEST HAS WON AS MUCH AS $100.00 IN CASH OR MERCHANDISE.

2. Starting at Atlanta, Ga., mark a continuous Path of one or more lines in the "dots" of any City or Town in which the letter "N" appears, one or more times, without once crossing or touching the line of your Path at any Point. Go in any direction from Atlanta, up or down, sideways, diagonally or any way you like. Finish your Path at Atlanta, but include it once only in your count. Players must submit their maps with total number of "N" Cities visited. The name of any City not having the letter "N" visible does not count. Neatness does not count.

3. You may mark your Path over land or water and through names of Cities not containing a letter "N." Do not include the "dot" of any "N" City in your Path more than once. All you have to do to win first prize is connect more "N" Cities, in accordance with these rules, than anyone else.

That is, if two or more Players should tie in submitting the same number of "N" Cities connected in their continuous Path, the first two or more prizes will be reserved for them and will be awarded in the order of the best answers of such Players to another larger map. Should ties still exist, the one who has connected the largest number of Cities and whose Path measures the greatest number of inches, will be declared the winner. Then, should ties still exist, identical prizes will be awarded those tied.

6. Any Player whose name is on record on or before closing date for entries, November 10th, 1934, is privileged to submit a second qualifying order for the Schedule "A" prizes, and by doing so will be eligible to win two cash prizes. Thus, if a Player wins a prize and has sent a second qualifying order, he will win AN ADDITIONAL CASH PRIZE equal in amount to the next prize in standing to the prize already won.

7. SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR is owned and published by THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION and THE CONSTITUTION, the South's Greatest Daily and Sunday Newspaper guarantees fair and impartial treatment to all Players throughout. Players are understood by the fact of their entry to agree to accept the published award of Critics as final.

Danielsville Woman's Club Moves Into New Home, Realizes Dream

When the Danielsville Woman's Club was organized in May, 1921, it was the dream of these 18 charter members to some day possess a home they could call their own. This dream has at last become a reality. However, it has not materialized without much thinking and planning, as well as perseverance. The first step toward the ownership of the clubhouse was taken in November, 1930, when a building lot was purchased. In December, 1932, a committee was appointed to investigate the possibilities of erecting a building. Through generous contributions of citizens of the community as well as club members, a building fund was created. From time to time additions were made to this.

In March, 1933, even though our building fund was insufficient, but the membership having much faith and a willingness to work, a building committee was appointed. This committee was composed of Mesdames W. E. Burroughs, R. H. Gordon, J. N. Griffeth, J. T. Murray and R. J. Sorrells. This enthusiastic group submitted plans immediately which were approved, with authorization to begin actual work on the building.

The first meeting was held in the new home in May, 1933, which was the twelfth anniversary of the club. This was indeed a happy occasion for the entire membership, which had now grown to 33. A spirit of joy was prevalent as the hostesses ushered their guests into the main assembly room, then invited them to inspect the kitchenette.

The assembly room is very attractive with walls and ceiling of Georgia pine and a floor of pine, finished to preserve the natural beauty of the wood. The foundation of the building and the entrance are made of Georgia granite. The grounds have been landscaped to form an attractive setting for the club home. Club members were aided in the completion of the equipment of these two rooms by merchants and friends of Danielsville and Athens. We have also received aid from the civil works administration in the form of labor and material.

This clubhouse was erected at an approximate cost of $600. Much credit for this accomplishment is due to the untiring efforts of this committee under the leadership of the president, Mrs. W. D. Graham, whose zeal and courage was an inspiration under all conditions. This entire project originated and became a reality during her administration. Each member finds real the joy of a dream fulfilled in the possession of a home that really belongs to Danielsville women.

April meeting of Danielsville Woman's Club was held at the clubhouse and hostesses were Mrs. W. D. Graham and Mrs. Edward Huff. As president Mrs. Graham presided, and Miss Ruth Tabor, lighting expert of the Georgia Power Company, presented slides and lectured on garden lighting. Mrs. Graham presented as distinguished guests Mrs. J. W. Gholston, Mrs. W. W. Armistead, president tenth district, who gave helpful suggestions and joined Mrs. Frazier Wise, president of Crawford Woman's Club, in an invitation to attend the district meeting at Crawford; Mrs. H. G. Bannister, of Ila, urged members to attend the Madison county federation, and Mrs. H. H. Hampton, president of county federation, gave this same invitation. Other visitors were Mesdames T. W. Hinton, W. H. Rowe, C. S. Rowe, H. J. Whitehead, from Comer; Miss Susie Sorrells, Colbert; Mrs. Mell Blanchard, Crawford; Miss Lucile Pearson, Cartersville; Mrs. W. O. Huff, Bowman; Mrs. Claud Landers and Miss Mary Hope, Colbert-Danielsville.

As this meeting marked the close of the club year, tribute was paid the president, Mrs. W. D. Graham, for the outstanding achievements of her administration, especially for the new clubhouse erected. An impressive memorial service for Mrs. James Lee Moseley Boggs was conducted by Mrs. C. E. Adams, and Miss Lucy Gholston sang "Taps." In addition to the garden flowers, an Arizona cypress was planted on the club grounds and dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Boggs by her sisters, Mesdames D. A. Moseley and R. H. Gordon. Members of the junior club present were Martha Graham, Louise Bond and Christine Gordon.

State President of Federation Issues Message to Clubwomen

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, issues her first message to clubwomen since her election to office in April.

By Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, President of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

My dear Clubwomen: This is my first opportunity to speak to those of you who were not present in Atlanta for the convention and to tell you how very deeply I appreciate the honor which your representatives conferred upon me. There is so much which I could say of my sense of unfitness and inadequacy for the tasks and responsibilities incident to the office, but I am trying to forget that and to get courage and confidence for the duties which lie ahead by reminding myself that nothing would tend to bring more of growth and development than service shoulder to shoulder with the Georgia clubwomen who, through the years, have proved so loyal to ideals, so understanding of community problems, and so unselfish in devotion to the welfare of others.

It is only through contact with you, the clubwomen of Georgia, that I can hope to develop any measure of that poise, judgment, and insight into problems which you have reason to expect of your president. I have never understood before the true significance of the editorial "we"; but let me assure you that, in the realest sort of sense, we, you and I together assume the responsibilities of direction in the Georgia federation. Therein lies my courage.

The scope of the activities of the women's clubs has been subject to progressive variation, changing to meet changed conditions and changed ideals. In the early years, when the delightful self-culture motive was the predominant one, club life was pleasant but not completely satisfying. This spirit of discontent, set aflame by a vision of the inescapable responsibility of God-given power as the mothers of men, brought to women the knowledge that for the best development of the youth in any home it was necessary to develop children in all homes; that physically, mentally, and spiritually each child was the product of the home, and of the school, and of the street. Women clearly realized that to be proper mother to one child was necessarily to become mother to all children. So, from the individual homes, the lines of activity perforce reached out to embrace anything which affected community life as the training ground for youth. Much has been done to provide health, safety, recreation, education, and good and happy living for our people.

Yet change was not done with us. Along came the added duty of citizenship. Sought or unsought the duty was clear and training for citizenship and the proper fulfillment of all its duties has since taken an important part in our club program. On the whole we have become good citizens, cautious in forming opinions but courageous in action under the stimulus of conscientious judgments. Now, we thought, surely our program is complete; our club life has become stable and settled. But had it?

Cataclysmic changes in our political life, our social structure, and our economic system have brought new and acute problems in adjustment. A new America is in the making. New political philosophies require our study; new social theories must be examined and then adopted or discarded; new economic and industrial conditions must be met in such a way that our people can look forward to a safe and happy life; new educational and cultural standards will have to be set up. We ask ourselves what part women's clubs have in all this and we know before we ask that they must be contributing factors in reaching sane, just, and workable solutions. Women have always determined in large part the cultural life of our communities; education has developed pretty much as we demanded; the social structure has certainly felt our influence; political life and economic welfare, we are now told, are up to the women. We have every right to refuse to assume more than our share of the responsibility, but working intelligently with forward-looking, public-spirited men we can do much to create an America better than we had dreamed. We dare not fail this newest challenge.

Again, I want to express my appreciation of the confidence you have have shown in me. There is no office within the power of Georgia women to bestow which carries with it so much of responsibility; which brings so great a reward if the work be conscientiously and successfully carried forward; nor so much of deserved censure if the tasks are neglected and the work undone. But the same is true of club leadership wherever it is found. We dare not fail! We cannot fail!

D. A. R. Better Films Chairman Issues Message in Today's Column

Mrs. W. H. Hightower, of Thomaston, state chairman of better films for Georgia division D. A. R., issues an important message to better films chairmen and chapter regents in which she states:

"Much to our delight, congress voted to retain the national Better Films Committee, in spite of the recommendation of the national board for its discontinuance. Now it is for us, the state and chapter chairmen, to prove that the confidence placed in us by the membership of the national society is justfied.

"Our whole work is based on the postcard review, issued weekly by our national chairman—the cards sent for each of you by your state chairman last fall are now exhausted. It is therefore necessary for each chapter chairman or the regent of each chapter to send immediately to Mrs. Mildred Lewis Russel, 7110 Hillside avenue, in Hollywood, Cal., 25 self-addressed postal cards in order that you may continue to receive these reviews without interruption. The review will be printed on the blank side of these cards and one will be returned to you each week.

"This service is open not only to D. A. R. members but to anyone sufficiently interested to send the self-addressed cards. It is absolutely necessary that each chapter receive at least one review. Last year Georgia was the first state to report 100 per cent subscription to the postcard review. Do not delay—send your cards now."

Georgia Clubwomen Will Attend Hot Springs Meet

Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will be represented at the general federation council which meets in Hot Springs, Ark., May 21-26, by the new director, Mrs. J. W. Gholston; the past director, Mrs. W. W. Stark; the new state president, Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, and the past state president, Mrs. A. P. Brantley. The installation of Mrs. Gholston as director for Georgia will take place during the meeting. Having adopted the three-year plan at Seattle in 1932, this administration of the general federation starts on its last year at this council.

Plans are going forward for the entertainment of notable clubwomen and distinguished speakers, with the Arlington hotel as headquarters. The sessions, opening May 21, with the official dinner and closing with play day on May 21, will be replete with worthwhile programs, interspersed with breakfast conferences, club institutes, parliamentary drills, departmental noon-round tables, all mixed with the oil of sweet music and sprinkled with the piquant sauce of good fellowship which will make a gathering long to be remembered.

The month of May in Uncle Sam's first national park is one of the most ideal of the year—the pine-clad Ouachitas, flowering valleys, thermal waters and concrete highways beckon the traveler from every clime. Arkansas clubwomen extend a most cordial invitation to send delegates to this council and assure all that they anticipate with keenest zest the privilege of welcoming their guests to America's playground and convention center.

There will be a 15-minute daily broadcast during the council with speakers arranged by Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president. On Monday evening the Arkansas federation has issued invitations to the board of directors and distinguished guests for dinner at the Arlington. Delegates will be welcomed also, but should make reservations and secure their tickets by writing to Mrs. David Burbauer, 705 Quapaw avenue, Hot Springs. Mrs. W. F. Lake, general federation director and chairman of the local council board, will preside. An open-air pageant in the park will follow. At 9:30 a reception will honor the board, delegates and visitors in the Arlington. Mrs. S. H. Mann, of Forrest City, Ark., Arkansas federation president, will head the receiving line with Mrs. Lake.

Mrs. E. V. Carter, chairman of transportation for Georgia federation, announces for the general federation council meeting at Hot Springs, Ark., the round-trip rate of $24.50 from Atlanta, with $4.25 each way for a lower Pullman berth. This rate is given on the identification certificate plan. There are through sleepers to Memphis on trains leaving Atlanta at 4:15 in the afternoon. Trains are changed at Memphis unless there is a sufficiently large delegation to warrant a through sleeper. One train arrives at Hot Springs at 12:20 and another at 1:20 in the afternoon. For further information write to Mrs. E. V. Carter, 868 Springdale road, Atlanta.

Instructions Given For Yearbook

As space is limited and club reports cannot be used in full, the district puresidents are urged to compile reports in a concise form and have the final copy typewritten.

Copy must be in the hands of the executive secretary, Mrs. Harvie Jordan, by May 20, so that the manuscript for the book may go to be printed by June 1. For inclusion in the book, reports of departments and committees should be compiled from the local clubs, condensed and sent in typed. That the directories of districts may be correct, revisions in the district executive boards and changes in club presidents must be sent to headquarters, Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta. Full co-operation with these requests will be appreciated by the committee and will greatly facilitate placing the new book in the hands of Georgia clubwomen.

W. C. T. U. Editor Declares Sunday To Be Red Letter Day

By M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD, Of Macon, State W. C. T. U. Editor.

Today is a red letter day to members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union on three counts: First, it is Mother's Day—a beautiful reminder that every day is Mother's Day—that we should each "honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee"—that those who are mothers should so live that your children in years to come will have just cause to "rise up and call you blessed." Like Frances Willard we each "thank God for my mother as for no other gift of His bestowing." For some the ideals for which mother lived, the white flower may blossom with new meaning. Certain values she held to be eternal. Honesty—"never take a penny that is not yours." Industry—"my greatest happiness is work." Patience, endurance, chastity, unselfishenss. For her, faith and righteousness were one, standing an unshaken rock in the muddy waters of change. No other special day is of more interest than Mother's Day.

Second, today marks the end of the Cleveland six membership campaign in the nation. Since "to multiply the army is to speed the victory," unions and members are asked to add six members today to the W. C. T. U., which is truly called "organized mother love" and honor a faithful mother by making her a Cleveland six member. Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, of Cochran, state membership chairman, asks that every new member, not already reported, be reported early this week. It is expected that a number of Cleveland six members will be made before today has passed. Of course it is always in order to join the W. C. T. U. by signing the total abstinence pledge and paying the annual dues of $1 even after the Cleveland six campaign has ended, for we can:

Work for total abstinence,
Consecrate our lives,
Teach the evils of drink,
Unite our forces for we will not quit until the liquor traffic quits.

Third, today is temperance Sunday. The lesson stresses the relation of temperance to good citizenship. There is no place for the liquor traffic in loving "the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

No mother has ever lifted her grateful heart to God in thanksgiving for what the liquor traffic did for her son of her daughter. Although so far as known there was nothing intentional in its choice, nevertheless, the selection of Mother's Day as the date of the second quarterly temperance lesson for 1934 is at least not without impromptu significance.

Five months of the relegalized liquor traffic in many states have passed, drunkenness is steadily increasing, reckless driving induced by available liquor is shocking even the wets, while high-pressure liquor salesmanship by radio, newspaper advertising and electric signs, is entrapping new drinkers who would have passed any number of speakeasies in prohibition days without the slightest solicitation.

Once more thousands of mothers throughout America are facing a problem of drinking sons and daughters. Surely Mother's Day should not go without emphasis upon this challenging fact. Mothers should be on guard since the raw material is the boy—the girl; the factory is the saloon or place where liquor is dispensed, and the product—the drunkard.

The greatest opportunity for service lies just ahead of the W. C. T. U. For the first time in its history we are paralleling public thought. Always in the past the lines of our endeavor have cut across public opinion with more or less friction to the work. But today all are advocating alcohol education. True the definition of this education varies in the minds of its advocates. To the wet contingent "true temperance" which means "modification" is the goal. To the W. C. T. U. and all drys "total abstinence from the things harmful" is the slogan.

But even so, the trend of public thought is in favor of alcohol education and the W. C. T. U. is improving this opportunity. The really sincere people who did not wholly approve the eighteenth amendment do approve alcohol education and are anxious for the W. C. T. U. to enlarge its efforts in this particular field. The P.-T. A., the woman's clubs, the missionary societies and church and educational groups advise carrying on alcohol education. Miss Bertha Rachel Palmer's "Sylabus of Alcohol Education" is being widely used all over the country. In Missouri alone 20,000 copies are in the hands of teachers and leaders.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, addressed a union congregation at Hardwick Sunday evening and organized a W. C. T. U. the next day. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Commerce, did fine

Engagement of Miss Virginia Cox And Mr. Nall Announced Today

Of interest throughout Georgia, Tennessee and Ohio is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Ben H. Cox of the engagement of their daughter, Hiss Ellen Virginia Cox, to Wilbur Blair Nall, of Atlanta.

The bride-elect's father is the son of the late Benjamin H. Cox and Emma Burdsal Cox, of Cincinnati, and the brother of Rutherford H. Mrs. Johnson Makes Request For U. D. C. Scrapbook Clippings

By MRS. J. L. McCORD, of Atlanta, Editor of Georgia Division U. D. C.

Mrs. Harry T. Johnson, of Griffin, chairman of scrapbook for Georgia Division, U. D. C., makes an appeal to chapters in the state to send clippings for the scrapbook, as this is one of the star chapter requirements. Mrs. Johnson writes:

"So few of the chapter presidents recognize the real significance of the division scrapbook. Your custodian of the scrapbook is unable to estimate the value of the space generously given by the press, presenting the constructive work of our general organization and placing before the chapters a fair example of our local and state work. In every community your local newspaper is willing and ready to publish accounts of meetings, patriotic projects and U. D. C. accomplishments.

May is the month in which most of the chapters elect officers. Your custodian asks that you please send her a list of names, clipped from your local papers, of your newly elected officers for the scrapbook. Please send pictures of leaders, of ceremonies and exhibits of relics, which will prove of historic value as the years go by. Pictures often tell stories more vividly than do printed words. One of the requirements to become a star chapter is that you send one or more articles for the division scrapbook."

O'Keefe Junior High.

Living pictures of dainty misses who stepped out of their frames and danced the stately minuet, antebellum dames in bustle and hoopskirt who moved sedately across the stage, characters from the gay nineties who paraded boldly with what their age considered a daredevil air, constituted a delightful part of the prgram given at the last regular session of the O'Keefe Junior High P.-T. A. held Wednesday. Music accompanied them and more modern characters followed in procession with none more amusing than the very short-skirted woman of the late twenties. Ending the review were a half dozen boys and girls who modeled correct sports clothing for morning graduation. The exhibit was planned by Miss Daisy Daniels, home economics teacher, and a portion of the costumes was made by the ninth grade clothing class. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. J. A. Beall, president.

Enrollment of Children for Vacation Reading Clubs Urged by P.-T. A. Group

Mrs. Sam Asher, reading and library service chairman of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers, called a meeting of all chairmen last week at Rich's conference room. The council chairman urged renewed activity in vacation recreational reading clubs, sponsored by the boys' and girls' department through Miss Mary Frances Cox, head of the department.

Enrollment of children for vacation reading clubs begins at the Carnegie library and the branches, June 2 and continues until July 1. Complete records must be in by September 12, and children are urged to enroll at the earliest possible moment so that they will finish their course of reading in sufficient time. Each child who joins the vacation reading club will be given a list from which he should read 10 books. If any of the books are not in, the librarians will substitute, and these will be given the same credits. Each child will record his reading on this list given him by the librarian. When 10 books have been read the child's name goes on the honor roll at the library and a certificate will be awarded after school opens.

All parent-teacher presidents are requested to report name, address, and phone number of their chairmen immediately to Mrs. Sam Asher, 1296 North Morningside drive, N. E. Miss Josie Slocumb, supervisor of elementary grades, spoke on reading that centered the child's special interest. Miss Mary Frances Cox, head of the boys' and girls' department of the Carnegia library, announced that lists of books for the first grade could be secured at the library, this being an innovation for lower grades. She also announced that there would be a radio talk on children's reading May 18 at 4:30 o'clock over WSB. All chairmen are urged to listen in.

Mrs. George H. Slappey, state chairman of library service, emphasized closer co-operation among all county groups of the state. Mrs. Dick Longino, president of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers, brought greetings to the group. All chairmen recommend that parents co-operate with the library agencies as librarians are willing and anxious to be of service in guiding the reading done by children. "The most complete co-operation of home, school and library exerts a powerful influence on the reading habits of young people," said Mrs. Slappey.

Miss Mary Margaret Quinn, of Barnesville, whose photograph is made from a sketch by Haral Arenbach.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 12.—Important among announcements of engagements today is that made by Mr. and Mrs. John Hollofield Quinn, of Barnesville, of their daughter, Miss Mary Margaret Quinn, to Hugh Montgomery Arnold, of Barnesville, formerly of Newnan. The wedding of this popular young couple will be a brilliant event of the early summer, taking place at the home of the bride-elect's parents on Stafford avenue in Barnesville June 14.

The bride-elect is one of the most beautiful and charming members of the younger set in Barnesville. She is a graduate of Gordon College and attended Wesleyan College in Macon, where she majored in chemistry.

Miss Quinn is a member of families prominent in affairs of state and nation for generations. No family has contributed more brilliant and capable men and women to society than that of the Harrises. Her mother is the former Miss Elizabeth Harris, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Harris, of Cedartown, Ga. The late United States Senator William J. Harris was Mrs. Quinn's brother, and other brothers are Professor James C. Harris, president of Georgia Academy for the Deaf at Cave Spring; General Peter C. Harris, of Washington, D. C., who served as adjutant general of the United States army during the World War; Dr. Seale Harris, noted surgeon of Birmingham, Ala., and Major Hunter Harris, of Athens, retired army officer. Mrs. Della Harris Garrett, of Cedartown is Miss Quinn's aunt, and her only sister is Miss Julia Wheeler Quinn, of Barnesville.

On her paternal side Miss Quinn is descended from families prominent in social and political worlds also. Her father's parents were Mr. and Mrs. John A. Quinn, of Sandersville, Ga., and his uncle is Dr. Horatio Beauregard Hollofield, of Washington, retired physician, who was for a long number of years in government service. Miss Quinn has enjoyed wide social popularity over the state, having attended commencement dances at the University of Georgia and at Georgia Tech. She has also been the recipient of delightful social attentions upon the occasions of visits to relatives in the nation's capital.

Mr. Arnold is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Sims Arnold, of Memphis, Tenn. He received his early education at Tech High school in Atlanta, and at Georgia Military Academy at College Park. He later entered Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, Ala., from which institution he graduated. Mr. Arnold is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and was prominent in college activities.

The bridegroom-elect's aunts are Mrs. Edward T. Owens, Mrs. Warren Nelson, Mrs. John Cates, Mrs. Freeman Herring, Mrs. Charles Farmer, Mrs. Millard Farmer, all of Newnan, and Mrs. Leonard James, of Atlanta. Mr. Arnold is connected with the United States coast and geodetic survey, with headquarters in Barnesville.

Miss Marguerite Young Weds Mr. McConnell at Church Rites

Miss Marguerite Young became the bride of Herrick Zenous McConnell, of Orlando, Fla., at a beautiful ceremony at the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church at 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Rev. John Rogers Hooten, of Greenwood, S. C., uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Samuel A. Tinkler, pastor of the church.

The soft glow of tall, white tapers furnished the only light for the ceremony, and floor baskets of calla lilies placed before a background of smilax, palms and plumosa, featured the decoration. Candelabra holding lighted tapers were interspersed among the greenery. The pews occupied by members of the families were marked by clusters of calla lilies tied with tulle.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Susie Reese Kennedy, organist, rendered a program of appropriate selections, including "Cantilene Nuptiale," Dubois; "I Love Thee," Grieg; "Romance," Rubinstein, and "Serenade," by Schubert. Robert Mell sang "Because" and "At Dawning."

Miss Elizabeth Young, maid of honor, and Mrs. J. Forrest Cole, matron of honor, both sisters of the bride, the bridesmaids, Miss Lillian Thrasher and Miss Mildred McConnell, of Daytona Beach, Fla., were gowned alike in pastel shades of organdy, fashioned on fitted lines and flaring below the knees in circular ruffles. They wore large hats of organdy matching their gowns and carried bouquets in pastel shades tied with tulle which matched their gowns in shade. Rufus K. Smith, of Gainesville, acted as best man and the ushers included Eugene Havek, Walter Williams and Ben Hargrove.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, A. R. Young, was lovely in her gown of pink lace, which was closely fitted to her figure, flaring at the knees to add fullness to the skirt, which extended into a slight train. She wore pink tinted sandals and a picture hat of pink lace and horsehair braid. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses showered with valley lilies.

Out-of-town guests present included Mrs. J. R. Hooten, of Greenwood, S. C.; Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Rainer, of McDonough; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Carmichael, of Monticello; Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Hooten and Mrs. W. T. Simpson, of Huntersville, N. C.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Young entertained members of the wedding party at their home on Parkway drive. Mrs. Young was becomingly gowned in pale blue lace worn with white hat and accessories. Her shoulder spray was of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell left by motor for Orlando, Fla., where they will reside. For traveling Mrs. McConnell donned an ensemble of navy blue with navy hat and matching accessories.

Dinner will be served at 6 o'clock and Miss Estelle Turner, the president, will preside.

Miss Carlton and Mr. Barber Wed At All Saints' Chapel Ceremony

Miss Jane Carlton, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Carlton, became the bride of Edwin T. Barber at a beautiful ceremony quietly solemnized at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the chapel of All Saints' Episcopal church. Dr. W. W. Memminger, rector of the church, read the marriage service, which was witnessed by a small company of friends and relatives.

The floral decorations in the chapel were simple and effectively arranged. Groups of giant kentia palms and cybodium ferns were banked on either side of the altar. Arising from the foliage were gold candelabra holding tall white waxen tapers, the bases of the candelabra caught with clusters of white peonies. The gold altar vases were filled with handsome white peonies and garlands of southern smilax festooned the front of the altar. White satin cushions were placed for the bridal couple to kneel upon for the taking of the vows.

Miss Martha Fowle and Miss Leila Camp acted as bridesmaids and were the bride's only attendants. Miss Fowle was becomingly gowned in a semi-tailored model of rose beige crepe, the bodice cut square at the neckline, and the long sleeves featuring a slit from the shoulder to the wrist. A brown taffeta belt added a contrasting note, and worn with the gown was a wide-brimmed brown straw hat caught with a cluster of gardenias in shades of rose beige. Her shoes and gloves were also of dark brown, and gracing her shoulder was a spray of talisman rosebuds and swainsona.

Miss Camp chose for the wedding a gown of canary yellow crepe, fashioned with the modish high neckline and short puffed sleeves. Her wide-brimmed leghorn hat was banded in brown velvet ribbon, and her shoes and gloves were in blond tones. A shoulder cluster of swainsona and talisman rosebuds completed her costume.

The bride entered the chapel with her father, W. B. Carlton. A. C. Frazier Jr. acted as Mr. Barber's best man.

Turquoise blue crepe was employed to fashion the bride's smart costume. The neckline was cut square, and adorning the bodice was a double row of narrow pleated ruffles extending from the shoulder to the waist in V shape. The three-quarter length sleeves were trimmed with pleated ruffles and the skirt gained fullness by means of pleats let into the front. Introducing a contrastig note was a becoming hat of dark blue balibuntl, banded in velvet ribbon to match the color of the gown, and dark blue slippers, gloves and bag. Her flowers were a shoulder cluster of fragrant gardenias.

Mrs. W. B. Carlton, mother of the bride, was smartly costumed in navy blue sheer crepe, worn with a blue straw hat and matching accessories.

Mr. Barber and his bride left by motor for a wedding journey which will include the coast resorts of Florida. Upon their return they will take possession of their apartment at 66 Thirteenth street.

Mrs. Barber chose for traveling an ensemble of navy blue georgette made with a short jacket, the gown finished at the neckline with a crisp white organdy belt and worn with a red belt. Her hat was an off-the-face model of blue crepe, with touches of white grosgrain ribbon.

Why Do Legs Look Lovelier In Ingrains?

Because Ingrain stockings are made quite differently from others. The silk threads are dyed before the stocking is made—while other stockings are made up in the "gum" and then dyed. This dyeing in the thread, an ever so much more expensive process, makes the stocking sheerer and clearer—it makes the colors truer, lovelier; and it makes them faster to washing than dip stockings. Try Ingrains on your own legs and see. . . .

Mother's Day! Hurrying millions pause in the busy rush of worldly things to pay tribute to the mothers of the nation. The churches are adorned with flowers in honor of the mothers whose living presence graces the household, and for those who have entered into their heavenly reward and whose lives have left a fragrance and purity in the hearts of their children.

The badges for the living mothers will be the crimson flowers worn by children who rejoice over their good fortune. The wearing of the white flowers will denote that there is a sainted mother looking down from above upon her loved ones. Tribute will be paid to mothers throughout the length and breadth of the land, because they hold the most honored place in the affection of earthly beings.

The observance of the day was instituted by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia, Pa., on the second Sunday in May, 1907, when she assembled a group of her close friends in memory of the death of her own mother a year before. The following year Miss Jarvis and several of her friends wrote to the United States government and to representatives of the king in London in regard to establishing one day each year in honor of mothers.

First Annual Flower Show Will Be Staged This Week

In staging the first annual Atlanta Flower Show on Friday and Saturday the Peachtree Garden Club, in co-operation with other garden clubs of Atlanta, will realize a dream that originated in a great desire for such a show. The purpose is to create in the imagination of the visitors a more accurate, a more beautiful existence, and to demonstrate that even in times of economic distress the growing things exercise a happy diversion and stimulating employment. Another purpose is to educate children to conserve and not to destroy the natural beauties of the countryside, to suggest civic improvements, and to discourage unsightly areas, or anything that interferes with natural beauty of the Georgia landscape.

Admission to the show will be 50 cents, and the building at 671 Peachtree street, next door to the Georgian Terrace, will be the mecca for flower lovers in Atlanta and Georgia. Mrs. Phinizy Calhoun is general chairman of arrangements and her co-chairmen are Mrs. Arthur I. Harris and Miss Nellie Hightower. The flower show will open at 2 o'clock on Friday afternoon, May 18; at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, May 19, and will remain open both evenings until 10 o'clock. Mrs. Robert L. Cooney is president of the Peachtree Garden Club, the organization sponsoring the show to be staged at 671 Peachtree street.

The Peachtree club and co-operating clubs have given individual shows, but realize that the time has come to reach outside of garden club members, to those not members of clubs, who have a profound and abiding love for flowers. Visitors will be sincerely welcomed and urged to encourage and support the annual flower show. It is the earnest desire of local garden clubs to be of value to the community, and members feel that in inaugurating a general flower show they are serving a purpose that will grow in interest and importance in future years. Members hope for the co-operation of civic clubs, Chamber of Commerce, Rotarians, Kiwanians and the Civitans and those working for the improvement of the community.

C., the guest of Miss Sara Law; Miss Rosalind Vereen, of Moultrie, who is visiting Miss Liza Tway, and Miss Cynthia Chappell, of Columbus, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Morris.

Mother's Day Tribute Is Paid Mrs. Perdue.

Honor richly deserved will be paid on this Mother's Day to Mrs. John A. Perdue by members of the Peachtree Christian church, of which she is a beloved and valuable member. Occupying an important position upon the wall of the Sunday school assembly room will be a handsome portrait of Mrs. Perdue recently completed by Charles Naegle and presented by Mrs. Perdue to her children. Masses of lovely flowers will be laid below the painting by the children enrolled at this Sunday school as a tribute to "Mother Perdue," as she is affectionately called by the membership of this prominent church.

Edgar Craighead, superintendent of the Sunday school, will proclaim Mrs. Perdue's loyalty and faithful service to the church which she helped organize and in which she has labored for a number of years. It is particularly appropriate that this homage be bestowed upon this prominent Atlantan on this Mother's Day, which is known as home mission rally day in the Christian church, because Mrs. Perdue has been a tireless worker for home missions. Although she believes the foreign mission cause worthy, she has ever been a strong advocate for missionary work on home soil.

The beautiful portrait of Mrs. Perdue was loaned to the church today for this memorable occasion by her daughters, Mesdames George Yundt, John A. Boykin, Edwin Yancey and Robert Quin, to whom she presented the magnificent painting on last Easter day at an impressive service at the Perdue home on Eleventh street with only members of the family present and Dr. L. O. Bricker, pastor of the Peachtree Christian church, making the presentation. At the artist's behest, Mrs. Perdue is posed in a delicate blue gown, and the splendid likeness is a distinct compliment to the ability and genius of the artist. Perfection characterizes every detail of the three-quarter length painting, which bespeaks charm and dignity. The blending of soft brown, green and yellow tones provide a harmonious background for the almost human-like figure that reposes in a natural relaxed position upon a mahogany chair upholstered in rich red velvet. The aristocratic features of the subject are emphasized by the artist and especially appealing is the expressive blue eyes and the softly waved silver tresses worn with a part through the center. Indeed the portrait reveals that intangible and yet definite lovliness characterizing the features of all mothers.

Mrs. Felder Visits Stratford Hall.

En route from Atlanta to her home in Connecticut, Mrs. Wilson Norfleet Felder stopped in Stratford, Va., to participate in celebrating the fourth annual May memorial fete at Stratford Hall, ancestral home of the Lee family in Westmoreland county. The theme of the celebration was the commemoration of the betrothal of Light Horse Harry Lee and Anne Carter Lee, of Shirley, parents of Virginia's famed Civil War commander-in-chief.

Mrs. Felder is director for Connecticut in the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. Miss Nora Lee Antrim, of Richmond, a great-great-granddaughter of Light Horse Harry Lee, gave readings from original manuscripts pertaining to the Lee family, and recited two recently discovered original poems written by Charles Carter Lee, eldest son of Light Horse Harry Lee, more than a century ago. Miss Antrim came to Atlanta to attend the marriage of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Bickerton Cardwell, last December.

A feature of the celebration was the opening of the Stratford store, converted from the restored original kitchen of the mansion. From this store in the future, the old-time, hand-made products of the Stratford plantation will be sold. These include rare old English "smoked turkeys," real Virginia hams cured in the ancient smokehouse of the Lee estate, and old-fashioned jams and jellies made from the same plantation recipes as those used two centuries ago.

Huff House Is Scene Of Celebration.

A lovely bride of yesteryear shared honors with her bridesmaid when Mrs. I. N. Ragsdale and Miss Sarah Huff were central figures at the entertainment given last Wednesday by the Society of Pioneer Women at Huff House. The dual entertainment marked the seventy-eighth birthday of Miss Huff and celebrated the fifty-second wedding anniversary of I. N. Ragsdale, former mayor of Atlanta, and Mrs. Ragsdale.

The observance of the day brought to mind the wedding solemnized at the plantation home of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Floyd Huff, when their daughter, Miss Mary Huff, took her marriage vows to I. N. Ragsdale. Attired in a rich brown brocaded gown fashioned in the quaint style of a half a century ago, the little bride was very lovely as she plighted her troth before the late Rev. Christian and members of her family. Flowers culled from the old-fashioned gardens adorning the countryside graced the spacious parlors of the old residence located on Cascade road. Similar blossoms sent by admiring friends formed the bright-hued bouquet carried by the bride.

Attended by her cousins, Misses Sarah and Cordelia Huff, the bride chose no other attendants. They were gowned alike in dresses fashioned of snowy white lawn, the tight-fitting bodices featuring a high neckline and the graceful full skirts being of slipper-toe length. Following the ceremony the bride and bridegroom established their residence in Atlanta, where they have been identified with the civic, religious and social development of the city.

A feature of the entertainment complimenting the trio of honor guests was a recitation given by beloved Grandma Smith, a neighbor of the Misses Huff, who is over 92 years of age. She recited a dramatic poem she remembered from her school days, giving as an encore "Mary's Little Lamb." Grandma Smith came to Atlanta from England in 1869 and is still actively engaged in teaching a large Bible class in her church. Red roses, the gift of F. J. Paxon and Raymond A. Kline, of Davison-Paxon Company, were sent Miss Huff as a memento of the birthday anniversary.

Interesting Visitors To Arrive in June

The month of June will be one whirl of good times in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Walker on Fairview road, for they will entertain a group of northern relatives as their guests and numerous social affairs are being planned to honor these visitors. The early part of June Mr. and Mrs. Pete Cleon Kee, of Western Springs, Ill., will arrive by motor and will be welcomed by many friends of Mrs. Kee, who frequently visited in Atlanta as the former Miss Gertrude Beggs. Accompanying the Kees will be Misses Ellen Bruckert and Marjorie Bruckert, of River Forest, Ill., who will visit their cousin, Miss Marion Walker, a popular member of Atlanta's high school contingent. Miss Marjorie Bruckert will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Kee on their return after a two-week visit, but Miss Ellen Bruckert, who is a high school senior, will spend the remainder of the summer with Miss Walker.

Although she will not be in Atlanta until the latter part of June, Miss Jean Walker, elder daughter of the house, will also be having her share of good times. Miss Walker, who is a member of the sophomore class at Sweet Briar College, Va., will take an active part in the college commencement festivities and has been chosen by Miss Cecil Bridsey, of Macon, a member of the graduation class, to act as her sophomore in the senior "hooding ceremony," which will entitle her to attend the senior banquet. At the close of the graduation exercises June 5, Miss Walker will accompany her schoolmate, Miss Lydia Warner, to her home in Titusville, Pa., for a two-week visit, before returning to Atlanta to assist in entertaining her cousins.

Engagements of Popular Belles Are Announced Today

The four attractive figures pictured above present a group of belles whose betrothals are announced today and whose marriages will be interesting events of the summer season. Upper left, Miss Elizabeth Helen Jones, daughter of Mrs. Wiley I. Jones and the late Wiley Jones, whose marriage to Harold Holsombach takes places on June 9. Upper right, Miss Lida Mell, daughter of Mrs. James Robert Mell and the late Mr. Mell, who will become the bride of Robert Holbrook Perkins at a June ceremony. Lower left, Miss Imogene Menzies Powell, daughter of Mrs. James DuBose Powell, of Maplewood, N. J., whose marriage to Sidney Phelan Clark, son of Mrs. Ulric Atkinson, of Montclair, N. J., formerly of Atlanta, is scheduled for June 23. Lower right, Miss Gladys Parham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Parham, of Greenville, Ga., whose engagement is announced today by her parents to Benjamin B. Brown Jr., of Griffin, Ga., the date of the marriage to be announced later. Miss Lida Mell Will Be Bride Of Mr. Perkins at June Ceremony

Social interest centers in the announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Lida Ralston Mell and Robert Holbrook Perkins, the marriage to take place in June. Miss Mell is the daughter of Mrs. Lula Brooks Mell and the late James Robert Mell, who was well known in realty circles in Atlanta for many years. On her maternal side the bride-elect is descended from the distinguished Brooks and Ralston families of Virginia and Tennessee. On her paternal side her ancestry extends to the Mell family of English lineage, who came to this country from Dorchester, England, before the American Revolution and were prominently identified with the early colonial history of Georgia. The bride-elect's brothers are Brooks Mell and Robert E. Mell, of this city.

Mr. Perkins is the son of Mrs. William H. Perkins and the late Mr. Perkins, of Essex, Mass. His mother is the former Miss Ina Holbrook, of Butler, Ga. She is descended from General Robert E. Lee's family of Virginia. On his paternal side he is descended from a long line of prominent New England families.

Mr. Perkins is now connected with the Georgia Power Company. Following the wedding he and his bride will make their home in Atlanta.

The announcement of Miss Mell's engagement to Mr. Perkins was announced to a group of her close friends at a tea given yesterday by her sister, Mrs. Robert E. Mell at her home on Oakdale road who was assisted in receiving by the honor guest and her mother, Mrs. J. R. Mell. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Zach Cowan, Thomas Mell, Glen Milner, of Rome, and Misses Louise Perkins and Betty Hadley. The guests were entertained by a group of songs rendered by Mrs. W. P. Sloan with Mrs. Nat Long accompanying her at the piano.

The attractively-appointed tea table was overlaid with a lace cover and featured exquisite white decorations. Garden flowers were attractively arranged throughout the rooms where the guests were received.

Miss Gladys Parham, Of Greenville, Ga., To Wed Mr. Brown

GREENVILLE, Ga., May 12.—An announcement of interest to a wide circle of friends is that of the engagement and approaching marriage in June of Miss Gladys Parham, of Greenville, Ga., and Benjamin B. Brown Jr., of Griffin. The bride-elect is a charming young woman and is very popular in southern society. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Parham, of Greenville, and is a lovely representative of families prominent in the social and civic life of the south.

Miss Parham received her education at Greenville High school, G. S. C. W., at Milledgeville, later attending Cox College.

Mr. Brown, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Brown Sr., is well known and popular in social and business circles. He received his preparatory education at Castle Heights, Tenn., later going to Emory and then to Georgia, where he was a member of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. He represents on both his paternal and maternal sides, aristocratic southern families.

President Roosevelt Given Hooked Rug.

Although the story came to light just recently, it is well worth telling because it concerns President Roosevelt and the gift of a hooked rug made and designed by Mrs. W. A. Freeman, an erstwhile Maconite, but a resident of Atlanta at present. The rug is about 36 inches square and has a cream-colored background, centered with a bouquet of roses, bordered with a rainbow reflecting every color of the spectrum.

In diagonally opposite corners are the Blue Eagles, the insignia of the NRA. Another corner is beautified by an olive branch, with the chief executive's initials, "F. D. R.," worked in gold. The fourth corner is adorned with Georgia's state flower, the Cherokee rose, and here Mrs. Roosevelt's initials, "E. R. R.," are done in gold.

The letter written by Mrs. Freeman to President Roosevelt when the rug was sent to the White House, and his answer were deemed of such intrinsic value that Miss Ruth Blair requested them for Rhodes Memorial hall, there to hang upon the walls of this sanctum sanctorum forevermore. Mrs. Freeman expressed herself thusly in the letter, written on January 30:

"The rug which I am sending you was designed and made by me with an old-fashioned "hook." Into it is incorporated the Blue Eagle, which is the outstanding symbol of your administration. It was finished today, on your 52nd birthday, although it is not a birthday gift, for you were born when the morning stars sang together, and God looked on his creation and saw that it was very good.

"The motif is simple, but it is symbolic of your great idealism. The Cherokee rose, in the left-hand corner, is our state flower. The rose has been called by a great American woman "the smile of God." The olive branch woven around your initials signifies peace. The rainbow colors around the center are emblems of hope, and the Blue Eagle means promise. One like yourself reflects compassion for his fellowman, and is an idea of God and a poem of God.

Mrs. Freeman composed the following to end her letter to President Roosevelt:

God's children express His ideas;
This I am sure is true;
What a thought of prosperity He must have held
The time when He thought of you.
Time is mortal measurement.
And mortal beliefs untrue;
Eternity, not Time, must express,
Our nation's gratitude to you.

In accepting the gift President Roosevelt declared his appreciation of the product of Mrs. Freeman's handiwork and praised her for her interesting and colorful explanation of the design of the hooked rug.

Novel Centerpiece Features Dinner Party.

Adding a particularly appropriate note to the table decoration at the dinner given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William J. Davis Jr., was the third tier of the bride's cake saved from the hosts' wedding which centered the table appointments and was encircled by tiny white flowers, further carrying out the bridal motif. Honor guests at the family dinner were Miss Ethel York and Dr. Shelley Carter Davis, whose wedding takes place this month, and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Marks, of Rome, N. Y., brother and sister of Mr. Davis. Completing the party were Miss Catherine Davis and Bill Carper.

Most interesting is the story attached to the tier of the wedding cake which graced the bride's table at the reception following the marriage of the former Miss Alice Mitchell and Mr. Davis on October 10, 1931, in Yakima, Wash. The first two tiers of the cake were cut by the bride for her attendants, but the third tier was rescued by her mother, the late Mrs. J. L. Mitchell, who brought it across the continent last year when she came for a visit to her son and daughter. A portion of the cake is carefully sealed up and will be preserved by Mrs. Davis for her tiny daughter, Alice, to cut on some auspicious occasion in the future.

Mutual Friends Introduce Couple.

It was a happy thought which prompted Mr. and Mrs. John Ure, of Jersey City, N. J., to write a letter of introduction to Miss Joan Clarke for their friend, Edgar McHutchison, of Jersey City, when he came south over a year ago on a business trip. When Mr. McHutchison arrived for his "blind date" with Miss Clarke the mutual attraction of the couple was instant and the announcement of their engagement today follows frequent subsequent trips made to Atlanta by Mr. McHutchison when he was constantly with his charming young fiancee.

Mrs. Ure is the former Miss Marion Porter, of Atlanta, and throughout her childhood lived across the street from the Clarke family, numbering Miss Clarke and her sisters among her favorite playmates. Since her marriage Mrs. Ure has resided in Jersey City, and after their wedding trip Mr. McHutchison and his bride will live near the Ures and doubtless the Atlantans and their husbands will often be together.

Following their marriage at a quiet ceremony Saturday, May 19, Mr. McHutchison and his bride will motor to the picturesque summer home of the McHutchison family in northern Maine, where they will pay a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. James McHutchison before sailing from New York city for Bermuda. After a stay at the beautiful island resort, the couple will go to Jersey City for future residence.

A PLACE IN THE SUN—

And what has a more fitting place in the sun than a pretty girl, so that sun may throw highlights on her hair and cast little light shadows of her graceful lines and features?

The parasol is more symbolic than practical, holdover of the mincing age when girls were in horror lest their pale, wan skins might be clouded with a sturdy touch of natural tan, or—fate forbid!—a freckle!

WHAT IS JUSTICE IN THIS CASE?

Preacher's Murder Trial Climaxes Arkansas Feud Between Church Factions

By PETER LEVINS.

THE events leading up to the church killing of elderly John MacMurdo were hectic indeed. While the rest of the country performed its spiritual duties in a quiet and dignified manner, the inhabitants of Craighead county, Arkansas, engaged in a religious feud of incredible bitterness. The battle between rival preachers and their hotly partial factions continued for many months before the tragedy—and the feud is still in full swing.

Militant evangelism has bred some exceedingly fiery preachers in the southwest, and led to more than one fatality. About eight years ago the Rev. J. Frank Norris, fulminating Fundamentalist of Fort Worth, Texas, shot and killed Dexter E. Chipps, a wealthy lumberman. Norris said he shot in self-defense and was acquitted. He had been attacking civic leaders in his sermons, Chipps among them, and the tragedy had occurred in the minister's study.

Two of the principals of today's narrative were disciples of J. Frank Norris.

One of them, "Fighting Joe" Jeffers, arrived in Jonesboro, Ark. (population, 15,000), in 1931 and launched a revival meeting in the First Baptist church. Jeffers became dissatisfied with the policies of the Rev. Dow Heard, pastor of the church, and immediately started a separate revival meeting.

Jeffers pulled no punches. He read from the pulpit the records of certain members of the Reverend Heard's congregation, and the latter's followers organized to suppress him. Jeffers dared them to do their worst. The war was on.

A free-for-all fight at the church landed several participants in jail, among them a follower of Jeffers. The latter led a march on the jail and liberated his loyal subject. When the trials were called feeling had become so intense that the national guard had to be dispatched to Jonesboro to maintain order. After three days under military rule the town quieted down.

But not for long.

Jeffers, fighting interference by city officials, appeared at city hall and prepared to hold a protest prayer meeting. Mayor Herbert Bosler refused permission for the meeting but granted the preacher a "moment of prayer." Jeffers strode out to the lawn in front of city hall, fell upon his knees and called upon the Lord to "strike the mayor dead with a bolt of lightning."

While onlookers waited for the bolt to arrive, a follower of Jeffers stepped up to the mayor and felled him with a blow on the jaw.

The meeting broke up and several were arrested.

By this time practically every one in town had aligned himself with either Jeffers or Heard, so it was impossible to obtain a jury. However, peace appeared in sight when Jeffers and his adherents erected a large tent for their meeting place. Meanwhile, as more than 1,000 members had enrolled under the Jeffers standard, they decided to buy some land several blocks from the business district and erect a tabernacle.

Before the new home could be completed some one set fire to the tent. This did not improve the situation.

In time the tabernacle, covering almost a square block, was completed and the congregation swelled to several thousand. Things became so peaceful, for the time being, that Jeffers decided to go on a soul-saving tour, leaving a substitute to handle affairs in Jonesboro. The tour was a big success. Jeffers decided to erect an even larger tabernacle in Miami, Fla.

He had not been satisfied with several substitutes who had preached in his place in Jonesboro, so he scouted around for a permanent successor. He settled upon the Rev. Dale Crowley, another disciple of J. Frank Norris.

Crowley had had quite a stormy career himself. He had been expelled from Baylor University, at Waco, Texas, because he had charged faculty members with teaching evolution. After that he had followed the career of a fighting evangelist in Texas and California.

He took charge at Jonesboro in June, 1932, and Jeffers hastened back to Miami, where a squabble had broken out during his absence. Crowley leaped into the headlines by reopening the old feud with Heard the while he printed in his newspaper, the Arkansas Fundamentalist, scathing attacks on city and county officials.

Heard let it all pass so long as the attacks came from Crowley's pulpit, but when Crowley accosted him on the street and opened a verbal tirade against him Heard led with his left, followed with his right, and then continued with this simple procedure until Crowley's face was in very bad shape indeed. Hardly had his features regained their normal appearance than he received another beating at the hands of two youths for an alleged defamation of their mother's character.

But Crowley, despite all these encounters, prospered mightily in his conduct of the tabernacle at Jonesboro. The church became one of the largest in the south, with 2,000 members, held service every day in the week, classes for persons of all ages, and daily radio broadcasts from the church's own station.

And then Jeffers decided to visit his old flock.

• • • •

This was in July, 1933. The reception for Jeffers was more than Crowley had expected; it appeared that Jeffers, as guest pastor, was more in favor than Crowley himself. The latter swelled a little with righteous indignation but for the time being held his peace.

Then, one day, Jeffers gave his expressions on prohibition and the Bible. Crowley immediately leaped upon the platform and charged his fellow evangelist with heresy. He asserted that Jeffers would never again occupy the pulpit, accused him of being a "religious racketeer," and made the charge that Jeffers was trying to regain possession of the Jonesboro tabernacle.

Thus a new war was on. The old fight between the First Baptist church, led by Heard, and the newcomer Jeffers was as nothing compared with the terrific feud that now developed in the Baptist tabernacle splitting the congregation wide open.

Jeffers and Crowley behaved peaceably for a while, contenting themselves with occupying the pulpit on alternate days. But it wasn't long before both factions insisted upon occupying the tabernacle at the same time. That was bound to breed trouble.

The warring evangelists tried to preach simultaneously, each raising his voice to drown out the other. When only one minister was present the opposing faction would drown out his words by clapping their hands. The choirs sang different hymns and hurled song books and chairs at their rivals.

Never a dull moment.

When each faction took to lugging pistols and rifles into the tabernacle officers took charge, and when fist fights became a nightly occurrence the authorities padlocked the place. God was asked to strike various public officials dead but all such pleas have, thus far, gone unanswered.

Jeffers, scenting dynamite in the situation, remembered his flock in Miami. He left his sister, Miss Willie Jeffers, to look after his interests when he returned to Florida. The dispute over possession of the tabernacle was taken to the courts. While this action was pending both factions were barred at first, then allowed to occupy the house of worship on alternate evenings.

On one occasion a preacher named the Rev. H. W. Applegate, entered the pulpit and took his life in his hands by announcing that Crowley had sent him to preach in his absence. Immediately a hundred Jeffersite women stormed the platform and tore the clothing from the substitute minister. He changed his mind about preaching in place of Crowley.

Early in October the courts ruled that Crowley should have the tabernacle, a ruling which solved the situation not at all.

On the afternoon of October 10 Dale Crowley and several of his followers went to the tabernacle and ordered John MacMurdo, 68, whom Jeffers had installed as janitor-guard of the church, to leave the place at once. MacMurdo refused.

What happened then we must leave for the witnesses. At any rate, MacMurdo was fatally shot.

MacMurdo, before he died, said Crowley shot him down without warning. He admitted having a pistol but asserted he did not fire it. Crowley declared he fired only to save his life, after MacMurdo fired at him.

A few nights after the tragedy some one fired several shots into Crowley's cell in the Jonesboro jail but no one was hit. The accused man was removed to a safe place. Later he obtained his release under bond and immediately returned to the tabernacle to resume his preaching while his lawyers made ready for his defense at the trial.

• • • •

In view of the bitter feeling in the county, the trial was transferred to Clay county. It began at Piggott, Ark., on January 3 before Circuit Judge Neill Killough. The good-looking, brown-haired defendant was nattily dressed. Beside him sat his attractive young wife, Marguerite. The prosecutor was Denver Dudley, assisted by Judge E. G. Ward, of Clay county, and the array of defense lawyers was headed by Judge Zal B. Harrison, of Blytheville.

The jury was quickly completed, being composed of four Methodists, two Baptists, and six farmers who embarrassingly admitted that they didn't go to church.

Prosecutor Dudley, in his opening, briefly reviewed the church feud and the events leading up to the tragedy. He charged that Crowley issued a "final ultimatum to MacMurdo to leave within an hour," that MacMurdo refused and "the minister of the gospel shot MacMurdo in the back, an old man, blind and prostrate on the ground, after a blow on the head had broken his glasses and blinded him."

Dudley did not ask for the death penalty, but thought the jury should "find him guilty and hang a lesson on him."

Defense Attorney Harrison gave a different version of the fatal shooting. He declared that the aged MacMurdo was visibly angry after being given an hour to leave the building.

"As Crowley left the room after telling MacMurdo to vacate, he looked back and saw a pistol leveled at him," said Harrison. "He ran and fell, and his own pistol fell from his pocket. MacMurdo stood above him and pulled his pistol and shot at the preacher lying on the ground. A man standing near by struck MacMurdo with his walking stick.

"That is the only reason Crowley is here today instead of MacMurdo. It was not until then that Crowley reached out and picked up his pistol and fired at MacMurdo as he had every right to do, in self-defense."

Crowley did not deny killing MacMurdo, but pleaded self-defense.

Mrs. Clara Coleman, first of the state's eye-witnesses, said a group of about 15 women were gathered at the tabernacle and were singing and praying on the rostrum when she first heard voices in the rear. She said she heard two shots a few seconds later, and then "a volley of shots."

Mrs. Coleman, member of the Jeffers faction, said the women went ahead singing and praying after the first two shots, but that when the volley was heard, they left the rostrum and ran to the hall.

"I saw MacMurdo on the floor and Brother Crowley stood there and shot him again," Mrs. Coleman testified.

The woman said she ran to MacMurdo and saw Crowley and two other men go into the study and close the door.

"MacMurdo told us to take his dying statement, and said: 'Dale Crowley shot me in cold blood and without cause,'" she testified.

Under cross-examination, she denied being prejudiced against Crowley, but admitted being a member of the opposing faction. She denied making a statement that she "could slash Dale Crowley's throat."

Mrs. Coleman said that MacMurdo told her that Tom Carter, tabernacle guard for Crowley, and L. H. Kahre, 66-year-old carpenter, two of Crowley's companions, had beat him over the head.

"He said his gun was in his pocket and still loaded. One of the women took the weapon (a .32-caliber automatic) out of his hip pocket and turned it over to the law later," the witness said.

She was questioned about a third gun, a .38-caliber, found at the scene. Crowley was firing with a .32-caliber and the second .32 was in MacMurdo's pocket. Mrs. Coleman said MacMurdo declared Crowley had thrown it at him after he was shot. She said a boy found the third gun on the floor near MacMurdo and that it had been shot once.

Three doctors testified MacMurdo had been shot three times, once in each leg and once in the abdomen, but they could not say whether the bullets entered from the front or back, and none of the bullets had remained in the body.

Another dying statement made at the hospital in the presence of Chief of Police W. C. Craig and Sheriff Horace Johnson was admitted. MacMurdo was quoted as saying:

"I had laid down to get some sleep when Crowley came in and told me to get out. I said I would get out as quick as I could, and he said he would give me an hour. He left the room and I heard him fussing with some women out in the hall. When I came out he asked me again if I was going to leave, and I said I would not get out unless I had to.

"Then I went to the east door to see who was fussing with some more of the women, and somebody hit me over the head, and Dale Crowley came through the door shooting at me."

Mrs. Lena Shook and Mrs. Stacy Baswell said they were outside the tabernacle arguing with Cletus Webb about taking their names for contempt of court proceedings based on an injunction that awarded the tabernacle to the Crowley faction.

"Brother Crowley stumbled out the east door and fell, his pistol falling out of his pocket," Mrs. Shook said. "Then he picked up the gun, slipped along the wall to the door and fired several times. Then he went in, and by the time I got there I saw him level and fire one more time at Mr. MacMurdo lying helpless on the floor."

Mrs. Baswell corroborated Mrs. Shook's statement, adding that she struggled with Crowley for possession of the gun he dropped, but desisted when he pointed the pistol at her.

Her husband, Stacy Baswell, testified one of the shots fired by Crowley was aimed at him as he went to the aid of MacMurdo.

L. H. Karhe was beating MacMurdo over the head with a cane when I got there," Baswell said, and added that if MacMurdo had a gun, he did not see it.

"Crowley was on the outside of the tabernacle and I caught MacMurdo and pulled him back off the steps. As Crowley entered the door, he shot at me, missing me about two feet." Baswell said that after this he was in too big a hurry to see what happened to MacMurdo.

The mysterious third pistol, the .38-caliber, had been fired only once and snapped thereafter.

TRANSFER MAN IDENTIFIES PISTOL.

Walter Montague, Jonesboro transfer man, identified this pistol as his. He said he had let some one have the gun a week earlier for the tabernacle guard, but the state could not identify the person who had fired this weapon.

Through cross-examination, the defense indicated an attempt would be made to prove that this was the gun first fired by MacMurdo and before Crowley shot him.

The state rested its case during a night session of the second day of the trial.

• • • •

The defense injected the element of a "mystery" shot into the case in the testimony of L. H. Kahre, the aged carpenter who was indicted as an accessory in the murder of MacMurdo.

Kahre testified he heard a shot in the tabernacle before either MacMurdo or Crowley fired. The shot came from a gun of different caliber than the other three figuring in the case, he said. He said he saw a man running from the tabernacle just after the shooting whom he believed to be a man pointed out to him before the trouble as 'Millard Cobb."

During the cross-examination, Prosecuting Attorney Dudley presented Cobb in the courtroom and asked Kahre if he was the man seen running from the building after the shooting.

'He was about his size, but I won't say he is the same man and I won't say he is not," Kahre replied. He said he was in the tabernacle hall when the trouble started and Crowley ran past him, followed by MacMurdo. About the time MacMurdo passed him, Kahre said he heard a shot from behind which he knew was not fired by MacMurdo or Crowley.

Kahre testified that as MacMurdo aimed his gun at Crowley and fired, he struck MacMurdo on the arm with his walking stick, and that when MacMurdo wheeled about, he struck him on the head. (It was this blow on the head which the state claimed broke MacMurdo's glasses and blinded him.)

O. L. Wiggs, elderly shoe salesman and not a member of either of the two church factions; Tom Carter, former deputy sheriff who had been employed by Crowley to replace MacMurdo; G. W. Pitts, Sunday school superintendent for the Crowley faction, and Cletus Webb, deacon of the Crowley group, all eye-witnesses, testified similarly to the effect that Crowley had started to leave the tabernacle after telling MacMurdo to vacate within an hour; that when Crowley looked back, he saw MacMurdo leveling his pistol at him; that the minister fell down the steps, and that he did not start firing until after the janitor, MacMurdo, had started shooting at him.

Rev. Crowley took the witness stand as the climax of the defense testimony, and in a trembling voice, related for more than an hour the details of the tragic afternoon.

He told of warning MacMurdo to vacate. As I started to leave and was going through the door, I glanced over my shoulder just in time to see MacMurdo level a gun at me," the minister testified.

"I ducked, and as I did, I heard the report of a pistol which seemed to be farther back down the hall. I stumbled out of the door and heard the report of MacMurdo's pistol. As I looked back, I saw his form. He still had the gun leveled at me. As I fell my .32, which I carried under my belt, fell out near my hand.

"My only impulse was to save my life. There came before me like a flash my wife, my babies. I saw the gun lying there. I realied it was the only hope I had. I grabbed it as quickly as I could and began firing."

Crowley said that MacMurdo's gun appeared to be snapping.

"I emptied my gun, or I supposed I did. I kept firing until he stumbled and fell back." He said he then went back into the tabernacle and into the office where he stayed until officers arrived.

He emphatically denied firing another shot into the prostrate form of the janitor.

The defense introduced numerous witnesses to tell of threats made on Crowley's life. Other witnesses testified that MacMurdo had made a fortress of the tabernacle with gun holes cut in the walls, guns hidden in various spots, and iron pipes to be used as clubs to prevent the Crowleyites taking possession of the church building.

In the arguments to the jury, defense attorneys contended that Crowley had a perfect right to arm himself after threats had been made against his life; that there was reasonable doubt that a bullet from Crowley's gun had killed MacMurdo since a "mystery shot" had been fired, and doctors had testified that the wound in MacMurdo's abdomen appeared to have been made by a larger bullet than a .32, which Crowley was firing.

Prosecuting Attorney Dudley, in his concluding arguments, declared Crowley had reached a point of safety when he fell outside the tabernacle door and that he became the aggressor when he re-entered the building and started firing.

The jury was given the case at 4:20 p. m., Saturday, January 6, the fourth day of the trial. A verdict of not guilty was returned within three minutes, even before the spectators had time to leave the courtroom.

"If I were in his place, I wouldn't stay in Jonesboro after this," one of the jurors warned a close friend of Crowley.

However, the acquitted minister returned to Jonesboro immediately, and conducted services through Sunday.

Not only has Crowley declared that he intends to continue as pastor of the Baptist tabernacle, but he already has started plans for a larger and more modern structure to replace the strife-torn frame building. Joe Jeffers, meanwhile, is giving all his time to his congregation at Miami.

Highlights of Broadway From the Circle to the Square by JACK LAIT

THE local film reviewers, to a man (and woman) leaped on poor Georgie Raft after seeing him starred in "The Trumpet Blows."

The gist of the complaints was the summation that Raft couldn't play a bullfighter, couldn't characterize parts requiring sharp delineation, and was about as Spanish as Babe Ruth—despite his natural Latin appearance. Somewhat similar, though not as broad, had been the yips when he had showed in "Bolero."

Ducking from under as to the merits of the critics' beefs, I do go on record for stating that more actors are ruined because they insist on demonstrating their versatility (they usually pronounce it "versitality") than by any other single element in the composition of actors which militates against their continued success.

So many actors have such a deadly fear of being "typed." When they have established themselves as especially effective at especially special sorts of roles, they balk at playing more of them. They say "H'mph—my public will think I can't do any other kind of stuff. In fact, what I clicked in is probably the worst thing I do. I'll show 'em."

Passing the proverbial passion of clowns to play tragedies and vice versa and getting down to cases in point, Raft, who a few seasons ago was a Charleston dancer in "Texas" Guinan's, turned out to be a terrific portrayer of gangster and collateral underworld "villains"—wicked, but likable. His fame, his pay and his demand leaped with rare rapidity.

Now, whether it was Raft or his contractors who thought it was too bad that his genius should be limited to such portrayals, frantic efforts were made to find him parts far removed from those which had so sensationally established him. After his Chuck Connors in "The Bowery," a bit of a departure, but still in the old vein and fairly up to the Raft standard, he was cast in "Bolero" and "Trumpet," with comparatively unhappy and anti-climactic reactions.

Now let us look into this distinction to be "typed," with its perils of proclaiming performers as narrow:

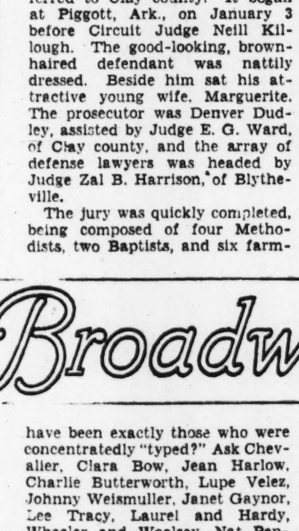

Charlie Chaplin, the most successful of all screen actors, has never once deviated not only from his original type, but from his original character—yea, his original make-up. Mary Pickford, the next most successful, had an unbroken procession of triumphs as long as she essayed saccharine ingenues, innocent, harassed, imperiled. Marie Dressler, who is a grand dramatic actress, has stuck close to the heart-of-gold roughneck that pays her rent and hasn't demanded to play Lady Macbeth or Lady Godiva. Mae West has cleaned up in three clickers, the same outstanding Mae West in all. Harold Lloyd never took on romantic leads or slickers or took off his glasses. No more did Will Rogers go repertoire. Eddie Cantor, the Broadway wise guy, wouldn't touch anything but a sympathetic boob part.

Charlie Ruggles, one of the finest "straight" actors on the American stage or screen, thinks he's lucky to have created a character that gets across, and you couldn't tear him loose from him. Zasu Pitts, double ditto. Bing Crosby, always a young crooner, doesn't crave to play Pagliacci.

Isn't it a fact that the greatest and most lasting of the favorites have been exactly those who were concentratredly "typed?" Ask Chevalier, Clara Bow, Jean Harlow, Charlie Butterworth, Lupe Velez, Johnny Weismuller, Janet Gaynor, Lee Tracy, Laurel and Hardy, Wheeler and Woolsey, Nat Pendleton, Barbara Stanwyck, Boris Karloff, Lionel Atwill, Lew Cody, Bela Lugosi, Gregory Ratoff, Vic McLaglen, George Sidney and dozens more.

Few Have It.

congenital chemical phenomenon versatile and can hit in anything—like John and Lionel Barrymore, Marion Davies, Joan Blondell, Connie Bennett, George Arliss, Paul Muni, Lewis Stone, Marjorie Rambeau, Norma Shearer, Katharine Hepburn, Clark Gable, Conrad Nagel, C. Aubrey Smith, Fay Wray, Charles Laughton and Adolphe Menjou.

Unsatisfied.

The stage, as much as the screen, bristles with conspicuous and catastrophic instances of favorite artists who bumped their noses into flops because they grew restive under continued successes at doing what they did best.

Marilyn Miller, a fine dancer and acceptable light comedienne, did a deplorable "Peter Pan" over the protests of her best friends. David Warfield, set forever in three refined hokum surefires, broke his relations with David Belasco and retired from his beloved stagework because he insisted he had a vocation for Shylock. Ethel Barrymore, most modern of the moderns throughout her career of several decades, went classic with the most pitiful Juliet of all time.

Edward G. Robinson, who, like Raft, had hit an inspired streak as a gangster-actor, fought his way to the privilege of doing sad and serious old gentlemen with great peril to his standing. Marlene Dietrich, most exotic siren of the celluloid, struck her all-time artistic low in a maudlin opus wherein she played for "sympathy" as the virginal and beset maedchen. Charlie Ray became a star overnight in "The Coward" as a frightened, appealing, panic-stricken weakling. Would he repeat? He would not. He walked out, financed his own company, played John Alden, wooed and won his Priscilla and strutted her off to a happy fadeout—and for himself a most unhappy fadeout ending in bankruptcy and oblivion.

Jim Barton, a truly gifted dancer, refuses to do any dancing to speak of and stands or falls as a character actor. Hal Skelly, likewise a grand dancer with a flair for comedy, stumbled into one big "legit" hit and hasn't danced since—nor worked much. Winnie Baldwin had something about the way she danced and played a uke that made her a headliner in big-time vaudeville—so she threw away the uke and refused to dance and started looking for a spot as the lead in a drama; and when that missed, she up and wrote herself one; and when that went sour she just turned her back on the whole business.

HELEN CAMBRIDGE, statuesque showgirl who stood out in the "Casino Varieties," is the sister of Winchell's Girl Friday.

I could write all day of equally luckless detours of talented specialists into foreign fields where they were mediocre . . . I don't know of a parallel situation in any other line of achievement where people who have demonstrated their supremacy in one endeavor look down on it and muscle in on stuff for which they are unfitted.

Couple o' Shorts.

Just to show you the condition of "show business"—

Friend of mine stumbled and fell down a flight of stairs into the basement of a Broadway theater. It was dark and unguarded—a palpable case of actionable negligence.

As soon as the victim was all taped up and bandaged he stomped to his attorney, a wise Broadway legaler, and, with his one good fist pounded upon the desk and cried:

"I want to sue the owners of that theater!"

The lawyer though a moment, then said:

"Better not . . . they might give you the theater!"

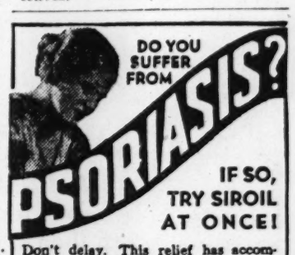

Another recent anecdote deals with a Broadway vaudeville agent, who for years has been trying to keep a Hollywood office self-sustaining, but there never was enough vaudeville business out that way to pay a man. One representative after another went out and one after another tried it a while and threw it up.

One of the agent's clients, a dancer, wasn't doing so hot in the east, either, and sighed that he'd like to quit the business. The agent said he needn't quit—he could go out to Hollywood and be his representative and go into the agent end. He warned the trouper that there wasn't much trade, but he might get a break or he might work up the territory . . . Okay . . . a deal!

Now, two weeks the Broadway agent's Hollywood agent sat and sat, waited and waited. Then in came a booker. He represented an Australian circuit. He wanted a male dancer right away—26 weeks' guarantee . . . Could the office supply one?

"Supply one?" cried the actor-agent, "I'll take it myself!"

There's a job open in Hollywood for an actors' agent—if he can subsist on climate and palm leaves.

"Why" Women Really Rule the World"

Warrior, poet, statesman, singer—all, says Earl Carroll, did what they did because of some woman.

Men think they are the bosses, but feminine beauty has held the whip hand for centuries, says Earl Carroll, who foresees a great war some day between the sexes

By Dan Thomas

EARL CARROLL, the soft-spoken connoisseur of beauty who helped to make the show-girl what she is today, has just come down from the mountains with the discovery that feminine loveliness rules the world.

It's responsible, says Carroll, for just about every act of man. Wars are fought, men rise to great heights or sink to great depths, fortunes are won and debts are incurred, songs are written and odd capers are cut—all on account of woman's beauty.

Carroll, who recently spent several months in Hollywood supervising production of "Murder at the Vanities," has been dealing in beauty for many years, and knows all about what it can do to a man.

"For centuries," he says, "women have ruled the world, and they still are holding the whip hand. Femininity is the one thing man cannot conquer.

"He may overcome another man or even nature's elements. Giant ocean liners now withstand the most severe storms. Airplanes cross the continent in a few hours. Buildings can be erected to withstand earthquakes or hurricanes. Mammoth rivers can be harnessed and put to work.

"But feminine beauty stands supreme and unconquered."

HAVING delivered this apostrophe, Carroll goes on to illustrate the matter with observations on life as it is lived in Hollywood.

"Our biggest stars are women, women who dictate what others can do," he says. "And they are the biggest stars because other women throughout the world want to find out what there is about them that so captivates men.

"Take Garbo as an example. One word from her sends a hundred men to do her bidding. And they do it willingly. That's what makes women supreme. The acts men do for them are done willingly."

And the famous producer of "The Vanities" has observations other than those made in Hollywood and on Broadway to support his thesis. He can go back into history to prove his point.

The beautiful and blond Helen of Troy, he points out, caused a great big war. Because of his love for the glamorous Cleopatra of Egypt, Julius Caesar waged a bitter war against Pharnaces. And although Napoleon finally divorced his famous Josephine in order to marry Marie Louise and get an heir to the throne, it was for the approving smile of Josephine that he waged his early wars and won his greatest victories.

Laurie Shevlin, lovely "Vanities" girl of the type which, says her boss, rules the world.

Having conducted this survey of the past, Carroll comes down to modern times and remarks that it was women who were largely the cause of America entering the World War.

OFFICIALLY, he says, it was the ruthless sinking of ships and the killing of American citizens by the German submarines that led the United States into the conflict; however, little was said of the men who were killed—it was the killing of women and children that made Americans ready, and even eager, to fight.

"I defy," says Carroll, "anyone to name me a great man whose deeds that made him great have not been influenced by a woman. Men who strive for immense fortunes or great power do so because they want to stand out in the eyes of a woman—or, perhaps, in the eyes of many women. They may do it for love or for hate, but still it is women they most want to impress.

"Women, on the other hand, have an entirely different slant on the scheme of things. They know that their power lies in their beauty. They are born with that knowledge, handed down to them through many generations. That is why all women want to be beautiful, why they take such painstaking care of themselves in order that they may remain beautiful for as many years as possible.

"It isn't that they care what other women think, or because of their pride, half as much as it is because they know that beauty is the thing that gives them their power over men.

"They don't pay the slightest heed to what other women think of them. If you don't believe that, notice some woman who is extremely popular with men and severely criticized by women. She is stone deaf to that criticism.

"DURING my years as a theatrical producer I have had innumerable opportunities to study the reactions of all classes of men to feminine beauty. I always try to get the most beautiful girls possible in my shows and they attract men from all walks of life—far more so than women with less beauty and considerably higher intelligence.

"I have seen millionaires, men who ride ruthlessly over all obstacles in the business world, become like putty in the hands of a pretty girl."

All of this, Carroll believes, is because women crave power and know that the only way in which they can get it is through some man. So, he says, they connive and cheme about ways of getting men. And they have the edge, in any such struggle, because they don't let ethical considerations hamper them.

A man, says the producer, is trained to observe a certain code of ethics in his business and as a rule he will carry that same moral code over into his private life. Hence he is no match for a woman, who knows no code and will stop at nothing to achieve her purpose.

All of this may sound just a trifle cynical. But there's more to come. Hear what Carroll has to say in elaboration of this theme:

"How many girls do you think would stick to a soda clerk if they had a chance to grab a millionaire? None at all.

"I have seen our own show girls, who I knew were in love with poor men, meet some wealthy man. And you could see that the poor chaps were immediately shoved into the background. Each one of the girls started setting a trap for the millionaire. He could give her things her poor lover couldn't, so the poor man invariably lost out.

"THE strange thing about this conflict between men and women is that men always think they are the aggressors. And their desire to possess such beauty, just as they crave the possession of more material things, is so great that they will do anything to keep it. Never once do they seem to realize that they are the ones possessed.

"I have known men to cheat and steal just in order to buy something for some girl. And if they're caught, or can't give her as much as she wants, she turns to someone else."

All of this, Carroll admits, places quite a responsibility on the shoulders of womankind. And when you stop to think about it, he points out, you get to wondering about the things that women might accomplish in the world, if they just set their minds to it.

"I have often wondered, while looking over a chorus of beautiful girls, just what they could do to this world if they wished," says Carroll, speculatively.

"Without a doubt they could exert a terrific influence, since they are among the most beautiful girls in the world and it has been proved time and again that feminine beauty is the most powerful of all weapons.

"Take a war, for example. Supposing a trench full of beautiful girls had been lined up opposite the Germans in the World War. Do you suppose the Germans would have attempted to shoot them down? Decidedly not. Instead, they would have been over in our trenches making love, and in all probability they would have stayed there permanently as willing prisoners.

"In fact, while it probably won't come in our day, I expect the time to come when there will be a terrific war between men and women—a far worse war than any the world has yet experienced.

"THAT day will come when the women tire of ruling the world through their male puppets and decide to do it directly. For centuries women have gradually been exerting their authority more and more. In many respects they are now placed on an equal plane with men. They have demanded and received this equality.

"Yet they don't want it to be too complete. For example, if a girl gets on a crowded street car, she expects a man to give up his seat to her. She looks upon that as her right. For the moment he becomes a mass of muscle and she a helpless weakling who must be protected by him at all costs.

"Naturally, such a condition is extremely favorable to women. And they are taking advantage of it to further their own interests until such a time as they are ready to rise and take complete control of the world. I wouldn't venture a guess as to what shape this rebellion will assume, but in all probability it will be a battle of wits, not one of brawn.

"In such a battle, the women would have all the advantage—since their minds work faster and they're not hampered by scruples.

"And when it's over feminine beauty will be in complete charge of world affairs. Instead of using subterfuges for gaining their ends through men, women will be openly giving orders to men."

And as the famous producer voiced this prediction of an approaching war between the sexes, the reporter let his mind wander to the thought—what a nice assignment it would be to be sent into the enemy's camp as a spy, when that war comes

Which Will Be the Baby of the Future—J
Climb "Mountains" and Solve His Own

WORLD'S BEST-EDUCATED BABY

Johnny Woods, two, blond and healthy, whose handsome head is full of "conditioned" brain-stuff, perhaps foreshadowing the child-training of the future — in the background, the great Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center of New York, which is Baby Johnny's day-school.

OUGHT TO RISE IN LIFE

Here's Baby Johnny in the act of ascending a slide tilted at 60 degrees from the floor — watching him to guard against a fall is Dr. Myrtle B. McGraw, who originated the remarkable experiment and is personally seeing it through.

Johnny could rollerskate almost as soon as he could walk — today, though he can hardly lift the skates, he scoots around most expertly.

Copyright, 1934,

THE world's most amazing baby. That, undoubtedly, is Mr. Johnny Woods of New York City, two, blond and handsome. Already Johnny has been written about and discussed more than any other baby of our time.

His twin brother, Mr. Jimmy Woods, has had his share of scientific attention too. But it's a negative share. In the far-reaching baby-training experiment of which these twins are the subjects, science is using little twin Jimmy as a sort of negative example. That's a rather blunt way of putting it, but there it is—and wait before you say it's discriminatory or unfair. There are two sides to this story.

Scientists, child-experts, are training little Johnny as child was never trained before, and incidentally making him famous at 24 months of age. A book is due to be published about him this Fall. History has him all slated as the outstanding pioneer in the Babies' Revolution. Babies of the future, whose whole lives may be drastically changed by what Johnny Woods is showing the world in regard to baby-conditioning methods, are confidently expected to revere his memory and praise his name.

Wouldn't it be funny if it worked out the other way—if future babies regarded Johnny as the foundation of all their woes, and Jimmy, plain little unconditioned Jimmy, as their pioneer of liberty?

It's possible, when you consider the facts.

From the day he was three weeks old, Johnny has been trained. He now does remarkable stunts. No question about his accomplishments. He climbs, he swims, he rollerskates, he retrieves things, he lets himself down from dizzy heights. He does his daily dozen, he understands complicated orders and obeys them. To see him perform is a treat—it's incredible. But——

There's Jimmy, Johnny's "identical" twin. In this experiment in infant education, Jimmy is only the "control." He's just a baby—laughing, gurgling, playing, fooling away his time as babies have always done.

And many of the neighbors and friends who drop in at the Woods' home and play with the twins and compare them, seem to prefer the little unconditioned Jimmy!

He's less serious. More affectionate and lovable. Jimmy has the social personality that gets its way with a grin. He even, in his baby way, asserts himself over Brother Johnny, uses him as a messenger-boy. He's got a way with him, has Jimmy!

Now, daily life and success in this world being broadly human propositions, maybe highly-educated Johnny has the edge and maybe he hasn't. Maybe the problem of adjustment to successful life is larger than any science can grasp. Dr. Myrtle B. McGraw, psychologist and assistant director of the Child Development Clinic at New York's Medical Center has formally reported the really extraordinary results gained with Johnny. The human, intimate material, which favors Jimmy, isn't to be learned from the parents, who have promised the Medical Center authorities not to talk about the twins; but from a reportorial round-up of interested observers and acquaintances. The issue so raised is a big one—"conditioning" or natural growth? Johnny or Jimmy—which shall be the baby of the future?

These twins weren't born with any silver spoons in their mouths. Dennis Woods, their father, drives a taxicab in Winter, and being an old ball-player, is a caretaker at the Polo Grounds in Summer. There are five older brothers and sisters — pretty good assurance that the twins wouldn't be over-petted or spoiled. Their prominence arose through the chance fact that, when Mrs. Florence Woods gave birth to "identical" twins at the Sloane Hospital for Women on April 18, 1932, Dr. McGraw was looking for just such twins for her long-desired, carefully-considered experiment.

The idea was to get duplicate infants, not child-geniuses or infant chess-players but simply normal kids; train one by the full resources of up-to-date child-science, leave the other untrained. "Identical" twins were necessary. As you know, there are two sorts of twins, monozygotic and dizygotic. The latter are independent individuals, but the monozygotic or "identical" twins were actually one life to begin with, two products from a single cell; hence they have as nearly as possible the same sets of genes, or inheritance-characters. And any drastic differences that ever developed between them would result from the training, and serve to measure its effects.

So the Woods family, out of a clear sky, received an amazing offer. If they would turn the

TO ALL FUTURE BABIES

DEAR Babies of Tomorrow and All the Days Thereafter: At New York's great Medical Center they are trying out a scientific experiment that may have a big effect on your lives. If Johnny Woods turns out to be the more successful twin, you'll be "conditioned" as he has been. If Jimmy Woods wins out, you'll be left to grow up naturally, as he is doing. The test is on. So before it's decided forever, remember this: Your parents didn't have your advantages. Whatever you become, don't be snooty toward them. Remember where you got the traits you're developing so highly and say to yourself: "They'd have been as wonderful as I am, given the chance!"

The Baby Won in the End

DR. W. N. KELLOGG, Indiana University psychologist, raised his son Donald with a baby chimpanzee of the same age, Gua. He wanted to see which baby had the better brain. Dressed alike, they played together constantly—the picture shows them playing with blocks—and at first all the honors went to Gua. At 16 months he was far ahead of the human child in athletic ability, all muscular traits, and ability to remember and choose. Also Gua's senses were keener. But then the chimp quit progressing—and Baby Donald went ahead! The professor decided it was due to a different life-span, Donald being destined to live much longer than his simian fellow-baby. But then, Baby Donald wasn't especially "conditioned"—maybe the early stages of the experiment would have resulted differently if he had had training like Johnny Woods.

Meet Elmer, a Child Prodigy

HERE'S a baby of the rare sort that needs no "conditioning" — 5-year-old Elmer Schoenberger, child prodigy. Youngsters of Elmer's sort happen along only a few times per century. He talked at six months, and proceeded to master with amazing rapidity not only vocabulary but the ideas too, so that at 3 he knew all about Boulder Dam, including its purposes, costs and statistics, could read grown-up books, and had so retentive a memory that he listened to a half-hour radio address on a prohibition topic and reeled it off hours later, word for word. Elmer knows French and German and lately has been much concerned over the airmail situation. He speaks on current topics, at church meetings. With it all, Elmer is healthy and large for his age and is fond of outdoor sports. At five, he enjoys about eighth-grade educational rating. Elmer wouldn't have fitted Dr. McGraw's educational experiment—he's too unusual.

UP-AND-OVER, PHYSICAL,

YOU may lack scientific skill to "condition" your baby as Dr. McGraw has "conditioned" Johnny Woods, but you can exercise him just the same. These photos show a system of baby-calisthenics worked out at the Manhattan Maternity Home and Dipensary, New York. Stretching is the important thing—the baby can flex or "curl" himself. Put the baby on a pad-covered table, against the wall; stand at his head. Then extend his ins over to the Medical Center each day for o years, a nurse would call for one or both of m in the morning and return at night. They uld be well cared for and, in one case, elabo-ely "conditioned." Later, their educational hs would be eased and they would get schol-hips to Columbia University.

But Jimmy's a charming and jolly baby, and if you saw the two together you might pick him for the "conditioned" one—so say the Woods family's friends and visitors. They're betting that Jimmy will be boss as the boys get older. Fact is, he's boss now!

This looked good to the Woods parents, so it s been done. The experiment started on the ns' 20th day and will conclude in July. Johnny ving been two pounds lighter than Jimmy at th and, apparently, the weaker child, was ked for the conditioning process. He's the avier and stronger now. Let's see what has ppened to him.

From the outset, Johnny was given special ercises. His feeding, hours of sleep, clothing d daytime environment were the scientific last rd. People have been nice to him, but not ponily affectionate. Almost from the start, mental and physical training ran hand in nd.

Tiny Johnny took to his course of sprouts mazingly. Babies' brains, as science now knows, very keen. The same truth is perceived by rents who have rocked a little mite of human-ity to sleep just once or twice, only to find that forever after they demand rocking. But Johnny wasn't rocked. He was praised for performing certain feats, rather than petted to keep him quiet. His infant sense of self-approval was scientifically directed along certain lines. He swiftly learned to do that for which he was approved of.

Grasping things with his baby hands, he was led on to chin himself. Creeping, he was gradually taught to climb steep slides. Standing, he was made to balance himself on elevations. Walking, he learned to rollerskate at an age when most babies can barely toddle. When he reached out for objects across the room, he was schooled to go and get them.

And always he was made to feel safe, and pleased. The inhibitions due to bumps, pain and mishaps were carefully avoided. So he learned courage.

Results were astonishing. His skill grew. At 19 months, which wasn't long ago, Johnny did his stuff before a highly distinguished audience at the Medical Center. Dr. Frederick Tilney and Dr. Stewart Paton, foremost American neurologists, were present. So was Professor John Dewey, famous philosopher. So was a whole roomful of noted educators, child specialists, physicians and psychologists. So—as a "control"—was charming, uneducated Brother Jimmy.

You should have seen Johnny, that educated kid! A picture of confidence and remarkable muscular control, he ran around the stage looking for something to do. He was given a man's hat, then it was taken away, and Dr. McGraw said:

"Johnny, get the hat."

He obeyed promptly, quite serious about it. Then, similarly, he retrieved a bell, a pencil, a spoon and a half-dozen other objects. He even picked each one out by name when they were all put on the floor together. An object strange to Johnny—it was the model of a human brain—was put there too, and when he was told, "Johnny get the brain," he thought matters over and selected it by process of elimination.

Jimmy, meanwhile, sat there grinning joyously, absent-mindedly playing with a whistle.

Johnny next performed on the adjustable slide. At first it was put at only a slight angle, and he climbed it easily. Then the steepness was gradually increased until it was at 61 degrees, and he climbed it each time.

They put Jimmy on the slide, barely tilted, and he bawled.

Then Johnny was put way up on top of a six-foot wooden stand. Was he scared? He wasn't. He smiled, then on Dr. McGraw's command he confidently leaped into space to be caught in her arms. She put him back up there, and he grasped the edges like a gymnast, lowered himself to the length of his arms and dropped easily down upon his feet.

Jimmy, when they put him on a stool, sat there and grinned so winsomely that everyone cried: "Aw, take him down!" And they did.

Johnny next roller-skated. The skates were so heavy he could hardly lift his feet. But he scooted around with most amazing competence. Johnny's swimming-lessons had started when he was only seven months old, and by now he could swim clear across a men's tank—under water! And he does a very creditable job of diving, too.

So the scientists talked about "untapped resources" and "conditioned reflexes" and "the ability to cope with life" and so on, and some of them thought Johnny was pretty close to revealing the real key to the phenomenon of the human will. Baby-raising may be revolutionized. Maybe, as in Novelist Aldous Huxley's dream, it'll be a "Brave New World."

But don't feel sorry for poor, neglected little Jimmy—yet. Listen to the home story first!

People who drop in to visit the Woods family note that it's Jimmy, not Johnny, that's always ready for a romp.

Johnny is the more self-contained, Jimmy is the noisier and a great deal more playful.

He loves life, does Jimmy. He's the more exuberant twin.

"If you saw them together, it's a ten to one bet you'd pick out Jimmy as the 'conditioned one'," said one observer.

At play, Johnny tends to limit himself to what he's been taught. He gravely climbs chairs, beds and tables, gets things, lets himself down from high places. Jimmy, true kid that he is makes up his own happy games. It's a bit strange sometimes to come into the room and behold Johnny perching on top of a table where he has climbed. Jimmy seems more inventive.

Both youngsters are brave, but it's true that Johnny can "take it" better than his unconditioned twin. But a still more interesting thing has developed:

Though he's barely two, inexpert Jimmy has learned to boss well-trained and docile Johnny!

Yes, sir, when a ball rolls across the floor or there's a doll on the table, Jimmy says, with a charming grin: "Johnny get!"

And Johnny gets. So the query arises:

Will Jimmy be a boss some day, Johnny a guy who takes orders?

Previous child-experiments have sometimes had a kickback due to the child's own feeling of being an exception. School children listed in the "genius" class by the mental-testing experts have sometimes turned out to be self-conscious prigs rather than geniuses. Is Johnny, by his unusual training, being actually qualified for a better degree of success in human society, or is he being set apart, with a chance of becoming peculiar?

Only the future can answer. But not long ago Mrs. Winifred Stoner Hyman, one-time child mental prodigy whose second marriage had ended in divorce, spoke strongly against unusual training. At 5 she was famed for her ability to speak several languages, recite poetry, and so on. At 30, speaking with tense feeling, she declared:

"If ever I have a child I shall send him or her to school and allow him or her to grow up and develop in the normal, healthy manner. None of the sort of abnormal mockery that I went through! I want my child to be happy in normal surroundings and with other human beings—I don't want a museum piece. I was just about the unhappiest child in the world simply because I could tell a Maltese cat from a pterodactyl. Brains? Bah! I hate brains!"

NEXT WEEK—The biggest Wild West anti-outlaw drive in the past generation of American history—that's what was lately staged out in Oklahoma, in the notorious Cookson Hills. Militia, sharp-shooting sheriff's men, police squads from four States, Federal agents—all cooperated in blockading the mountain stronghold of "Pretty Boy" Floyd, Ford Bradshaw, Clyde Barrow and 60 other bandits who have terrorized the West. Ernest Jerome Hopkins tells the vivid battle-story here next week—with its surprising outcome.

ɔNDITIONING—YOU CAN TRY THIS ON YOUR OWN BABY

ıs, and raise him to a seated posture—as in the first pictures.

Make him think it's play, and of course be gentle ugh about it—Baby isn't a football player yet. Do arm-stretching and lifting exercises a few times, be-e the bath. Then try the ones in the third and fourth tures. Turn the baby around so he faces you, then e him by the hands from the table, just slightly, and rward let him relax to a lying posture. He'll think it's fun—as it really is—if you do it right.

Finally, while he's lying down, do the leg exercises. These are important. Your baby's legs, like Babe Ruth's, are weaker than the rest of him. Stretch him gently, then bring them back to their usual curled-up position. Finally, as in the right-hand photo, there's the tummy-kneading exercise, which makes the abdominal and chest muscles firm, steps up the circulation, and—generally—tickles the youngster himself to beat the band.

This photo-study of the Woods babies shows what differences science has already developed between the "identical" twins—Jimmy, untrained but sweet and charming, is at the left, and Johnny, larger and more energetic, is at the right.

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

ONE WHO WAS HIDING.

MONDAY.—We boys met today after school to make plans to find Gideon's hiding place. We tried to make Lanky Lanigan tell us where the place was in which Gideon had him tied hand and foot last week, but Lanky is a scared boy. There's something about it that makes Lanky afraid to talk. Ever since the poor kid got out of that place, he has been jumpy and nervous. Every little sound makes him nearly jump out of his skin. He shook his head when I asked him if he could lead us back to the hiding place. He says Gideon jumped on him and nearly knocked him out, and tied his hands and made him walk up the path a piece, and then tied a handkerchief around his eyes before going the rest of the way. "Well," said our captain, Dick Ferris, "tomorrow we will try to find the place, Lanky, and you just try to remember, and see if you can't give us an idea where it was." Lanky was willing enough. "All right," he says, "just give me time to think."

• • • •

TUESDAY. — Lanky did not show up when we met today. So after our meeting was adjourned, we all went down to the little houseboat on the river, in which Lanky and his daddy live. Before we could step on the gangplank, Lanky's daddy came out and held his finger to his lips. "Don't make any noise," he said, "Lanky is sick in bed." We all backed up the bank a piece, and then the houseboat door opened and Doc Waters came out. He stopped to talk to Lanky's daddy in a low voice; we couldn't hear what he said. Then he came up the bank. "Hello, boys," he said, "I'm sorry to tell you Lanky can't play with you today—he's in bad shape—his nerve is gone; he must have had a terrible scare of some kind." We boys felt too sorry to speak. We walked up the bank with Doc and when he left us, he asked us not to bother poor old Lanky, and maybe he would be all right again in a few days.

• • • •

WEDNESDAY.—While we were holding our meeting today, Lanky's daddy came to our clubhouse and told us Lanky was some better today. We were glad to hear that. "But what I came for," said Lanky's pop, "was to tell you that there was some strange man around here today—I saw him peeping in the window of this clubhouse." We thanked him for telling us, and as soon as he left we went ahead with our meeting. Just as we were about to adjourn, there came a knock on the door. Perry Stokes ran to open it. In came a tall man. None of us had ever seen him before. He took off his hat and we saw he was bald-headed. "I hope you will pardon me," he said, with a little bow, "but I'm looking for a boy who visited your clubhouse here not long ago. You would remember him easily, I know, because he had just lately had his head shaved—in fact, he was almost as bald as I am." The man smiled as he said that. "No, sir," said Dick Ferris, politely, "we don't know where he is. He did come here for a few minutes last week, but we didn't follow him so we don't know where he is."

The man gave us another smile and a little bow and said "Thank you, and good day to you!" And he clapped his hat upon his head and went out. Just as soon as he was gone, Jerry Moore jumped up and said: "Dick, that man is after the Shaved Head kid, to take him back to the school for bad boys where he broke out of!" Dick gave the table a whack with his wooden hammer, and said: "The next fella who says anything about that Shaved Head breaking out of reform school is going to get fired out of this club. Makes no difference if it's true or not—that Shaved Head kid helped us to get Lanky out of Gideon's den and he was pretty fair and square with Lanky, and that's why we haven't got any right to give him away now." None of us boys had anything to say after that speech. And so Dick added: "I hope all you fellas un'erstand me." Which we did.

• • • •

THURSDAY.—Jerry Moore was absent at our meeting today, but he came in about half an hour late and said he thought he had found Gideon's hiding place. He took us up to the Cliff Path and half way up he dodged to the left through some prickly bushes, and there was a rocky side of the hill that looked as if lightning had struck the rock and split it, and it was all black and scorched. We tiptoed after him into a cave between two split rocks. The farther we went, the darker it got. All of a sudden Jerry fell flat and lay upon his stomach. We did the same. And then I was so surprised I nearly lost my balance. We were looking down into a hole, and it seemed that we were looking right through the hill, from the roof to the floor! It was not a wide cave; it seemed that the rocks had been split this way and that all the way down. "Goodnight!" I said to Jerry. "I didn't know this place was here!" And all at once it seemed as if there were a lot of other boys all the way down that dark chasm saying the same thing I had just said, one repeating it right after the other! Jerry jumped up quick. "Come on!" he says. "The echo of your voice is going down that deep cave—and maybe Gideon is in there right now—he's got a double-barrel gun, too—I saw it!" And with that then we hurried out of that place.

• • • •

FRIDAY.—Today we had a visit from the two Pelham fellows, Briggen and Ham Gardner. We were just sitting around our long pine table to hold our meeting. "We just came to tell you that Gideon and the Shaved Head kid were in your clubhouse here this morning; they were pulling up the floorboard where you keep your money, and we saw 'em when we peeped in the window." Dick Ferris laughed. "Good for Gideon!" he says, "we put one over on him—we took our tin money box out last night." Briggen frowned. "Yeah," he said, "but you can't beat Gideon. He'll burn down this clubhouse next." Dick said: "Are you trying to scare us, Briggen?" And Briggen answered: "No, but we are tired of this Gideon's foolishness — we want to get him quick! Him and the Shaved Head, too." And at this, I got up out of my chair and walked over to Briggen. "Listen, Briggen," I said, "go back to your side of the river and rest easy. In a little while we will settle this Gideon fellow, once and for good." Briggen didn't seem to like it, and he gave me a surly look. "All right," he said, "we'll see what you're gonna do about it." And with that, then, they left.

• • • •

SATURDAY. — No school today, and down at the clubhouse early. We held our meeting and talked about hunting farther in Gideon's hiding place, but some of the boys felt like playing ball or going skiff riding on the river, and they skipped out as soon as the meeting adjourned. But Dick and Jerry and I sat back in my little writing room and talked, and all of a sudden we heard the door open, and looking out into the meeting room we saw Lanky Lanigan. He looked pale. His face looked kind of sad. "I've been sick," he said, slowly, "but I come to take you fellas to Gideon's hiding place." We all hurried over to him and took his hand and shook it. "Lanky," said our captain, "just tell us how to get there—we don't want you to go, because you've been sick and we don't want you to walk that far." Lanky sat down in one of the chairs by the table. "Get me a paper and pencil," he says, and Dick brought it to him. For half an hour he sat there, drawing a rough kind of map showing the way to get to Gideon's hiding place, and explained all the marks by which we could find our way. I said to him: "Lanky, there's been a strange man watching our clubhouse all week, so you keep your eyes open, because he is after the Shaved Head." Lanky looked worried. "I'll stay right here," he said in a low voice. I said: "All right, Lanky, we will be back as soon as we can."

It must have been 3 o'clock by the time we reached the place where Lanky's map said we must start to climb the cliffs. Lanky's map showed the opening was a hole in the cliff with a top like the half of an umbrella. We looked a long time until at last Bill Darby found it. We ran up to the place he called from, and Dick said: "Who's going in first?" I stepped up and said: "I'll go. Follow me!" And I led the way into the dark cave. But before I had gone three feet, I heard a voice from the darkness call out:

"Don't come a step nearer! Stand where you are!"

It surprised us. We all fell back, suddenly. We stumbled back to the opening. Coming out of the cave with a rifle pointed straight at us was the Shaved Head boy, Danny Mann! He came came close up and said: "I know you are coming for me, you low-down cowards! And ain't you ashamed of yourself to hunt down a poor fella who done you a good turn!"

I stepped up in front of our fellows. "Danny," I said, "I led 'em here. Your gun's pointed straight at me—now, if you got the heart to shoot, why go ahead and shoot!" He held the rifle pointed at me for a full minutes—but I didn't move. Danny Mann gave a little cry and lowered the gun. "It's no use!" he cried, "Hawkins, you win! I ain't got the heart to do it—come on, turn me over to the guard." He dropped the gun and covered his face with his arm. I walked over to him and put my hand on his shoulder. "What's the matter with you, Danny?" I asked. "What kind of a guard are you talkin' about?" He lifted his head and laughed, but there was a false ring to that laugh . . . seemed more like he was crying than laughing. "How can you stand there and ask me that?" he cried. "You know the guard from the reform school is on my trail!"

He came close up and said: "I know you are coming for me."

I didn't have time to answer. Somebody was coming up the path. We all turned and looked. It was Lanky and the strange tall man who had come to our clubhouse, asking about the Shaved Head. Lanky seemed to be happy—he was grinning. "I told you I would find him, Mister Glendover!" said Lanky to the strange tall man, "and here he is!" And with that, then, he ran up to the shaved headed Danny Mann and said: "Danny, Mister Glendover wants you to come back with him!"

The Shaved Head turned quickly to look at the strange man. His face was like stone. But all of a sudden there came a smile, and with a glad cry he ran over to the stranger man. "Oh, Mister Glendover!" he cried. "And I thought you were a guard from the reform—"

Lanky stepped up and put his hand over Danny's mouth. "Mister Glendover wants you, Danny," says Lanky. "He says he won't scold you any more, and he says I can come up to see you every week if you will go back to work in the gardens with him."

Danny said he would go. He said he would be so glad to go, he wouldn't know how to thank Mr. Glendover, because he liked to work in the gardens better than in the School for Bad Boys. And that's the story, as I wrote it down every day this week, what happened and how. It wasn't a guard from the School for Bad Boys. No, sir! It was the gardener from Watertown, who took the Shaved Head in and gave him work when Lanky had asked him to do so. We forgot all about Gideon's hiding place. We followed Danny Mann and Lanky and the gardener man down the path. The gardener had his arm around Danny's shoulder. The Shaved Head was trying his best to keep from crying. 'It's all right, Danny," the gardener was saying to him, "we will go right back and see to those geraniums and the honeysuckle and the pinks and the ramblers—and say!" He turned suddenly to Lanky. "When you get a chance, I want you to make all these fellows of the fair and square club come up and see our gardens.

Which we did.

Dear Pen Pals:

Along about this time of the year we boys begin to figure on where we are going to make our summer camp, where we are going to dig our bait, and how many fish we are going to catch. There is a cozy little nook down on the river bank where the willows make a graceful canopy over your head, and you can throw your line in most any time and get a good bite right off the reel. Good times, fishing and swimming, rowing or canoeing, and a good game of baseball . . . and oh, boy; no school all summer.

I think most of our pen pals will be writing about summer time this week. And what a nice subject! Some of our pen pals get discouraged easily, and if the first two or three attempts at letter writing don't win a book, they give up. But they are not the ones who hold the motto that a "Quitter Never Wins." It's the fellow who can smile when he fails, and then starts right up and tries again—yes, sir! he's the one who is sure to be a success some day.

Boys and girls all over are interested in what other boys and girls are doing, and it is interesting to receive postcards from members in far-away places. Some of our members write me that they have a collection of cards and letters from members in 30 to 40 different states, as well as from foreign countries. This pastime is almost as interesting if not more so than stamp collecting.

Now we present the lucky pen pals whose letters win a book of our club's earlier adventures down on the old river bank. The first one today is from a pen pal who lives in dear old Georgia, and who tells about his interesting trip in the coal mines:

Dear Seck:

I am a genuine "Georgia Cracker" but I lived in Jellico, Tenn., for about two years. It was up in the Appalachian mountains and many coal mines were located near it.

I visited several of these, but the most interesting one was at Anthros, Tenn. There were two high mountains. On one of these was the mine and on the other side of the other mountain was the railroad. Between these two mountains suspended about 600 feet in the air was a cable, one and a half miles long. It was held up by two steel towers. On this cable 76 buckets were hung, each holding half a ton of coal. The buckets were carried back and forth across the valley from the mine to the railroad. In the mine electric engines pulled small cars filled with coal.

Some of you pen pals write me and I will tell you more about the coal mines I visited.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANK LEE HENDERSON JR.,
Turin, Ga.

The meeting will now adjourn till next week, when we meet again on this page. Don't put off writing your letter—send it in as early as you can. And perhaps it will be read in one of our meetings soon.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Dear Seck:

How is everything down on the old river bank this fine weather?

We had a contest in school and I won first place in music and poems. Here is the one that I won on:

'TIS SPRINGTIME.

Away o'er the hills and meadows,
Away o'er the valley and dale
You can hear the song of the mocking-birds
Who are telling their wonderful tales.

"Spring is here! Spring is here!"
All the birds cry—
Their music comes forth and sounds
Like the music of the lyre.

You can see the violets and daisies
Peeping from under the snow—
For they have regained their beauty
Which they lost long ago.

You can hear all the birds singing—
The robin, the jay, and the dove—
Who come from away over the valley
Singing the songs which we love.

So when you hear the mocking-bird
Singing so sweet and clear
You know he is singing of Springtime,
A song which we all love to hear.

Yours, fair and square,
MATTIE DEAN, 16,

Dear Seck:

I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade at Akin District school. I have light sandy hair, fair complexion and light blue eyes. I live in the country and have a fine time.

I guess, as you would call it, I have been a lucky girl. Last summer my two aunts took my first cousin and I to Lookout mountain, Tennessee; Mammoth Cave, Kentucky; the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Washington, D. C. I saw so much and if I could remember all I saw and could tell it, I do believe it would take a long time. I also went to Warm Springs last summer.

Saturday, April 14, I went to a play at Rehoboth clubhouse. They were selling chances on a quilt and I bought one. After the play was over a little girl drew a slip of paper and I was the lucky one to get the quilt. I also went to a play April 20, the name was "Silas Smidge From Turnip Ridge." It sure was funny..

Our school was out May 8.

Yours, fair and square,
ELIZABETH BILES,
Route B, Griffin, Ga.

Dear Seck:

We went to Lakin, Kan., about two years ago. It was all right except for the sandstorms and the heavy snows. Sometimes the snow would cover the fences and you could walk over them. We moved to Bishop, Ga. It took us seven days to come. It was 1,400 miles. We lived in Bishop about a year and moved to Athens, Ga.

I have two grown bantams. One has five small chickens. Their ways are very interesting. We have a greyhound dog. It is black with white feet and can run very fast.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY SUE SKELTON, 12,

THE COMING OF SPRING.

There's something in the air
That's new and sweet and rare;
A scent of summer things,
A whir as if of wings.

There's something, too, that's new
In the color of the blue
That's in the morning sky,
Before the sun is high.

And though on plain and hill
'Tis winter, winter still;
There's something seems to say
That winter's had its day.

And all this changing tint,
This whispering stir and hint
Of bud and bloom and wing,
Is the coming of the spring.

And tomorrow, or today,
The brooks will break away
From their icy, frozen sleep
And run and laugh and leap.

Yours, fair and square,
RUBY GOBER,
R. F. D. No. 1, Hiram, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am going to tell you about an exciting trip I made last summer to Bald mountain, which is known to be the largest mountain in Georgia. There were nine in the group.

One beautiful Friday morning as the sun was peeping over the mountains we started on our journey in a wagon because the road was too rough for a car to travel. We went about half way and left our wagon, because that was as far as we could go with it, and walked the rest of the way. We arrived at the camping ground about 3 o'clock. We rested there for an hour, cooked our supper and ate, then went on to the top which affords one of the most beautiful scenes in north Georgia.

We then set about making our beds. By the time we had our beds ready and a good fire burning the sun was beginning to change into a glorious panorama of colors. Oh, Seck! I wish I'd been an artist! What an opportunity to paint a picture.

But we cannot hope to blend colors as God does in his touch on nature. All too soon the sun was gone, leaving a misty haze of beauty hanging over the horizon. But as we turned from the west, behold the moon in her splendor was peeping over the eastern rim. We didn't sleep much that night for looking at the fleecy clouds floating over our heads. The city of Hiawassee looked like a huge birthday cake with candles burning. Next morning it was with reluctance we turned homeward, tired but happy.

Yours, fair and square,
IMO JEAN DYER,
Route 2, Box 59, Blairsville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

My favorite sport is playing baseball. But I like football, too, though I cannot play much. I like to play marbles, too. I live in the mountains of north Georgia but we do not have any snow. I skate sometimes. I was 12 years old on December 16. I have blue eyes, brown hair and about 4 feet 9 inches high. I am in the sixth grade.

Yours, fair and square,
ROBERT WHEELER.
Concord, Ga.

Today's Prize.

Dear Seck:

Your little talk about Mother's Day carries me back to the first song I sang alone, "I Have a Sweetheart, and Mother Is Her Name," which I dedicated to my mother.

As I stepped out on that beautifully decorated stage, with a large starry-eyed audience facing me and an orchestra behind me, my heart was overflowing with pride, love and admiration for my mother's face, which was sweetly smiling up at me from the audience.

I have always felt honored over getting to sing this song to my mother, and other mothers, on this wonderful occasion.

It seems as though I never quite understood my mother, and what she means to me, until I sang that song, and in the future it is one of my ambitions to keep showing the love, respect and admiration which I possess for that mother of mine.

Yours, fair and square,
JANELLE HILL.
Alma, Ga.

PETUNIAS FOR WINDOW BOXES AND BEDS -:- By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN

THE time has come that we may begin to think of filling our windows and porch boxes with the beautiful annual plants, such as the petunias, illustrated. In fact, unless our weather forecaster does us wrong, it looks as if these may be planted out-of-doors now with very little, if any, danger of their being injured by frost.

We have seen some of the more courageous soul, planting these tender annuals more than two weeks ago. There are some of us who have to live in apartments, and these people must be satisfied with a few window boxes and fernerries filled with some of these gorgeous petunias. These may be planted along with some of the other box plants such as ferns or coleus. The coleus add a bit of color to the fernery or window box that cannot be supplied by any other plant, but somehow or other, there is not a plant that can add the continuous beauty that some of the petunias can.

There is a feeling of happiness that always comes when seeing a mass of the delicate pink Rosy Morn petunias with their beautiful, delicate rose-colored [illegible] fading to white at the base. These dwarf plants love the sun and will bloom continuously throughout the summer, with no more than ordinary attention.

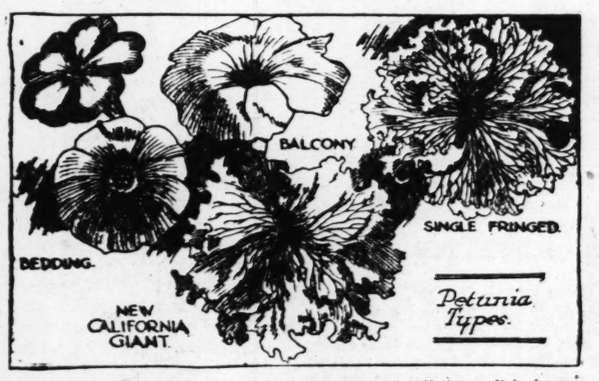

Petunias are heavy feeders and it is almost impossible to feed them too much. For several seasons our Rosy Morn petunias were not as beautiful, their colors not as distinct, nor the foliage as luxuriant a green as should have been the case, until we found that they were undernourished. I guess they were just before having a good case of the rickets.

We started feeding them once a week with a small application of good commercial fertilizer of a 10-6-4 analysis, and soon found that this had been our whole trouble. The coloring deepened apparently; the foliage had a more healthy green, and the bugs seemed to vanish. From that time on, our petunias were much more beautiful. We pass our experience along for what it is worth—perhaps you have long ago learned that lesson.

In case of all of the window box or fernery plants, it is well to prepare the soil thoroughly before the plants are placed in the box, for best results. The usual mixture used for best results is one part of sheep manure and three parts of thoroughly sifted top soil. It is also a good plan to add a little peat moss and a little commercial fertilizer.

After the plants are placed in the box, be sure to fertilize them often for the very best growth. Watering is always important and a great deal of judgment is necessary to keep the soil in the proper condition. For beautiful flowers on the plants at all times, the soil should never be allowed to become completely dried out. On the other hand, the soil should not stay soaking wet, as there is always danger of its becoming sour

In planting petunias in flower beds, or in the flower border, a different set of conditions is prevalent and a little different care and planting is necessary. The petunia likes a warm location, all the sun there is, and an abundant supply of moist, but well-drained, soil. Water-logging is not to its liking. Plant petunias 18 inches apart to secure maximum development. The reward will be well worth the misgivings when first set out at this distance apart. When it takes hold the petunia is a rapid grower and it won't be long before the plants meet. This applies particularly to the bedding sorts, such as Rosy Morn. The double and fringed sorts are not capable of such rampant growth and should be planted not more than 10 to 12 inches apart.

Petunia Types.

One of the greatest troubles that we have found in porch boxes and ferneries is the proper selection of plants for these boxes. We mean by that, the selection of flowers that will grow vigorously in the particular location.

Flowers for Shady Boxes.

The first and most satisfactory plant for the shady location is the fern. All of the ferns like a shady, damp location. For a vine to trail over the edge of this box, in a shady location, we use wandering Jew, and it is most satisfactory. There are few plants that have the stateliness of the beautiful, well-kept fern. The common Boston fern is one of the satisfactory varieties here. The begonias also thrive well in boxes, and they may be well used in connection with the ferns. For a lacy effect, the asparagus plumosis fern may be used and it will grow just as satisfactorily as the beautiful Boston variety.

The crotons are fine foliage plants.

For Sunny Situations.

In the very hot, never shady, always sunny locations, the lantana will grow to perfection. For some reason this plant delights in the sun and will flower most profusely all through the summer. This past summer we watched them bloom until killing frosts came. Another beauty that has a habit of growth most similar to this plant is the verbena. For the past three or four years everyone has been planting the new Beauty of Oxford verbena and it is indeed a beauty. The beautiful rosy, pink flowers appear in early spring and continue there until frost makes its appearance But it is hard to beat our old friend, the petunia, after all.

The color of the Rosy Morn is liked by almost every flower-lover, and it will flower almost continuously throughout the summer. The masses of pink beauty are most striking when used in the sunny box. The dwarf varieties of phlox are fine in these boxes, too. The coleus, in spite of the fact that it is a foliage plant ,will really grow to best advantage when used in a sunny box.

By the way! One of the objections to the coleus has been removed recently. Science has triumphed over our old friend, the aphis! We can now speak of them as friends, since we are able to kill them so easily. There was a time that we referred to them only as enemies, when we had so much trouble getting rid of them. There are a number of new sprays that are built on a pyrethrum base, and these sprays are most effective when used to combat these aphides. It is very simple to spray them with these sprays, as it is only necessary to add a bit of this spray to some soapy water and thoroughly spray the plants with this mixture. The old remedies used were poisonous, but these pyrethrum sprays are absolutely harmless.

There is no danger of the baby or the dog, or cat, or what have you in your home, injuring themselves by mistaking this liquid for fine food. Too, these sprays are equally effective when used to combat the chewing insects. As a matter of fact, now that we have this spray, we often wonder just what was used before the discovery of the use of pyrethrum as a spray for insects of various kinds.

The fernery that is kept within the house has a problem all its own. There are plants that seem to be suited for the strange conditions that exist here. The most popular and easiest grown of these plants is the Boston fern. It thrives under these conditions and with the aid of a little feeding from time to time in the shape of some good fertilizer, will grow as well in the house as in its usual home. It is important that the fernery be kept moist at all times, but it is best for the soil never to become soppy wet.

For the protection of your home and for the good of the plants themselves, it is best to equip these ferneries with self-watering boxes. These may be secured at practically the same cost as the wooden boxes and will give the home perfect protection from the water, and the plants will grow fine.

Another favorite in the fernery is dracena. This plant has long, slender leaves, the central ones standing almost erect, and the lower outside leaves drooping

"The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures"

From the Only Copy in America, of "Icones Biblicae," Swiss Etcher Matthew Merian's Chronological Story of the Bible, Published in 1625, in Germany.

NO. 43.—"Moses Talks With God on Mount Sinai."—At the beginning of their wanderings in the wilderness Moses was not only the leader of the Israelites but also their sole judge. When Jethro, his father-in-law, came to Moses, bringing the latter's wife and two sons, he saw that the people brought all their problems, great and small, to Moses, a state of affairs which placed tremendous pressure on him. "Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee: thou art not able to perform it thyself alone," Jethro told Moses, as is recorded in Exodus xviii, 18. Acting on Jethro's advice, Moses appointed judges from among the people of Israel to judge the small matters, and he himself served as a final arbiter. Thus the Israelites were provided not only with a law—through the Ten Commandments and the comprehensive Mosaic Code given to them shortly afterward—but with a judiciary as well. The Ten Commandments were given to the Israelites and the Mosaic Covenant was ratified by God through Moses on Mount Sinai. The arrival of the children of Israel at Sinai and their preparations for receiving the Law are told in Exodus xix. "And the Lord came down upon Mount Sinai, on the top of the mount: and the Lord called Moses up to the top of the mount; and Moses went up." Exodus xix, 20.

NO. 44.—"The Form of the Tabernacle."—Moses spent forty days and forty nights on Mount Sinai. Here the Lord said to Moses: "And let them make me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them." Exodus xxv, 8. Then God gave orders for making the tabernacle, and His detailed instructions are recorded in Exodus xxv-xxvii. The form of the tabernacle is depicted above in the forty-fourth illustration of the Matthew Merian story of the Bible in pictures, engraved in 1625. At the left is the mercy seat with the two cherubim of gold made according to verse 18 of Exodus xxv. The table and its dishes, the six-branched candlestick, and various bowls and lamps, as well as some of the curtains described in Exodus xxvi, are included in the picture. Exodus xxvii tells of the consecration of Aaron and his sons to the priesthood, and of their vestments, including the breastplate of judgment, with the Urim and Thummim. After giving detailed instructions for the building of the tabernacle and the construction of all its contents, even to the composition of the holy oil used for anointing, and the perfume, the Lord told Moses that Bezaleel of the tribe of Judah, and Aholiab of the tribe of Dan, were to do the workmanship on the tabernacle. God then gave Moses instructions concerning observation of the Sabbath. "Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between Me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you." Exodus xxxi, 13. God declared that observance of the Sabbath should be a perpetual covenant between Him and the children of Israel. "And He gave unto Moses, when He had made an end of communing with him upon Mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God." Exodus xxxi, 18.

NO. 45.—"Moses Breaks the Stone Tables."—While Moses was on Mount Sinai receiving the Commandments from God, Aaron was in charge of the Israelites. "And when the people saw that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron, and said unto him, Up, make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him." Exodus xxxii, 1. Aaron had the people collect their golden earrings, and he cast them into a molten calf, which he fashioned with a graving tool. And the children of Israel worshipped the calf and made sacrifices to the image. This angered the Lord who threatened to Moses that He would destroy Israel. But Moses besought the Lord for mercy and He was appeased. "And Moses turned, and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hand: the tables were written on both their sides; on the one side and on the other were they written." Exodus xxxii, 15. When Joshua, who had accompanied Moses on his journey up the mountain, heard the noise of the people singing about the brazen calf, he spoke to Moses about it. "And it came to pass, as soon as he came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf, and the dancing: and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it." Exodus xxxii, 19, 20.

:-: Culbertson on Contract :-:

ABANDONING A LONG SUIT.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

IN DEFENDING a hand at notrump it is not only futile but foolish to continue the lead of a long suit when the hand holding it is entirely barren of entries. Rather the player should seek some other means of getting the tricks necessary to assure the defeat of the contract. It is of absolutely no value to have three or four long cards established as tricks only to be compelled later to discard them on the declarer's winners and to realize that the one favorable element for the defense was wasted in a futile manner in attempting the impossible.

An interesting example of the necessity of abandoning a long suit when the hand is void of entries occurred in a recent duplicate game in New York city. The hand was played in almost every instance at three no-trump by the declarer, and only in those cases where the holder of the West hand realized the advisability of playing not to establish his own suit but to establish his partner's winning cards was the contract defeated.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding at one table was: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
1♡	1NT	2♠ (1)	Pass
3◇	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Theoretically, the double of a bid of one no-trump would be better as, with correct defense, East would be severely penalized.

Where the contract of three no-trump was made, the opening lead was the club 6. East played the ace and immediately returned a club actually a better play by East at this point would have been the club 10 rather than the ace), which was overtaken by West, and a third round of the suit led, clearing the suit. South was now in the lead and led a spade to the dummy, East permitting the trick to hold. A spade was returned, East again ducked, and South won in his own hand. South again led a spade and East cashed his ace and returned the same suit. South cashed his remaining spades and then led a small diamond. He did not finesse but went up with the ace as in the meantime East had bared down to the king-knave of diamonds alone and the king-ten-8 of hearts. East was then thrown in the lead with the remaining diamond and forced to lead up to the heart tenace for the ninth trick.

The student will observe that had West at the beginning chosen to open a diamond or had he more probably shifted to a diamond after winning the second lead of clubs, South could not possibly have made the hand. In that case the element of time would run against the declarer as West would thus have utilized the time factor to the advantage and not the detriment of the defending players.

The deeper meanings of complex bidding situations can seldom be grasped "by ear." There are often hidden inferences underlying the seemingly commonplace bids which develop in the course of the auction, and an understanding of them will usually depend upon conscious analysis and reconstruction of the hands of all players. If this analysis is based upon orderly and sound mental processes, each step in the bidding scale will be found to tell a story of consummate clarity; if not, the bidder will find himself the victim of a slight error in calculations which may eventually lead him to an utterly erroneous conclusion.

All good bidding is characterized by its adherence to pure logic. When a series of bids are logical, they may be depended upon; when the slightest inconsistency arises the entire chain is weakened and no single link, not even the simplest, may be accepted without reservations. The only way to determine the true meanings of bids is to examine each step in the partnership bidding, considering the implication of strength and the denial of further strength involved whenever any bid is made.

Observe how similar the two following bidding situations are—and yet how different are the messages conveyed:

1. North	South
1♡	2♡
2NT	3♡—Semi-Sign-Off
2. North	South
1♡	2♣
2NT	3♡—Strength

In the first example, South's three-heart bid not only denies strength, but requests North to pass. South has raised the heart bid once—that might have been based on full values and it might have been a shaded raise to keep the bidding open. Now when offered an alternative no-trump contract, South cannot raise the no-trump and cannot raise the hearts—for his three-heart bid is only a preference as between two denominations which are offered, and to raise, South would have to bid four hearts.

But in the second example South shows strength and encourages North to bid. And the difference lies solely in the combination of inferences contained in South's original response of two clubs rather than two hearts. South must have adequate support for hearts—otherwise he could not assist a suit which has not been rebid. With adequate support and a minimum hand he would have preferred an immediate shaded raise to a suit takeout on the first round of bidding. Thus, South does not hold a minimum hand, and, after North's strong rebid of two no-trump, expects to reach a game. His three-heart bid in this case is not a preference—on the contrary, it offers North a choice of game contracts.

Yet on the first round South made a possible minimum response in each case—a simple takeout may always be as weak as a single raise—and on the second round made the identical bid in each case; and the minor change in formula sufficed to depict a variation in strength between the two possible responding hands which might equal 2 1-2 honor-tricks.

Any inconsistency in a sequence of bids shouts a warning signal to the bidder's partner to stop and think things over. Even when a player has made three bids and all were of a logical nature, if the fourth bid has an unnatural ring to it there is danger that the entire chain was "psychic."

gracefully. The leaves are of several shades of green, the coloring being in the direction of the leaf. It is most effective when used as a center piece for the fernery. Sometimes these plants have yellow and red centers, but this is not the usual case. The begonias will grow to advantage in a fernery used in the house and they are particularly effective used along with ferns.

In the bed that is filled with these annuals in the regular flower garden, there is one point that is well to bear in mind. This important point has to do with the supply of water. All of the flowers that we have mentioned are big water-drinkers. At the same time they prefer a well-drained location. For this reason, we would like to state that our experience has been that the addition of peat moss will tend to correct this tendency of the ground to dry out during the middle of summer.

The method that is generally followed in the case of the average flower bed is to cover the bed with this peat moss to a depth of one-half an inch. This peat moss is thoroughly worked into the soil with the use of a spading fork. The addition of peat moss to the soil makes the soil more friable, and everyone is surprised with the improvement in the flowers when this is added to the soil.

If your decision is to plant these flowers right away be sure to start right. It will save much trouble later on this summer. Have the soil in good shape. If it is possible, use some fresh woods earth with which there has been added a generous measure of sheep manure and bone meal. At the time that the plants are placed in the box or bed, add a good feeding of commercial fertilizer. This feeding should be repeated about once each week for the very best results.

CHIC AND CHARM IN CROWNS AND BRIMS

EVERY woman must be elated when she reads the Summer millinery news. There are shapes for, and becoming to, every type of face. On this page today you will see that the leading Paris authorities offer you a choice that is wide and varied. You may let concealing shadows play over your face or the sun's rays beat upon your forehead, as you desire.

The off-the-face movement is yielding to sheltering brims. We will wear large hats this Summer. There are encircling brims, one-sided brims, and brims that stick out in the front and turn up at the back.

Patent leather, or straw with a patent leather finish, is very popular for early Summer. As the days grow longer organdies, panamas and crepes will come into vogue. And, of course, for sports wear the felt hat continues to lead in popularity.

Ribbon trimmings are fresh. The variety of the new ribbons literally makes the head reel under them. Quaint Pompadour designs, ruffled, shirred and picoted ribbons of all sorts are in fashion.

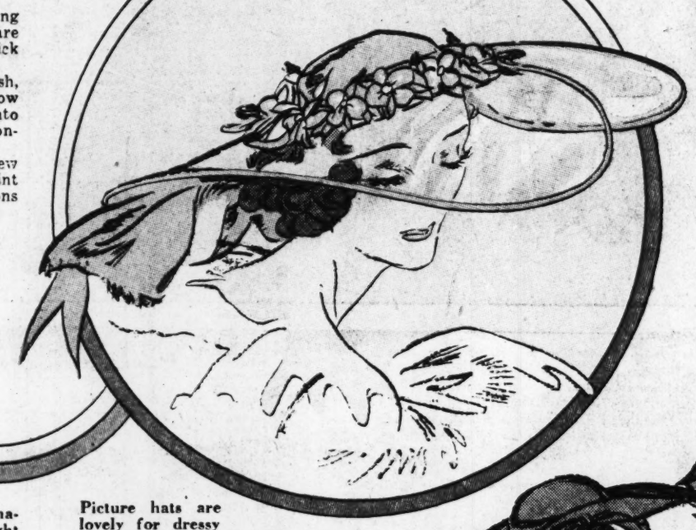

LEWIS

MARIA GUY

Dull black straw makes this small hat with narrow brim and shallow, shaped crown. The bright green grosgrain ribbon is embroidered with black, yellow and red flowers. A sailor, a la Maria Guy (sketched at right) is of patent leather. Its brim has an upward swoop while the crown is very flat. A perfect model for sports wear.

Picture hats are lovely for dressy Summer occasions. This one of pale green organdie is trimmed with a chartreuse ribbon bow and a wreath of apple blossoms. The low, swooping crown juts out considerably in back and front and is cut in two pieces. The crown is almost invisible

MAINBOCHER

Black in combination with a bright color is one of the season's newest fashion notes. At the left and in the sketch below you see two suggestions of Mainbocher's smart ensemble. The black crepe frock has printed silk sleeves and color—red on white. The very full coat, with the sleeves cut in one, is three-quarter length. The amusing little hat, like a flower upside down, is fashioned of thin black felt, faced with taffeta.

This tobacco brown celophane suit with its bronze buttons and three-quarter sleeves makes a cool and practical costume for a Summer day. The scarf and accompanying blouse are of transparent linen striped in blue, henna and yellow. Completing this costume is Maria Guy's wide-brimmed linen hat.

PATOU

A smart cocktail hour frock of satin in black and cerise centers its interest at the back. The bodice is slit just above the black belt. The sleeves are full to the elbow, where the long black cuffs begin.

CHANEL

WORTH

Gay prints brighten the Summer horizon. This multicolored flowered Crepe de chine afternoon dress, shown in the sketch above, has full sleeves which are cuffed at the elbow. The skirt is flared at one side and is balanced on the other with a group of kick pleats. The costume is complete with a large square white straw hat.

WORTH

Check this checked model for Summer afternoons. Of red Crepe de chine, it is criss-crossed in pale grey and finished at the round neckline with a red bow. It has a short cape, patch pockets and a full skirt.

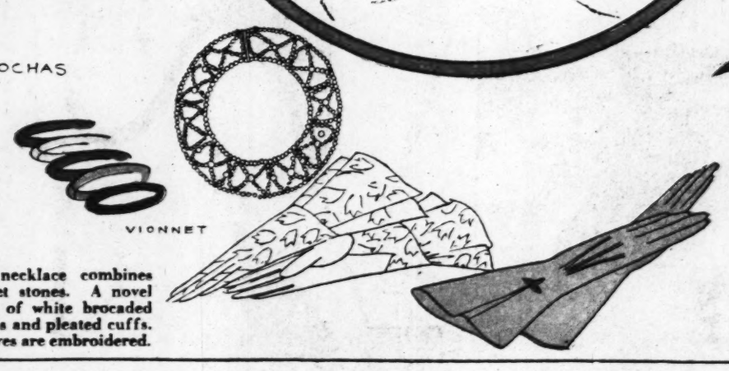

VIDA MOORE

Vida Moore creates two smart Summer shoe styles. The white kid model below is trimmed with a novel insert of blue kid. Grey suede and patent leather combine to make the other opera pump.

MARCEL ROCHAS

Beige felt makes the cunning beret, sketched at the right, trimmed with a long red quill that is held in place by three small pieces of wood in red and black. Quills are the rage and the originality of this one is especially smart.

VIONNET

Summer accessories that complete the costume, are shown at the right. Vionnet shows some lovely little colored crystal bracelets that are especially nice with Summer evening frocks.

The flat choker necklace combines pearls with tiny jet stones. A novel glove by Worth is of white brocaded satin with kid palms and pleated cuffs. The red suede gloves are embroidered.

PATOU

Brims are sensational in some of the new Summer hats. Consider this unusual model by Patou. Of blue panama, it is finished with a dotted white grosgrain band.

BEFORE the days of hard-surfaced roads and windshields, the costume for automobiling was a problem. Goggles, veils and dusters were standard equipment for touring. This young lady has found a triumphant solution in a headdress which is supplied with its own windshield. (Harper & Brothers)

THE FIRST GASOLINE-DRIVEN AUTOMOBILES were not American, but European. This picture shows Mr. Elwood Haynes in one of the first American cars. On July 4, 1894, the car ran successfully at a rate of eight miles an hour. The trial was at Kokomo, Ind. (Harper & Brothers)

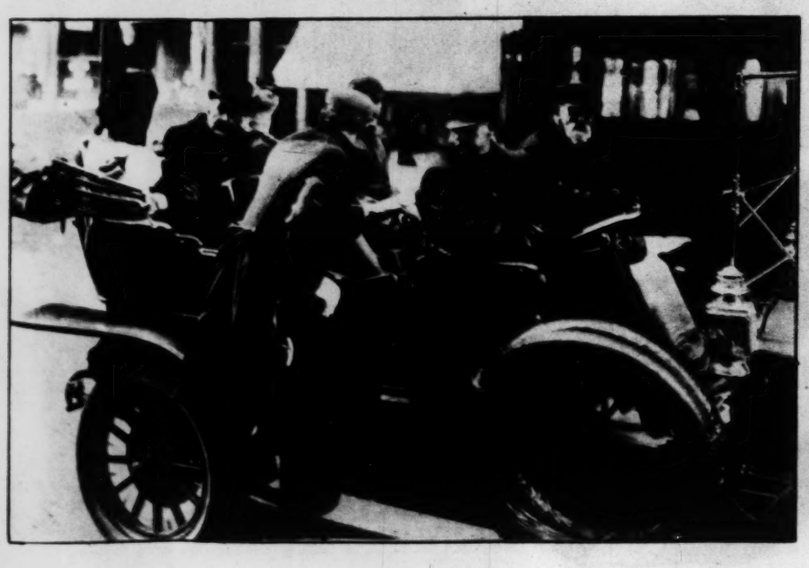

THE VANDERBILT CUP RACE on Long Island, which was first run in 1904, was an exciting annual feature of that time. From this picture of a dangerous corner during the races one might imagine that it was dangerous for the spectators as well as for the competitors; and so it often was. (Harper & Brothers)

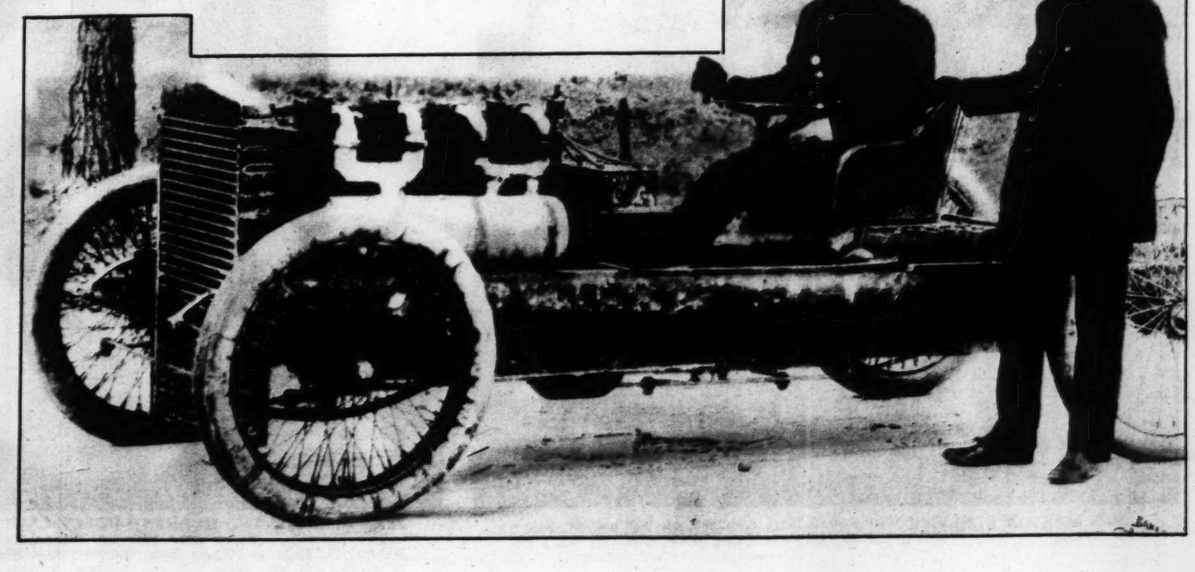

BY 1905 THE AUTOMOBILE WAS WELL ALONG in its evolution from the buggy, but it was still a plaything for the wealthy. Robert W. Goelet is at the wheel of his pleasure car at Newport: a car with right-hand drive, the sort of horn that really said "honk-honk," tool-boxes on the running board, gas lights and no windshield. (Harper & Brothers)

HERE ARE THE CONTESTANTS lined up for an early automobile race. Racing was a gentlemen's sport; at the left is John Jacob Astor, and next to him the Baron de Morognes. (Harper & Brothers).

(Left)
THIS PICTURE was taken over 25 years ago, in the days of right-hand-drive cars with acetylene lamps. Yet even then John D. Rockefeller (in the rear seat) looked like an old man. He retired on account of ill health in 1896. (Harper & Brothers)

(Right)
HENRY FORD had made his first brief ride in a noisy car of his own construction on a night in April, 1893, just as the panic of 1893 was shaking the country. At the turn of the century he was building racing cars and is shown standing by one of his four-cylinder racers, with Barney Oldfield at the tiller (the steering wheel was yet to come). (Harper & Brothers)

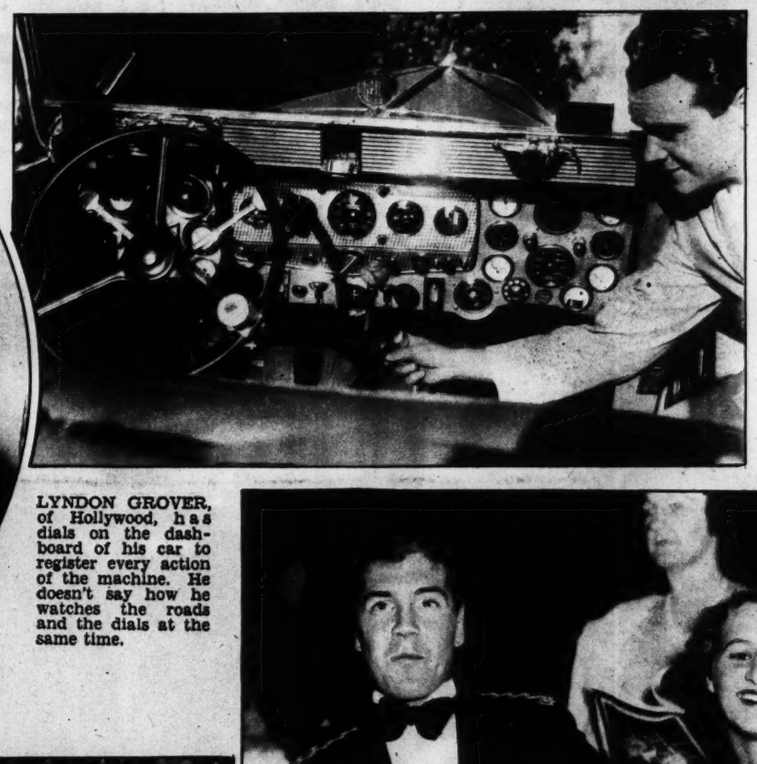

PLAZA'S "COCKTAIL ROOM" AND PERSIAN MURALS LATEST NEW YORK SENSATION—The new cocktail and dance room of the Hotel Plaza, New York. Left, the $100,000 room, showing murals. Right, Miss Lillian Gaertner Palmedo at work on the murals which dominate the decorative scheme of the room. These colors and designs have inspired the new Persian styles of the fashionable shops of New York, and the "Persian turban" is the latest thing in women's hats.

WINNERS of the annual field day events at North Avenue Presbyterian school receiving the awards from Miss Josephine Walker, physical director of the school. They are Betty Hoyt, Charlotte Galbraith, May Weltner and Helen Hixon. (George Cornett)

MISS ADELAIDE HOWELL, former Atlanta debutante, who has appeared recently on several programs over national radio networks. Critics say her voice is one of the most distinctive on the air.

MRS. ROBERT BANKS ANDERSON, who before her recent marriage was Miss Mariam Mixson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Joyce Ferdinand Mixson, of Valdosta. (Blackburn)

LYNDON GROVER, of Hollywood, has dials on the dashboard of his car to register every action of the machine. He doesn't say how he watches the roads and the dials at the same time.

"GIRL FRIENDS" OF DILLINGER GANG—These three women, said to be companions of the Dillinger gang, were arrested recently by federal agents. They refused to identify themselves.

"MOST BEAUTIFUL DEB" TO WED COUSIN—Lieutenant David Wagstaff Jr., of New York, and his cousin, Beatrice Cutting Wagstaff, are engaged to be married. The marriage of the first cousins will keep the Wagstaff millions in the family.

BRIDES — THEN AND NOW — The bridal gown on the left was the last word in style in 1882; the one on the right is an up-to-the-minute 1934 fashion. Both were on display at a recent society fashion show in New York.

James T. McConnell, McConnell's "HOM-OND" Food Store, 1178 West Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga.

The opening of "HOM-OND" Food Stores and "M" System Stores are handled by expert merchandisers who are thoroughly seasoned by long experience in the work.

Manufacturers of nationally known and advertised brands of foods cooperate on these openings by supplying samples, souvenirs, etc., for free distribution, also demonstrators. Walter D. Couch, 51 Alabama Street, S. W., Atlanta, Ga., will be glad to supply details to those interested in operating food stores.

TRADE MARK REG. U.S. PAT. OF.

Read on pages 4 and 5 of today's Constitution Magazine the real inside story of Johnny Woods, world-famous two-year-old twin who today is the most celebrated baby in the civilized world, being "conditioned" by a group of New York scientists, while his twin brother is receiving no training at all. Which of the two boys is really better equipped for purposes of daily human life---Johnny or Jimmy---which is the baby of the future? Are the scientists right or wrong?

DICK TRACY

by CHESTER GOULD

J. SCOTLAND BUMPSTED- SECRET OPERATIVE, EH?

YOU SEE, CHIEF-SPALDONI'S NAME WASN'T REALLY SPALDONI AT ALL. THAT WAS JUST AN ALIAS.

YES, CHIEF BRANDON, THE MAN YOU KNEW AS "SPALDONI" WAS IN FACT, GEORGE BUMPSTED, ONE OF TWO SONS BORN TO ME OVER THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO IN DEAR OLD LONDON. WHEN HE FELL INTO CRIMINAL WAYS, HE TOOK THE NAME OF "SPALDONI"- AND WAS NEVER KNOWN OTHERWISE.

HIS FATHER DIED WHEN GEORGE WAS TWELVE YEARS OLD AND THE BOY RAN AWAY FROM HOME LEAVING HIS BROTHER AND ME ALONE. WE ONLY SAW HIM AT INTERVALS DURING ALL THESE YEARS.

I NEVER GAVE UP HOPE HOWEVER OF WINNING HIM BACK TO LAWFUL WAYS, AND I CAME TO THIS COUNTRY IN NINETEEN-TWENTY WITH THAT PURPOSE. MY OTHER SON HAS KEPT ME SUPPLIED WITH FUNDS.

THEN YOU HAVE ANOTHER SON. LIVING?

OH, INDEED! IN FACT, SINCE HIS BROTHER'S DEATH HE HAS DECIDED TO COME TO THIS COUNTRY AND IS ON HIS WAY HERE NOW FROM LONDON.

WHAT IS HIS. . . PROFESSION, MAY I ASK, MRS. BUMPSTED?

THAT'S WHAT I WANTED TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT, CHIEF BRANDON. YOU SEE HE, LIKE YOUR MR. TRACY, IS ALSO A GREAT DETECTIVE.

A DETECTIVE?

MERCY ME, YES! DON'T TELL ME YOU HAVE NEVER HEARD OF J. SCOTLAND BUMPSTED OF THE EUROPEAN SECRET POLICE?

H'M- I'M SORRY TO SAY I NEVER HEARD OF HIM. BUT I WILL SAY YOU WERE A VERY VERSATILE WOMAN, MRS. BUMPSTED- RAISING A NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL AND A FAMOUS DETECTIVE UNDER THE SAME ROOF.

IT IS ODD..BUT SCOTLAND "SCOTTY", WE ALWAYS CALLED HIM — IS A DEAR.

HE HAS SUCH A FINE AIR ABOUT HIM...SMART TOO, HE IS! WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE HIS PICTURE?

BY ALL MEANS, MRS. BUMPSTED.

PSS-T.. THE OLD LADY'S ON THE LEVEL, CHIEF.. SO TRY TO KEEP A STRAIGHT FACE.

THAT NAME- J. SCOTLAND BUMPSTED.. .IT'S KILLING ME!

HERE IT IS.

"To Mummy with love Scotty"

I HAVE A RADIO-GRAM SAYING HE'LL ARRIVE HERE WEDNES-DAY, AND I WOULD SO LIKE FOR YOU TO GIVE HIM A JOB... PROMISE ME YOU WILL.

ER.. UM-UM-- WE'LL SEE MRS. BUMPSTED- ..WE'LL SEE..

J. SCOTLAND BUMPSTED, EUROPEAN SECRET OPERATIVE. AH, IS TRACY TO HAVE SOME COMPETITION...?

THE TRIAL OF TARZAN

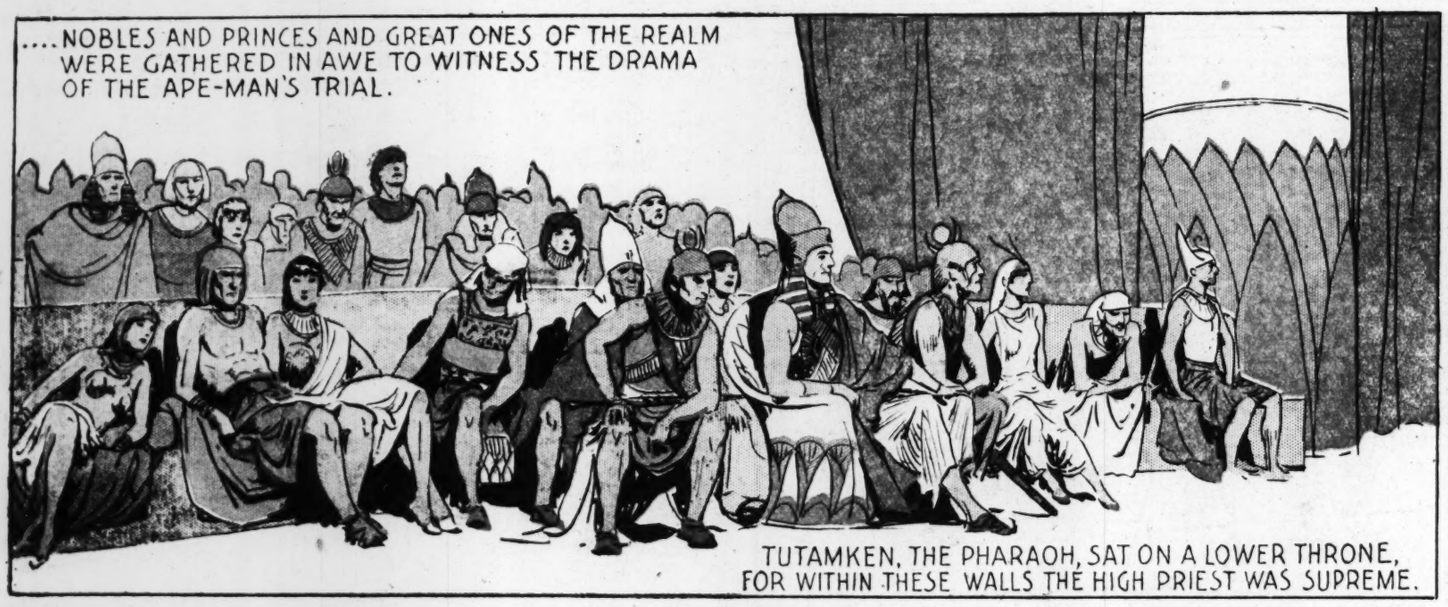

WITHOUT FEAR TARZAN AWAITED TRIAL FOR THE MURDER OF THE HIGH PRIEST'S MEN, FOR HE BELIEVED HIS INNOCENCE WAS HIS SHIELD.

BUT HAITHOREB, THE WICKED HIGH PRIEST, SAID TO THE TEMPLE JUDGES IN SECRET CONCLAVE: "TARZAN MUST BE DESTROYED!"

THEN HAITHOREB CONDUCTED HIS COURT OF PRIESTS SOLEMNLY TO THEIR DAIS IN THE HALL OF JUDGMENT, WHERE.....

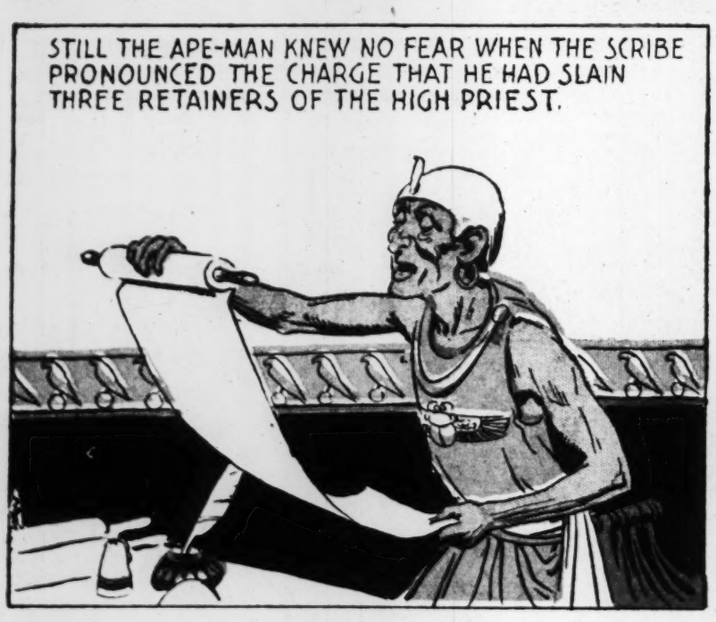

....NOBLES AND PRINCES AND GREAT ONES OF THE REALM WERE GATHERED IN AWE TO WITNESS THE DRAMA OF THE APE-MAN'S TRIAL.

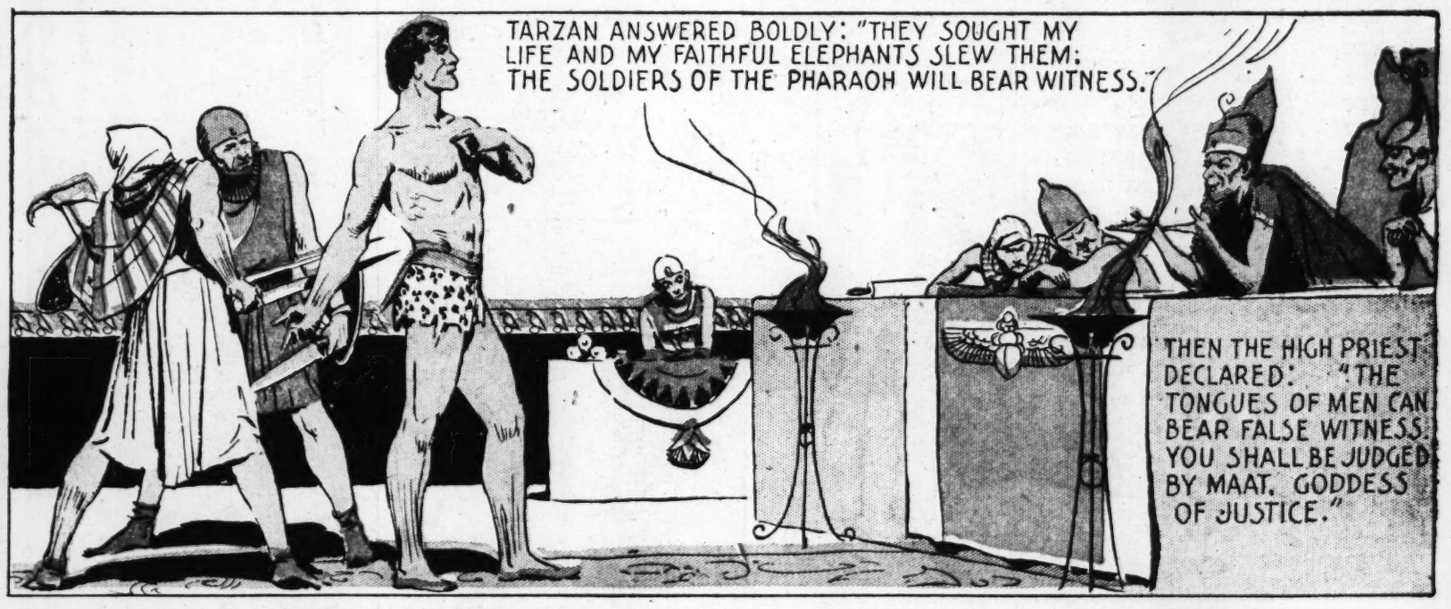

TUTAMKEN, THE PHARAOH, SAT ON A LOWER THRONE, FOR WITHIN THESE WALLS THE HIGH PRIEST WAS SUPREME.

ALL WAS IN READINESS. THE GREAT GONG OF THE TEMPLE BOOMED, AND TARZAN WAS LED FORTH TO JUDGMENT!

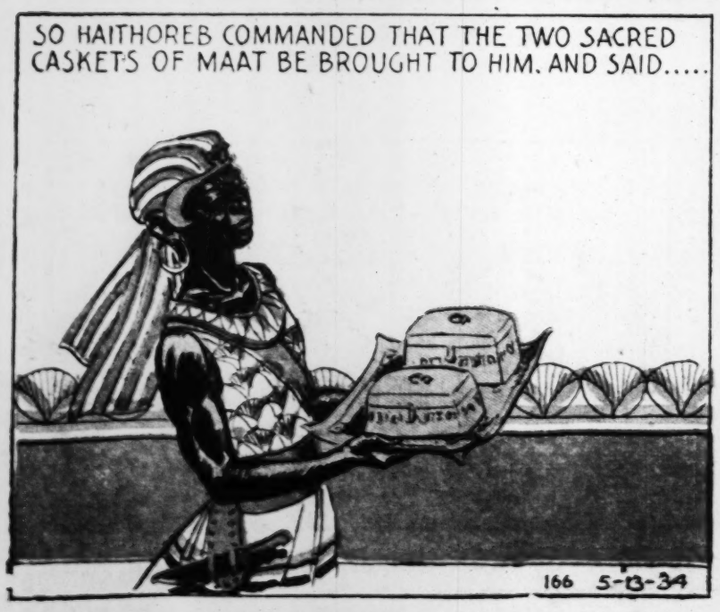

STILL THE APE-MAN KNEW NO FEAR WHEN THE SCRIBE PRONOUNCED THE CHARGE THAT HE HAD SLAIN THREE RETAINERS OF THE HIGH PRIEST.

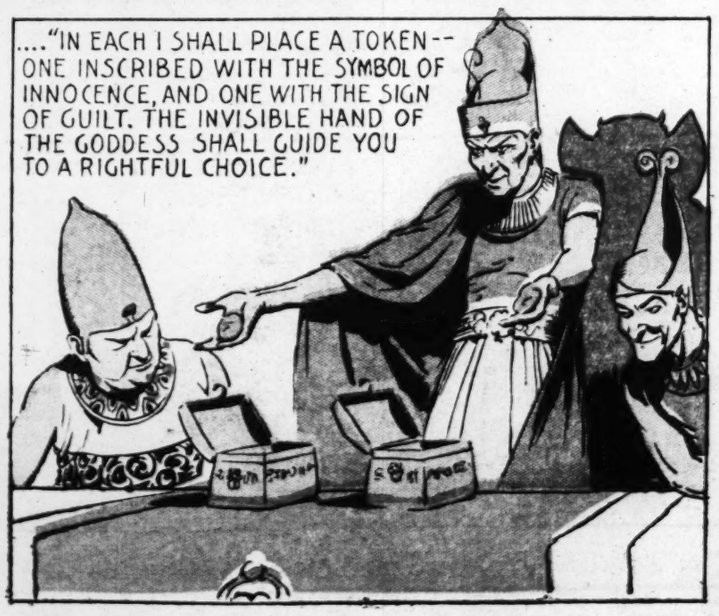

TARZAN ANSWERED BOLDLY: "THEY SOUGHT MY LIFE AND MY FAITHFUL ELEPHANTS SLEW THEM: THE SOLDIERS OF THE PHARAOH WILL BEAR WITNESS."

THEN THE HIGH PRIEST DECLARED: "THE TONGUES OF MEN CAN BEAR FALSE WITNESS. YOU SHALL BE JUDGED BY MAAT, GODDESS OF JUSTICE."

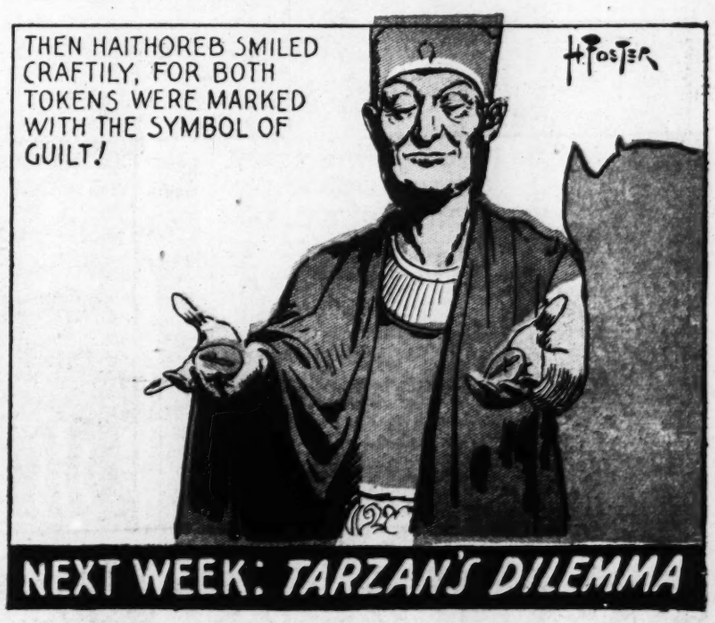

SO HAITHOREB COMMANDED THAT THE TWO SACRED CASKETS OF MAAT BE BROUGHT TO HIM. AND SAID.....

166 5-13-34

....."IN EACH I SHALL PLACE A TOKEN--ONE INSCRIBED WITH THE SYMBOL OF INNOCENCE, AND ONE WITH THE SIGN OF GUILT. THE INVISIBLE HAND OF THE GODDESS SHALL GUIDE YOU TO A RIGHTFUL CHOICE."

THEN HAITHOREB SMILED CRAFTILY, FOR BOTH TOKENS WERE MARKED WITH THE SYMBOL OF GUILT!
